THERE is a big Bull Moose head hanging in the directors' room of the First National at Minneapolis, but we understand that Brother Orde crosses his fingers as he passes it.

THE publication of the Pujo congressional committee's report throughout the country, on the alleged money trust, together with its drastic recommendations, had no influence as an additional depressing factor on the stock market or upon business. This was because both the character of the report, and the recommendations suggested for legislation on this subject, proved to be exactly what banking circles had been expecting for the last several months.

NO finer nor more deserved tribute ever was paid by the U. S. senate than the voting of a position with salary attached for the retiring, honest senator from Illinois, Shelby M. Cullom.

NOT long since Senator Cullom refused a purse raised for him in this state, not by "the interests," but by the citizens. He is to be superintendent of construction of the Abraham Lincoln memorial at $5,000 per year. Here's hoping he may be spared to see it completed.

"THE poetic impulse, in perception, in conversation, and in literature," writes W. O. Jones, "is one and the same," and we agree with him.

HAVE you noticed the William R. Compton Company bond list lately? Really it is important. Selections are good and the rate better than average.

F. H. COLBURN says nothing is needed from bankers in California, which has a very active agricultural department in the state university and many experimental farms. He says the California farmer is in a class by himself, anyhow.

W. C. MACFADDEN again calls attention to the fact that North Dakota is the real pioneer and wears medals won at the Chapman conference for things done "way back" before B. F. Harris had initiated the "great master" and shied his castor into the agricultural ring.

ARKANSAS has a brand new banking law (first on record) and now we demand that George Rogers hereafter conduct his institution as a bank. It has been making too much noise under a sawmill charter.

ONE of the most pleased men in Arkansas at the passage of the new banking law is R. D. Duncan, vice-president and cashier of the State National at Little Rock. He was a tireless worker for the new order of things.

THE Arkansas Bankers Association has been working strenuously for eight years to get a banking law on the statute books.

THE secretary makes the further announcement that J. A. S. Pollard, of Fort Madison, Ia., the eloquent banker-orator, has accepted the invitation to address the Bellingham convention, so all that attend are sure of a rare treat.—P. C. Kauffman.

THE convention at Bellingham has been fixed for August 7th, 8th and 9th, and Mr. Kauffmann is gleeful in announcing an address by W. G. Edens of Chicago on that occasion.

THE city of Bellingham is one of the largest and most prosperous cities in the Pacific, northwestern portion of the state, upon beautiful Bellingham Bay, an arm of Puget Sound. The time of the convention is fixed at the height of the run of the salmon season, which will prove a most interesting and wonderful sight to visitors, who will have an opportunity not only of visiting the great salmon canning factories, but also to see the fish traps, where frequently from 50,000 to 100,000 salmon are impounded at a single lifting.

OPINION is that Kauffman has impounded two of the very best convention cards at one lift, more attractive than the salmon "lift."

HAVE you seen the new nickel? A wonder!

Arkansas Has a New Banking Law at Last

Eight years of effort by the Arkansas Bankers Association crowned by success. Privates to go under supervision. Powers of superintendent of banking very complete. Guaranty feature defeated

Little Rock, March 5th.—Arkansas, after an eight years' perpetual struggle by the Arkansas Bankers Association, finally has adopted a brand new banking law of the strictly modern type. Private banking will be put under complete supervision and state banks will operate under liberal charters in the future rather than under charters issued for other purposes as heretofore. The Arkansas Bankers Association has had committees constantly at work. One of the extremely active men is R. D. Duncan, vice-president and cashier of the State National at Little Rock. He has done everything that a man could do to secure a wise and beneficent law disentangled from guaranty of deposits and other fads, but which may come later. County and municipal securities issued in this state which heretofore have found but little market outside of the state promptly will go on a new basis as to desirability when the banks of the state all are under supervision and working under known capital and responsibility. Heretofore there has been no method by which the investor outside of the state could determine either the validity of the bond or mortgage issued in this state or the responsibility of a bank to which he had been referred. These conditions have been a great drawback to the state and finally they have been eliminated.

Two bills have been before the legislature exactly similar except that one of them provided for guaranty of deposits. That bill was defeated, largely owing to the opposition of reputable bankers throughout the state. The new act is entitled "An Act for the Organization and Control of Banks, Trust Companies and Savings Banks." First of all it creates a state bank department and makes provision for suitable offices at the state capital, and provides that an appointee shall have had at least five years experience as a practical banker or as a bank examiner under the comptroller of the currency at Washington. The governor appoints subject to the confirmation of the senate. The new department will acquire all of the papers, books, records, charters, articles of partnership, articles of agreement and other subterfuges under which banking has been conducted in this state heretofore. Any bank, trust company or savings bank that shall fail to make report and declare its purpose to continue business shall not be allowed to do business in this state. Banks, partnerships and individuals who heretofore have paid no fees will hereafter pay the same fees as are provided for incorporated banks. It is provided in the new law that neither the commissioner nor any employee of his department shall be directly or indirectly interested as a stockholder or otherwise in any bank doing business in the state. All employees shall be under bond. The provisions for conducting of office made in the new bill are practically those which are standard in most of the states which have an up-to-date banking law. The commissioner is instructed to make an annual report to the governor giving the work of his department in detail. Section 10 of the act provides:

That any individual, firm or corporation holding himself or itself out to the public as a bank or banker, trust company or savings bank, which solicits or receives deposits subject to check or at interest, by sign, advertisement, or otherwise, shall be subject to the provisions of this Act, and whenever in this Act shall be used the word "bank," it shall be understood to apply alike to any incorporated bank, trust company, savings bank, copartnership or individuals transacting a banking business.

At least three out of the first five incorporators of any bank in the state must be bona fide residents and a certificate must be furnished showing that the amount of capital stock authorized actually has been paid in. The commissioner is authorized to inquire into the character and general fitness of the persons named as stockholders and of their standing in the community in which the proposed institution is to be located. Unless the commissioner is satisfied on these points, he will not issue a certificate of incorporation. No other business than that of organizing shall be done by any proposed bank until authorized by the commissioner. Practically the same requirements apply when application is made by an individual or firm to conduct any kind of a private bank. Sections 15 and 16 cover the question of private bank regulation very completely. They read as follows:

Sec. 15. Any individual or firm doing business as a private bank shall designate a name for such bank, which shall show that it is not incorporated and all property, real or personal, owned by such bank, shall be held in the name of the bank, and not in the name of the individuals of the firm; all assets of any private bank shall be exempt from attachment or execution by any creditor of such individual or firm until all liabilities of such bank shall have been paid in full. No private banker shall use any of the funds of his bank for private business, and the note of the owner or owners of any private bank shall not be considered or accepted as a part of its assets. In case of the death of an individual banker, his widow shall not be endowed of any of the property of the bank, except such as remains after the payment of all depositors and other creditors.

Sec. 16. No corporation, firm, or individual, shall be allowed to do a banking business of any kind, unless it, they, he, or she, shall pay to the bank commissioner a fee of one-fifth of one per cent on the authorized capital stock. Fees at the same rate shall be charged for an increase of capital stock. For each amendment or supplement to the articles of agreement except for an increase of capital stock, a fee of $10.00 shall be charged.

Ten thousand dollars is the least capital recognized in the new act and it is graduated upon population up to $50,000 for cities of 10,000 or over. The stockholders, generally speaking, and the directors have about the same standard powers that they have in other states under modern banking acts. Under section 20 the powers conferred covering the receiving of money on deposits, paying interest, buying or selling exchange or securities are about the same as those recognized as standard in other states. Bank stocks are recognized as personal property under the law and will be transferable only on the books of the corporation. Shares may be pledged to third parties for loans or debts provided a record of the pledge is entered on the books of the bank. Any bank shall at all times have a lien upon all the stocks of its stockholders, if incorporated, or upon the partnership property of its members, if a private bank, for all debts due them from such bank. Such liens, in case of incorporated banks, must not be waived in favor of third parties, except in writing from one of the executive officers. Section 24 provides penalties for making false statements, the making of such being deemed a felony, and conviction will be followed by imprisonment in the penitentiary, the least sentence being for three years. A fifteen per cent reserve is provided for, part of which may be kept in reserve banks approved by the commissioner. Banks wishing to receive reserve accounts with other banks are required to furnish the commissioner with specific statements showing the amount of cash reserve carried and the general condition of the bank. Such banks will make five statements per year and must not allow their reserve to drop below the twenty per cent limit. Any violation of these provisions calls upon the commissioner to immediately withdraw all reserve funds from such bank. National banks doing a reserve business in Arkansas will be obliged to furnish similar statements to the superintendent of banking to cover reserves of state institutions.

Whenever the reserve of any bank shall fall below fifteen per cent of its deposits, it shall cease to incur further liability by the making of loans or discounts, nor shall it make any dividend of its profits until the reserve shall have been restored. There are provisions in the law forbidding the payment of dividends when the surplus has been depleted and no bank under the state law shall employ its moneys directly or indirectly in trade or commerce by buying and selling goods, chattels, wares and merchandise, nor shall it be a purchaser or holder of its own capital stock. This provision is intended to prevent private bankers from engaging in business on the funds of their depositors. Any sort of property which falls in possession of the bank as collateral may, of course, be sold for purpose of realization. Stockholders are not permitted to borrow on their stock as collateral and it "shall be a crime" for any president, director, manager or cashier or employee of any bank, or member of any firm, to accept deposits knowing that the bank is insolvent. Conviction on this provision is declared a felony and will be punished by a penitentiary sentence of not less than one year. Loans are limited to thirty per cent of the capital stock to any individual or firm. There are certain exceptions in the matter of commercial paper which is purchased and not considered to be a loan. Officers of the bank are made personally liable for any overdrafts permitted unless relieved of such responsibility by the entire board of directors. No officer of the bank is empowered to endorse, sell, pledge or hypothecate any collateral pledge with the bank without similar authority. Double liability of stockholders is provided for and the commissioner may call any bank in the state, not national, at a date convenient to himself. Punishment is provided for examiners who give out any information in advance as to the time of the call for a statement. The reports required to be made to the superintendent of banking are very nearly similar to those required of the national bank examiners. Refusal to make such report for ten days is made legal evidence of insolvency with a provision that the commissioner of banking may take charge of the business. Two or more of the board of directors must be present when the examiner is at work in the bank. All of the safeguard provisions against making of false reports by examiners are included in the new act and the commissioner is granted authority to take charge of insolvent banks and thus put a stop to attachment proceedings of all kinds until it is liquidated or restored to its solvency. A complete schedule of insolvent acts is included in the bill and any one of these conditions shall work the suspension of further banking authority until the cause shall have been eliminated, and full authority restored by the commissioner. Full directions are included for the taking possession of a bank by the commissioner with a description of what he may do under the law to realize upon the assets of the bank or to restore it to solvency.

The members of the Arkansas Bankers Association are being congratulated by business men from all over the state on the adoption of such a strictly modern banking law. It is felt generally that the new act will put Arkansas in a much better financial condition before the investing public and before the banking authorities of other states. It has been a long, hard fight opposed chiefly by private banks, but the success is unqualified.

MONEY SITUATION

The consensus of opinion among leading Chicago bankers is that although there has been no material improvement in the money situation and surplus reserves of New York banks are abnormally low, this is not necessarily indicative of a serious stringency later on in the year.

B. C. Sammons, vice-president of the Corn Exchange National, said:

"A very large part of last year's big corn and oats crop still has to come to market. Here in Illinois it is estimated that the government report of March 1st farm reserves will show 60 per cent of the corn crop still in farmers' hands. Corn cribs everywhere are full. When this grain moves to market it will release a great deal of money, which will find its way to the reserve centers. The demand for money in the United States is affected by the tight money conditions in Europe, but these conditions will be relieved probably as soon as the Balkan war is over."

AGRICULTURAL CO-OPERATIVE BANK

A bill has been introduced in the New York legislature amending the banking law providing for the establishment of agricultural co-operative banks. Seven or more persons may incorporate such a bank with the consent of the superintendent of banks, who may grant his consent when he is satisfied that the proposed field of operation is favorable to success of the undertaking and that the standing of the parties gives assurance of proper administration of the corporation's affairs. There is to be a board of directors of not less than five members, a credit committee of not less than three members and a supervisory committee of three members. No director may be a member of either committee, and no member of one committee may be a member of the other. The maximum stock which may be held by any one member is $15,000 par value.

RESERVE CITY BANKERS TO MEET IN ST. LOUIS

E. B. Clare-Avery, secretary of the Association of Reserve City Bankers, is making a campaign to increase the membership of the organization. The next meeting will be held in St. Louis April 26th. The secretary says that the directors are most anxious to present at that time a membership list covering the entire country. The co-operation of reserve city bankers is asked in the effort to attain that end.

RETURNS FROM PANAMA

L. A. Goddard, president of the State Bank of Chicago, returned on Monday of this week from a trip to Panama and Cuba. Mr. Goddard said:

"I was impressed mightily, of course, by the Panama project, but I doubt if they will be ready to turn the water through there inside of twelve months, as many of them hope. I was in Cuba several days, and judging from what I saw I believe there is a large commercial future for the island. Their political tangles are being settled and there is room for a vast amount of business."

What Is the Matter With America?

George Woodruff of Illinois in an able address before the Boston Chamber of Commerce at its New England Agricultural Dinner

Boston, March 7th.—For a number of years a spirit of unrest and discontent has pervaded the United States. This feeling of dissatisfaction has been brought about by what is considered by the masses of the people to be an unfair manner of distributing wealth or in other words by the increasing cost of living. As a matter of fact, this so-called unfair distribution of wealth has been going on for many years and would long ago have called forth a protest from the people had it not been that America was until recently what may be termed a pioneer nation. Free farms were to be had, mines were being discovered constantly, new towns were being built, and the great pioneer industries were being developed. To-day all of this is changing and from now on the people must engage themselves more and more in scientific and intensive development of the resources which already have been pioneered. This transition from a pioneer period into an intensive development period has taken away many of the abnormal opportunities of the past and as a result the man who begins to feel the squeeze of the higher cost of living no longer has an opportunity to make a change and obtain a free farm or unusual wages as in the past but is compelled to stay where he is and meet the situation squarely. The result is discontent and social unrest. The remedy is the correction of those tendencies that are causing the trouble.

The first great cause for the increasing cost of living is the increasing gold supply. It is recognized generally that as the supply of gold increases the value of gold necessarily must decrease but as gold is the standard of value its depreciation is displayed in the increased price of the things which gold will buy. As the value in gold of all forms of property increases, it becomes necessary that wages also be increased or the wage earner will be at an immediate disadvantage. There recently has been a proposal made that the nations of the world get together on a plan for an "unshrinkable dollar" and by gradually increasing the amount of gold which the standard coins represent do away with the constant depreciation of the purchasing power of these coins and consequently end the constant appreciation of the price of the things which the coins will buy. An arrangement of this sort might some day in the distant future be worked out as a relief from the effects of the increasing gold supply but for the present at least it cannot be considered as one of the possible remedies for our unrest in America. At the present time the increasing tendency of the price of all things that can be purchased with gold must be recognized and offset by the laborer with a demand for higher wages. Proposed methods for bringing about the remedy for this first cause of the increasing cost of living are now being generally discussed by everybody and opinions differ radically. These methods may be either forceful as typified by the past policies of labor organizations under which strikes have brought about the necessary increases in wages, or they may be peaceful as illustrated by the comparatively new program of legislative action under which old age pensions, industrial insurance acts, minimum wage laws, and conciliation boards have been found to lead toward the improved conditions to which the laboring man unquestionably is entitled.

The second great cause for the increasing cost of living may be stated as the breaking down of competition and we find the remedies to be the regulation of trusts and the control of middlemen. Here again public opinion differs as to the correct method of applying the remedies. In the case of the trusts, it is proposed on the one hand to dissolve them and re-establish competition and on the other to permit of their organization as in line with the modern economic tendency of the world but to put them under government control. One policy or the other eventually must be found to be the correct one and in the meantime it is proposed to revise the tariff and the patent laws and also to change a considerable number of other laws affecting production, but just how much revision should be made or just how great the changes should be is a matter that still is open to the discussion of the American people. In connection with the combinations of middlemen which in many cases have done away with formerly existing competition there are again two conflicting theories, one being that all middlemen's associations should be strictly supervised, all price agreements abolished and competition restored and the other theory being that present tendencies with the resulting efficiency should be allowed to develop but that the people themselves should furnish competition through co-operation. It is contended that co-operatively owned institutions would not put their privately owned competitors out of business but that they undoubtedly would regulate prices and conditions of operation.

The third great cause of the increasing cost of living is the declining per capita production from the soil. While the production from the soil in the United States has increased, nevertheless the percentage of increase has not been so great as the percentage of increase in population. One remedy for this condition might perhaps be a decline in the percentage of increase in population, and in America we already have heard much of race suicide. The history of many nations shows that increased cost of living usually is accompanied by a decreased birth rate. However, the real remedies will be found in increased available acreage and increased production per acre. The methods by which available acreage is to be increased are through reclamation, including our great irrigation projects and our proposed national drainage and waterway policies, and conservation, including our present national and state activities looking toward the preservation of the usefulness of vast stretches of our territory. The methods by which production is to be increased are found

Included in the bond issues were $500,000 for the extension of the municipal electric plant and ornamental lights in the down-town district; $250,000 park improvement bonds to be used in the construction of a breakwater off Edgewater Park and the connecting of Woodland Hills and Garfield Parks by boulevard; $75,000 market house bonds; $50,000 garbage disposal bonds; $200,000 city hospital bonds; $65,000 grade crossing bonds.

Bank President Retires

J. M. Hayner, one of the oldest presidents of a national bank in Ohio, has resigned as the head of the Lebanon National of Lebanon, and the presidency has been filled by the election of Vice-president P. V. Bone. L. K. Langdon was elected to fill the vacancy on the board of directors.

Swanton Banks Consolidate

The Farmers and Merchants Deposit Company and the Bank of Swanton, two of the soundest and most conservative banks in northwestern Ohio, both located at Swanton, have been consolidated. No details have been given out and it is not known who the officers of the newly consolidated concern will be. George R. Ackerman has been cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Deposit and M. J. Linehan, cashier of the Bank of Swanton. The Farmers and Merchants is a state bank organized in 1901 with a capital of $25,000, and on February 4th had about $190,000 in deposits. The Bank of Swanton is a private bank owned by Dr. A. B. Lathrop and A. A. Lathrop, having deposits of about $130,000.

Bank Officials Changed

Dr. O. O. McKee, for the last ten years president of the Citizens National of Caldwell, has sold his interest. David Quick has been elected to succeed Dr. McKee as director and V. E. Harkins, who had been cashier of the bank since its organization, was elected president.

New York Banker Dead

Henry C. Howard, president of the Bank of Niagara, Niagara Falls, and a director of the Bank of Buffalo, died at his country home near Youngstown last week of pneumonia. Mr. Howard was a native of Buffalo. He was interested in the organization of Buffalo banking institutions and in 1866 aided in organizing the Bank of Suspension Bridge. In 1882 he, with others, incorporated the Bank of Niagara, of which he was made president.

Cincinnati News

The Cincinnati Chapter of the American Institute of Banking has decided to enter the lists for the battle of the 1914 convention of the organization. The Cincinnati boys will appoint a committee to confer with the Chamber of Commerce and the Business Men's Club and also get the mayor and the city officials enlisted in a movement to have the junior bankers of the country visit Cincinnati.

The Providence Savings and Trust Company of Cincinnati has been awarded the $15,000 emergency bridge bonds of Dayton on its bid of $15,169.50.

Acting under the advice of Attorney-General Hogan, the state tax commissioner has remitted to the Second National Bank of Cincinnati one-half of its taxes for 1911, which were due June, 1912, but which have not been paid. It was held by the attorney-general that since false returns had been made by former bank officials, the innocent stockholders should not be compelled to suffer.

Kentucky Bank Incorporates

The Phoenix and Third Trust Company of Lexington, Ky., capitalized at $150,000, has filed articles of incorporation with the secretary of state. The incorporators are W. A. McDowell, J. W. Rodes, Jacob Speyer, J. L. Watkins, John Skain, Younger Alexander, R. C. Estill, J. M. Kelly, Bailey D. Berry, E. M. Drake, J. F. Lynch, R. H. Smith, Matthew Walton, L. B. Shouse and G. D. Wilson.

ACT OF A COURAGEOUS BANK

Telegraphic dispatches from Cairo, Ill., recounting the civic battle which has been going on in that city for some time over the adoption of the commission plan of government, tell a story of banking courage and promptness almost unexampled. Mayor George Parsons and a number of very able men were contesting the adoption of the commission plan, using as an argument against it that the new city bonds issued under a commission plan would not be valid. Colonel J. S. Aisthorpe and the other officers and directors of the First Bank and Trust Company felt that some decided stand in the matter was necessary and they promptly made public and offer to accept the entire issue of $100,000 of Cairo municipal bonds whether issued under commission form of city government or under the present form of city government. This intrepid act on the part of the First Bank and Trust Company largely put the public mind at rest as to whether or not the commission plan is legal or illegal. The effect upon the election was almost magical.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By R. A. ALBERTSEN

Relates to administrative and department matters interesting to our readers

Washington, March 5th.—The main points of President Wilson's inaugural are pleasing alike to bankers, statesmen and the business men here. Nothing but praise is heard for the new executive on all hands. The inaugural parade exceeded anything in American history and rivaled the most pretentions of foreign coronal events.

Pledges His Services to the People

Mr. Wilson has pledged himself to secure the adoption of the following basic principles:

Revision of a tariff denounced because it cuts us off from our proper part in the commerce of the world, violates the just principles of taxation, and makes the government a facile instrument in the hands of private interests.

Reform of the antiquated banking and currency system, which he declares is perfectly adapted to concentrating cash and restricting credits.

Alteration of an industrial system which he describes as holding capital in leading strings, restricting the liberties and opportunities of labor, and exploiting without renewing or conserving the natural resources of the country.

Direction of agricultural activities so as to give them the efficiency of great business undertakings, the service of science taken directly to the farm, and the facilities of credit best suited to practical needs.

Constructive Development of Resources

Conservation of natural resources in such fashion as to develop water courses, reclaim waste places, tend forests, fast disappearing without plan or prospect of renewal, and to utilize waste heaps at every mine.

Conservation of the human resources of the nation, to which end the government is to be put at the service of humanity in safeguarding the health of the nation, the health of its men, women and children, as well as their rights in the struggle for existence.

Enactment of sanitary laws, pure food laws, and laws determining conditions of labor, which, Mr. Wilson points out, individuals are powerless to determine for themselves, but which are intimate parts of the very business of justice and legal efficiency.

Concerned for Betterment of Society

Mr. Wilson is concerned less with material accomplishments than he is with the need of safeguarding the health of society and the individuals that make it, and their rights in the crushing industrialism of to-day.

He has been counting, as he said, "the human cost of the industrial achievements of which the nation has been proud, the cost of lives snuffed out, of energies overtaxed and broken, the fearful physical and spiritual cost to the men and women and children upon whom the dead weight and burden of it all have fallen pitilessly the years through."

And in his ears have sounded "the groans and agony of it all, the solemn moving undertone of our life, which have come out of the mines and factories and out of every home where the struggle had its intimate and familiar seat."

So feeling, Mr. Wilson has presented to the nation the program which he believes will provide the cure for the social and industrial ills that afflict the body politic.

It is a program which does not take into account the Mexican and other foreign questions pressing for solution, important as they are. It is designed "to cleanse, to reconsider, to restore, to correct the evil in our industrial system without impairing the good, to purify and humanize every process of our common life without weakening or sentimentalizing it."

In concluding a most pleasing and able address, President Wilson said:

"The feelings with which we face this new age of right and opportunity sweep across our heartstrings like some air out of God's own presence, where justice and mercy are reconciled and the judge and the brother are one.

"We know our task to be no mere task of politics, but a task which shall search us through and through, whether we be able to understand our time and the need of our people, whether we be indeed their spokesmen and interpreters, whether we have the pure heart to comprehend and the rectified will to choose our high course of action.

"This is not a day of triumph; it is a day of dedication. Here muster, not the forces of party, but the forces of humanity. Men's hearts wait upon us; men's lives hang in the balance; men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do.

"Who shall live up to the great trust; Who dares fail to try?

"I summon all honest men, all patriotic, all forward looking men, to my side. God helping me, I will not fail them, if they will but counsel and sustain me!"

London Papers Commend the Address

Dispatches from London say the press unanimously commend the address as one of the ablest on record.

The Daily Telegraph dwells on what it calls the transparent sincerity of the address and its eloquent and ornate presentation of humane ideals. It compares it to the speeches through which William J. Bryan became the idol of millions of Americans, and says:

"President Wilson has plucked at last the string of pure idealism. The chastened tone of his address has a very real correspondence with the facts of political psychology in the United States to-day."

CONDITION OF NATIONAL BANKS

The report of the comptroller of the currency showing the condition of national banks at the time of the last call indicates the number of such institutions as 7,425. Proportion of reserves to deposits was 20.91 per cent; individual deposits were $5,985,432,295; total cash reserve, $1,521,371,588, being $64,150,535 in excess of the legal requirement.

CAPITAL ONE MILLION DOLLARS

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

State Auditor James J. Brady has named John H. Coyne of Chicago to be examiner of country banks to succeed J. M. Appel, the latter formerly with the LaSalle Street National of Chicago. As previously announced, Frederick Potter of Chicago has been named chief of the banking department and Joseph G. Boggs of Fairfield, John J. Burke of Chicago and Albert J. Danisch of Chicago are named as building and loan examiners. A number of clerical appointments also have been made by Auditor Brady.

New State Banks Chartered

The German-American State of Cissna Park has been given a charter by Auditor Brady with the customary capital in small towns of $25,000. This is the second bank for Cissna Park, the other being the Iroquois County Bank. The permit was issued to Fred H. Luecke, J. L. Kuinbrigh and W. H. Dunn. Cissna Park is in a very prosperous agricultural community. It is located in southern Iroquois county at the end of a spur of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railroad.

The State Bank of Westville, Vermilion county, has been chartered with capital of $25,000. Westville is a mining town just south of Danville and is within the suburban district of Danville. O. M. Mackey, a brother of J. Frank Mackey, cashier of the Merchants State of Centralia, will be in charge of the bank when it opens April 1st. This is the second bank for Westville, the other being the First National.

The Home Trust and Savings of Pittsfield, Pike county, will be started soon with capital of $50,000. W. E. Williams, D. F. Hollis, George B. Weaver and others are given the permit. This is the third bank for Pittsfield, the others being the First National and the Farmers State.

The Barrington State has been authorized to begin business with capital of $25,000. Robert Martin, P. S. Webster and Spencer Ward are given the permit to operate the bank in the village of Barrington, Cook county.

The Plainfield State, to be located in a village of the same name near Joliet, will be incorporated by Fred A. Tuttle, Oliver G. Brown and Ray Raridan. Capital will be $25,000.

Prosperous Quincy Bank

The State Savings, Loan and Trust Company of Quincy, of which S. B. Montgomery, vice-president of the Illinois Bankers Association, is president, is one of the largest banks in the state outside of Chicago. The capital and surplus are one million dollars and the deposits are over five million dollars. The bank maintains two branches in Quincy, the Broadway Branch at Broadway and Twelfth Street and the South Side Branch at 815 State Street. J. W. Garner and E. N. Monroe are vice-presidents and F. W. Crane is cashier. The directorate includes some of the best financial names in Quincy. A very large Christmas savings fund was conducted last holiday season and the plan was so successful that it will "be kept open until further notice." The eighty-eighth semiannual interest dividend was paid in February and the bank has enjoyed a long and successful history.

Cannon's Earlier Defeat Recalled

The retirement of Joseph G. Cannon, the veteran Illinois congressman and former speaker, from Washington life March 4th, recalls to students of Illinois political history his earlier defeat in 1890 by Colonel S. T. Busey, a banker of Urbana and one of the founders and a former president of Busey's Bank of that city. At that time Danville and Urbana were in the same congressional district and after a most exciting campaign the Danville statesman was defeated and remained out of public life for one term, or two years. This defeat was the only break in Mr. Cannon's official life from 1873 to 1913. Mr. Cannon is interested in banks "back home," as he is a large stockholder in the Second National of Danville and a stockholder and a director in the First National of Tuscola. It was in Tuscola that he spent his "starving days" as a young lawyer before going to Danville. Mr. Cannon's son-in-law, E. X. LeSeure, is president of the Danville National of Danville.

Rockford Clearings Omitted

Rockford bankers are ready to "pick a bone" with the Chicago daily papers for omitting their city in the weekly clearing lists as was done for several weeks recently, the clearings having been omitted three times in succession. F. F. Wormwood, secretary of the Rockford clearing house, said that the clearings were forwarded regularly by mail or telegraph. The Illinois cities included in the clearing list in the Chicago and New York papers are (besides Chicago) Peoria, Quincy, Springfield, Rockford, Bloomington, Decatur and Jacksonville.

The steady growth of manufacturing interests has made Rockford one of the most progressive cities in the Middle West and it is one of the desirable residential cities in the state. There is a great scarcity of dwelling houses there owing to the expansion of the manufacturing interests of the city. The

THE LOGICAL REASONS FOR "SIX PER CENT AND SAFETY"

IN our opinion conservative investors are justly entitled to a rate of six per cent on their investments. We will be pleased to submit on application reasons why six per cent may be obtained on invested funds with perfect safety in the class of securities we offer.

¶ Investors for income, desirous of obtaining the highest interest rate consistent with safety, are advised to investigate these bonds which are issued in denominations of $100, $500, and $1,000.

¶ No investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us during the thirty-one years since this house was founded.

¶ We maintain a market for the securities we sell through our custom of repurchasing from clients, at par and accrued interest, less only the handling charge of one per cent, thus giving reasonable assurance of their convertibility.

Illinois Notes

M. F. Dunlap, president of the Ayers National of Jacksonville, addressed Local Club No. 1 of the Illinois Implement Dealers Association at its meeting in Jacksonville, on "Collections." J. D. Phillips, president of the Illinois Bankers Association, made one of the principal addresses at the convention of the Illinois Farmers Grain Dealers Association, held in Jacksonville.

The Illinois Bankers Association has sent to its members a pamphlet entitled "Create Soil as Well as a Bank Account," and the pamphlet is signed by the members of the committee on agriculture and vocational education.

The First Bank and Trust Company of Cairo, J. S. Aisthorpe, the president, being well known as the chairman of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association, will take the entire issue of levee bonds of the city of Cairo, recently authorized by an overwhelming popular vote, at par. The issue amounts to $100,000.

Springfield officials are asking for interest bids from the banks for city deposits. The customary rate has been three per cent, although state funds draw but two per cent, and the city officials desire the same rate to be offered this year. The deposits range from $100,000 up and the interest varies from $3-500 to $5,000 annually.

One of the largest land sales recorded in Illinois for some time resulted when J. Dwight Funk of Bloomington sold 780 acres of land near Shirley, about ten miles from Bloomington, for $275 an acre. The farm equipment of horses, other live stock, farm machinery and general equipment is added to the sale, making the entire deal worth $234,500. Mr. Funk is a member of the Funk family of McLean county, prominent bankers and farmers.

Miss Kate Wilson, for the past twenty-five years assistant cashier of the Centennial National of Virginia, has resigned her position to go to Cleveland, O., where she will become associated with a large brokerage house.

J. A. Montelius and J. K. Montelius have sold their interests in the First National of Piper City to Daniel Kewley of that village and James Kewley of Onarga. Daniel Kewley was elected president and R. A. Jennings cashier of the reorganized bank and J. A. Cook remains in the vice-presidency.

John McDougal, father of James McDougal of the Chicago clearing house, has passed his ninety-third birthday at his home in Peoria. The elder McDougal has lived at Peoria longer than an ordinary lifetime, reaching that city by way of the Ohio, Mississippi and Illinois rivers from the East before railroads were in existence. He has seen Peoria grow from a frontier town into a thriving commercial city.

C. C. Craig, president of the Bank of Galesburg, and Mrs. Craig, accompanied Governor Edward F. Dunne of Illinois to the Wilson inauguration. Mr. Craig recently was appointed to a position on the staff of Governor Dunne.

EX-CHICAGO BANKER MAKING GOOD IN MISSOURI

At Canton, Mo., the First National has as its cashier F. C. Millspaugh, formerly engaged in the banking business here, where he was connected with the Fort Dearborn National. Mr. Millspaugh possesses an extensive business experience, which consists not only of that gained through banking, but from other lines as well. In 1893 he was elected secretary of Goddard-Hall and Sheridan Commission Company in St. Louis. In May, 1895, he established the Fayette County Bank at St. Elmo, Ill. He sold it, however, late the same year and returned to the commission business. In 1896 Mr. Millspaugh entered the grain and stock business at Canton, Mo., where with others he established the Canton Milling Company. Later he sold his interest in the same and again entered the commission business in St. Louis.

In 1900 he was elected cashier of the Citizens Bank of Canton, which was converted to the First National in 1905. The bank expects to have new quarters shortly, and which will be among the finest of the country banks of the state.

Mr. Millspaugh has taken a deep interest in civic matters, having been elected mayor of Canton two years ago. Under his administration the town has had more improvement than in the twenty-five years preceding. Mr. Millspaugh has been president of the Canton Commercial Club for three years. He served one term as chairman of Group 1 of the Missouri bankers and now is a member of the taxation committee of the association.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

Officers of many national banks of the state will attend the hearing on the bill excluding national banks as state depositories at Madison next Wednesday. The bill provides for a board of deposits consisting of the commissioners of public lands and the governor, which board is to approve banks for state depositories. The sting is in the tail, Section 2 providing that "the state treasurer shall on or before the first day of October, 1913, withdraw all deposits of state moneys which may be on deposit with any depository other than a state banking corporation." All of which would mean the exclusion of the biggest and strongest banking institutions in the state as depositories for state funds. While the bill was introduced by Assemblyman L. L. Johnson, he affirmed Tuesday that he introduced it by request and has no interest in it.

Allis-Chalmers Situation

Representing the reorganization committee of the Allis-Chalmers Company, Fred Vogel, Jr., president of the First National Bank, bid in for $4,000,000 the personal property of the big concern at the sale conducted by Otto H. Falk, receiver, last Thursday. This followed the sale, earlier in the month, of the real property of the big concern, taken over by the same committee for $2,500,000. The Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago was the moving force in the foreclosure proceedings, the instrument involving between $11,000,000 and $12,000,000.

To Erect Skyscraper on Bank Site

The announcement that so soon as the First National moves into its new sixteen-story building at Mason and East Water Streets, the Camp estate will erect a similar skyscraper on the site of the bank's present quarters at East Water and Wisconsin Streets, proved added stimulus to the upward trend of real estate values in the business district last week. Plans for the new skyscraper already are in course of preparation.

Wisconsin Notes

School bonds to the amount of $1,250,000 were authorized in ordinances passed by the common council on Monday afternoon. A new school administration building and ten new schools are provided for, while ten others will be remodeled and enlarged.

Milwaukee banks received first consignment of the new nickels of the United States treasury department this week. That they are inartistic is the most serious complaint of the bankers against the new coins. The objections of the slot device manufacturers are more momentous, since it was discovered that only a few of the many nickel devices will respond to the new coin.

The Wisconsin Bankers Association announced this week an award of $145 in prizes to be distributed to high school students in the state for the best essays on the subject of the development of northern Wisconsin. Five prizes will be offered and by special arrangement with the state school department participants will be encouraged also to submit their essays in lieu of the usual commencement essays. Milwaukee high schools are barred from the contest owing to the extensive library facilities.

J. W. Lombard, president of the National Bank, was elected president of the Milwaukee Club at the annual meeting this week.

James I. Bush, for the past year representing the bond department of the National City Bank of Chicago, in Milwaukee and the state, has been appointed city salesman of the Second Ward Savings Bank's new bond department, his appointment going into effect immediately. Mr. Bush is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin and captained the 1905 football team at the university. Upon leaving college he entered the sales department of the Goodrich Rubber Company and remained with that concern until his entry into the bond business.

A merger of the Wautoma State and the Wautoma First National was announced this week. The institution will continue business under the name of the former, the merger to go into effect early this spring.

The Farmers and Citizens Bank of Sauk City has been incorporated with a capital of $22,000. The incorporators are O. W. Hahn, Robert Hamburger, and August E. Marquardt.

AVOID INDIRECT ROUTING

The increase in volume of country checks during the past few years has been remarkable; consequently it is not surprising to find that banks all over the country constantly are watching for some means whereby they can either reduce the expense in handling these items, or collect them through certain channels at a minimum cost. The exchange rate on certain points is undoubtedly the main cause for indirect routing, but when a bank undertakes to collect items at par for its correspondents, it should route these items in the most direct manner, irrespective of the cost.

James K. Lynch, vice-president of the First National of San Francisco, says that "checks are received daily in our bank, bearing two, and sometimes three bank endorsements, drawn on towns located only forty or fifty miles from where the items were originally deposited. It is interesting to note that many such checks on the way from San Francisco to their destination, three or four days later (while on the train), will actually pass through the town from which they first came, having completed a circuitous route. When payment of one of these items is refused, it is frequently eight or ten days before the depositor receives it back again."

EAST MOLINE BANK DOUBLES CAPITAL STOCK

The State Bank of East Moline announces that it has increased its capital stock from $25,000 to $50,000. This bank, which was established by Rock Island men and of which N. A. Larson of Rock Island is president, has enjoyed a remarkable season of prosperity and the increase in the capital stock comes as a result of success already achieved.

J. L. Tennent of Des Moines and W. P. Phillips, formerly with the Iowa National of Des Moines, have bought the Afton Exchange at Afton. Tennent becomes president and Phillips will assume the active management.

CHICAGO'S VISITORS

Among the prominent out-of-town bankers seen in Chicago's financial district recently were the following: Norman Sage, president of the First State of Elkhart, Ind.; Charles B. Lewis, vice-president of the Fourth National of Macon, Ga.; Maurice Brown, president of the Iowa Trust and Savings, Dubuque.

H. R. Aisthorpe, cashier and secretary of the First Bank and Trust Company of Cairo, Ill., spent several days in Chicago attending the telephone convention at the La Salle Hotel.

A. G. Stoltz, cashier of the Second National of Bucyrus, Ohio, was a Chicago visitor Wednesday, attending a luncheon of the members of the ways and means committee, Chicago Association of Commerce. The Second National of Bucyrus is a Roll of Honor bank, possessing surplus and profits in excess of its capital stock. Deposits are $705,404.04. Mr. Stoltz was an enthusiastic attendant at the convention of the national brickmakers as a great deal of important brickmaking machinery is manufactured at Bucyrus, the American Clay and Machinery Company being one of the big institutions of Ohio.

F. A. Rice, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, Tacoma, Wash., was a Chicago caller Thursday.

NEW MARK SET BY MOLINE BANKS

A new mark has been set in the amount on deposit in Moline, Ill., banks, the total for the five banks on February 4th being $10,542,619.39, an increase of $498,114.98 or nearly a half million dollars since the last statement on November 7, 1912. Deposits, for the first time in the history of Moline banking, passed the $10,000,000 mark in September of 1912.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, March 5th.—Bank clearings for the month of February show a gain of 5 per cent over those of the corresponding month last year. The volume of business transacted at the financial institutions has been of large proportions. The demand for money has been fair with rates ruling firm at 5 to 6 per cent on call and time loans. New York exchange has been in fair offerings and demand, with the premium between banks unchanged.

German Savings to Build

The German Savings Institution will erect a one-story banking house for its own occupancy at the southeast corner of Broadway and Pine streets as the result of a lease to the property for thirty years. Plans for the building have been drawn and show a one-story building, crowned by an ornate dome in the center. A tile and marble lobby behind elaborate bronze grills forms the entrance. The interior will have a mezzanine floor for the offices which do not come into direct touch with the customers. The bank's lease on its present quarters expires in November, 1914, and it expects to have its new premises ready some months before that time. Work probably will start early this spring.

"Blue Sky" Bill Engrossed

"A "Blue Sky" bill amended to exempt established brokerage and commission houses, insurance companies and certain other concerns, went to engrossment in the house at Jefferson City last week. The bill was engrossed in the senate with only six dissenting votes, making the passage of the law now seem assured. Before offering stocks or bonds for sale all investment or other concerns coming within the provisions of the law must file a sworn statement with the bank commissioner showing in detail its method of business, the amount of its assets and liabilities, and its location and name. It must file copies of all contracts, bonds, or instruments which it proposes to sell. If the bank commissioner find the company is solvent and legally organized he notifies it that it may offer its stocks and bonds for sale and begin the transaction of business. Upon the other hand, if he find the concern not solvent, he immediately shall notify its officers not to attempt the sale of stocks or bonds until it fulfills the requirements of the law. Established brokerage and investment houses which in the opinion of the bank commissioner are conducting a legitimate business and are dealing in municipal or other high-grade bonds and securities, expressly are exempted. The other exempted concerns are state and national banks and trust companies, real estate mortgage companies, building and loan associations, co-operative companies, training schools for minors, police and firemen relief associations, bond investment companies, exposition companies and corporations not organized for profit.

Bank Sues

The Night and Day Bank of St. Louis has filed a suit in the circuit court at Clayton against John W. Benstein, a St. Louis attorney, and David Helle, a real estate dealer of Maplewood, asking that 25 acres on the Manchester road be subjected to judgments against Benstein. The suit charges the land is owned by Benstein, and reasonably is worth more than $15,000, but the title to the property fraudulently was placed in Helle without consideration. A few years ago a well sunk on the place was reported to be producing oil. On February 7th last, the bank alleges a judgment was obtained against Benstein, but prior to this the title to the 25 acres had been placed in Helle. The consideration named in the deed is $1. The petition charges the property belongs to Benstein, subject to a secret agreement with Helle.

Barkeeper Fails as Bank

When G. W. Swing, of Sherman, Tex., who gave $440 to a bartender in Chestnut Street, went to get the money he was told that the bartender had resigned his position. Swing reported his loss to the police who found that the barkeeper had left St. Louis.

Banks as Depositories

The attorney-general's department at Austin, Tex., gave out an opinion last week in which it was declared that banks having contracts with cities for the deposit of city funds without interest, such banks cashing city drafts at discount when the city had no funds on deposit were not liable under the guaranty law, and that such deposits were not protected by this law. The opinion further declares that such a bank may become a city depository upon meeting the requirements of the bank guaranty law, which includes the giving of a bond, and that unless such a bank gives a bond it is not a lawful depository and in no event would the city's deposit be protected by the depositor's guaranty law. The opinion also declares that when such a bank cashes drafts when the city's funds are out to an excess of 23 per cent of the bank's capital and surplus, such a bank violates the state banking laws. The attorney-general says that the banking commissioner is authorized to force such a bank to cease to act as a depository when such a bank has failed to give the statutory bond.

Bankers whose customers have business at the St. Louis National Yards can realize full value of such business only through an account with this bank.

New Banks in Texas

Twenty-one new state banks with an aggregate capital of $845,000 were chartered and opened in Texas during January; ten banks already established increased their capital stock, the increase aggregating $404,000, and fifteen banks certified to permanent surplus funds. Commissioner of Insurance and Banking Gill predicts that a new record will be made during the present year. The banks which chartered and opened for business in January are as follows: Citizens Bank and Trust Company, San Antonio, capital stock $100,000; American Trust & Savings of El Paso, $200,000; Citizens State of Valley Mills, $30,000; Citizens Guaranty State of Chandler, $25,000; First State of Handley, $10,000; Farmers State of Crawford, $20,000; Farmers Guaranty State of Groesbeck, $25,000; Farmers State of Rogers; Berclair State of Berclair, $20,000; First State of Woodsboro, $10,000; Guaranty State of Personville, $10,000; Home Trust of Port Arthur, $10,000; Merchants & Planters State of Enterprise, $15,000; Guaranty State of Mt. to remit to the members of the New York Clearing House Association, or non-members clearing through such members, at par in New York funds on the day of receipt.

The response of the out-of-town banks has not been altogether general, but it is believed in banking circles here that competition soon will bring the matter to a head and that out-of-town banks that do not protect their customers by arranging that their checks shall pass at par in New York will find it necessary to keep up with the times.

MAKES EFFORT TO INCREASE MEMBERSHIP IN CLEARING HOUSE SECTION

John K. Ottley, vice-president of the Fourth National of Atlanta, Ga., who also is vice-president of the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association and chairman of the membership committee of that branch of the A. B. A., is making a systematic effort to secure unanimous membership for his section. There are three important cities in Illinois which are not now members of the clearing house section. Decatur, Danville and Quincy bankers should get in touch with Mr. Ottley and secure representation for their respective cities so that Illinois may be fully represented in this important section of the A. BANKS INCREASE CAPITAL

Capital stock of the Hibernian Banking Association was increased from $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 this week, which was effected by the transfer of $500,000 from undivided profits to capital account. Surplus was increased from $400,000 to $1,000,000 by a transfer of the necessary amount from undivided profits.

Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings transferred $1,500,000 from undivided profits to surplus, which makes the latter equal to half of the capital.

Under the last call undivided profits of the Hibernian amounted to $1,012,000 and those of the Continental and Commercial Trust to $1,683,000.

OLDEST TRUST COMPANY IN MISSOURI

WHAT A TRUST COMPANY DOES

In reply to a letter as to what the advantages of a trust company as administrator of a will are, the San Francisco Savings Union answered as follows:

(1) It never dies nor becomes incapacitated and never neglects your affairs for its own.

(2) It is never sick, never takes a vacation, never mingles your property with its own.

(3) It is never a party to, and never takes sides in family differences.

(4) It has given a bond to the treasurer of the state of California to secure the assets of estates in its control.

(5) It never speculates.

(6) It relieves your heirs of the responsibility of making investments for which they may lack experience, and pays them the largest amount of income consistent with safe investment of the principal.

(7) Its wide field gives it the most expert knowledge as to desirable investments.

(8) By reason of the skill and experience of its officers, it handles your affairs more ably, more economically, more intelligibly than any one individual can.

PRESIDENT TAFT'S RECORD

Now that William H. Taft has retired as the chief magistrate of the nation, an obviously pertinent query is, "What sort of a record has he made as president?" There will be found those who will commend and others who will criticise Mr. Taft's achievements during his administration.

When one reviews calmly and dispassionately the things accomplished under the Taft régime, one is impressed with the realization that, notwithstanding the frenzied, ill-advised attacks which have been made and which were conceived of ignorance coupled with an insane hero worship rather than based on actual facts, the record of Mr. Taft during his four years' occupancy of the presidental chair has been noteworthy and consistently may be said to have been successful.

That mistakes have been made will not be denied; but then, one who is infallible is not for this earth. A great deal of effective work has been accomplished during the past four years, all of which has been brought about quietly and unostentatiously, which suggests a comparison with the record of Mr. Taft's predecessor, when things were attempted to be accomplished by "fire and thunder" methods, and which, as is always the case, were devoid of practical, worth-while results.

Our latest ex-president, it is said, was weak and indecisive; he attempted to cater to all factions and ultimately succeeded in pleasing none. Perhaps the most effective refutation of this indictment may be said to lie in the fact that President Taft, knowing full well that he would incur the enmity of Mr. Roosevelt, who popularly is believed to have selected his own successor, refused to carry out the latter's "policies" but chose rather to adopt that course which seemed to him to lie in the direction of the best interests of the people and to be more consistent with judgment and reason.

Another charge which has been made against Mr. Taft is that he favored the predatory interests and tacitly, if not openly, placed his stamp of approval on the nefarious methods of extortion practiced by the monopolistic combinations with which this nation has been beset. All that need be said in this connection is that statistics show the Taft administration has been far more zealous in endeavoring to enforce the Sherman anti-trust law than any former president and that during the administrations of Theodore Roosevelt, that "arch enemy" of the trusts, the latter increased at such an alarming rate as to cause the outraged people to rise up in the demand for drastic measures designed to effect relief.

Many people before the election were quick to condemn President Taft's record. Subsequent events and developments have convinced a great many of these of the fallacy of their position and disclosed the fact that Mr. Taft's four years at Washington have resulted in increased good to the country and that the status of the nation at the close of his term as chief executive is such as could result only from intelligent, conscientious and efficient work.

PROBABLE NEW BANKING ACT

The new banking and currency legislation promised or threatened, according as you view it, by the new congress likely will be based in no small part upon the findings and recommendations of the Pujo committee. Most bankers are open-minded on the subject. The so-called Aldrich plan left little favorable prejudice in the minds of the public. Opposition was the general trend, with or without investigation. Those who liked the bill often felt in opposition to its supposed inception.

Refined and epitomized, the provisions of the new bill are likely to take note of the following principles recently adopted by the investigating subcommittee of the banking and currency committee:

Prohibition of the consolidation of two or more banks without the approval of the comptroller of the currency.

Prohibition of interlocking bank directorates.

Prohibition of interlocking stock holdings among banks.

Prohibition of "voting trusts."

Provision for minority representation in directorates.

Suppression of security holding companies as adjuncts to banks.

Prohibition of fiscal agency agreements.

Provision that interstate corporations shall not deposit their funds with unsupervised, unregulated private bankers.

Prohibition for national banks to engage in underwritings.

Authorization for national banks to invest 25 per cent of their capital and surplus in state, city, county obligations and in mortgage bonds of corporations on which interest has been paid regularly for five years.

Prohibition of borrowing by officers from their own banks.

Directors to be allowed to borrow from the banks with which they are connected only upon condition of notice to codirectors, the entrance of a statement of the transaction upon the minutes of the board, and publicity of the name and amount of the loan by the comptroller of the currency in his annual report.

Prohibition of bank officers or directors in underwritings of the banks with which they are connected.

Criminal prosecution of any officer or director accepting or offering rewards for bank loans.

Publicity of bank assets other than the names of borrowers and of the list of stockholders.

The committee will be practically the same at the special session of congress soon to convene. Many of the financial planks in the state platforms called for just such provisions as above and the national democratic platform recognizes them as desirable. Likely most of the above will go in the new bill when offered.

AN ERA OF BETTER THINGS

The adoption of a banking law and the establishment of a state banking department in Arkansas, with all forms of banking under supervision and inspection is indicative of a new era in such matters. No other state had been quite so backward. There not only was absence of supervision but of statutory provision for the great business of banking. The credit of the state suffered woefully but the "wild cats" were too numerous and too powerful in opposition.

The Arkansas Bankers Association has set a high mark in the fight. She has shamed Illinois and other state associations too weak to go upon record. True her provocation was much greater. She had no law on the subject. For eight years the Arkansas association drafted bills and appointed committees which worked earnestly. At last the victory was won and the new law as set forth upon another page is the result. It is ably conceived and entirely up to date. It will go into effect at once and Arkansas will take the rank to which she is entitled by wealth and resources in the banking and financial world.

There is promise that Illinois will get something done at this session of the legislature. The committee appointed is not a pro-supervision body but it is fair, able and patriotic and there still is hope.

NEW BANK BUILDING DEDICATED

The spendid new bank and office building of the Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company at Moline formally was opened and dedicated on Saturday last. It is located at the corner of 15th Street and 5th Avenue, the new financial district of that growing city. Vice-president Nelson H. Greene assisted by a committee of officers and directors was on hand promptly at nine o'clock in the morning to receive visitors. During the day not less than ten thousand persons inspected the new edifice and half as many more came at night, keeping the building thronged until nine P. M., when it closed. A new record was set for Moline in the line of building dedications. The Peoples was the last of the banks to leave the old district at 3d Avenue, and to join the other principal banks of the city in creating a new central financial district. The banking room is trimmed in solid marble fixtures and the walls are decorated in old ivory color trimmed with an appropriate border. The desks and cages are of mahogany, while the pillars and tables for the public use are of marble. Barff iron grills have been used. In the center of the large room is a marble stairway leading to the basement which has been fitted up with rooms and booths for private use of those who patronize the safety deposit vaults. The vault system is one of the best that could be procured, and each teller and clerk in the bank will have a separate compartment and combination lock within the principal vault, the door of which weighs 32,000 pounds. Large storage rooms have been provided for chests and trunks containing articles of value. The directors' room and private rooms for the officers have been constructed on the mezzanine floor. Everything has been planned specifically for future growth of the Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company and the citizens of Moline are proud of the new building which adds considerably to the importance of this financial center. William Butterworth is president of the bank; Nelson H. Greene is vice-president and cashier, with R. C. Shallberg as assistant cashier. A splendid half-tone of the new building will be found on the front page of this issue.

THE HOME PROGRESS MAGAZINE

The "Home Progress" magazine, published by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston, for the Home Progress Society, for March contains very instructive matter. Some of the most instructive and useful relates to "The Informal Living Room," "Home Nature Study," Children's Reading," "Care of Eyes, Nose, Teeth and Ears of Children." There are articles on home handiwork which teach the boys and girls how to "make things." It is a magazine which will improve conditions in the home.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH AMERICA?

in scientific and intensive farming, vocational education, good roads, and modern farm finance, all of which subjects are at the present time familiar to the American people and are being generally discussed. Scientific and intensive farming means fertilization, proper rotation of crops, general soil conservation, and the decrease of all forms of waste. Vocational education as applied to the country school means the teaching of the business and dignity of farming to the farm boy. Good roads means not only improved transportation facilities but also better and more pleasant farm living conditions. Modern farm finance means the passage of a national monetary bill that will permit the American farmer's short time bill of exchange to bear the acceptance of banks and be classed as a prime bill in the monetary centers of the world and it also means the establishment of a system of mortgage banks to grant long time mortgage loans on an amortization basis.

The people of our country doubtless will agree that our present unrest is brought about by the pressure of the increasing cost of living brought to a climax by the ending of the pioneer period in American history. They will not seriously disagree as to the three great causes for the increasing cost of living or the remedies that should be applied. They are, however, far from an agreement as to the methods by which these remedies are to be brought about, and during the period of discussion and experiment much unsettlement necessarily must be felt, but just so soon as the people can decide definitely upon and put into effect the correct methods to be employed, then can be expected a renewal of great prosperity and a feeling of greater contentment and peace than yet has been experienced in America.

CONTINENTAL RAISES DIVIDEND RATE

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Continental and Commercial National held this week it was decided to increase the annual dividend rate of the bank from 10 to 12 per cent, which will be provided for through the collection of dividends on the stock of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings and the Hibernian Association. Surplus of the national bank was increased $500,000 by the transfer of that amount from undivided profits, bringing the account up to $8,500,000.

Application has been received by the comptroller to organize the Citizens National at Fort Madison, Ia.; capital $100,000.

Directors of the Security Bank this week raised the dividend rate from 6 to 8 per cent, by declaring a quarterly dividend of 2 per cent, payable April 1st.

A Real Peace Tribunal

Extracts from address delivered at the twelfth annual banquet of the New York Chapter, A. I. B., by W. Morgan Shuster, ex-treasurer-general of Persia

The general thought which ran through my mind as a subject for my remarks to-night was the effect of international business and other financial relations upon the attainment of world peace. For a good many hundreds of years thinkers and dreamers have been striving to bring about the millennium or to learn how it could be hastened. The Church has devoted a great deal of attention to it and in so far as a moral appeal, a purely moral appeal, can have any effect in a question of that kind it has done all that could be done, and yet we have no peace. I think that a study of the incidents of the past few years, or a survey of the situation in the world to-day, could give no very great or real encouragement to those splendid men who through arbitration and peace societies are endeavoring to rid us of the horrors of war.

There was, however, a very striking incident in international affairs a short time ago—the inside history of which is not entirely known by the public—when two great European nations were on the verge of a war which was happily averted. The appeal to arms was not prevented by the dislike for war, nor by the shrinking of the public of the two countries who would suffer most if that catastrophe had come about; nor was it averted by any peace society, arbitration treaty or any tribunal. It was prevented by the power of money. Lack of available funds made it impossible for one of these two nations to go to war. It seems to me that there is great food for reflection in that incident, because among the civilizing effects of finance and of money, some of which have been mentioned so eloquently this evening, if it could by any means bring about through an appeal to the lay mind, through the influence of the pocketbook, if you will, the conviction on the part of the great mass of civilized people that war is economic barbarism, that it not only means the shedding of blood, the taking of life, and untold suffering by generations of innocent people, but that it actually is an economic crime, I think that in this practical age, and in what will be the still more practical ages of the future, there lies some hope for war's elimination as a factor in human affairs.

This would be the very greatest victory that money could win; it would be a boon to mankind which no other influence or force has so far been able to give, or shows any likelihood of giving. But to do that, the money power of the world must be directed by people who realize the real sources of the danger of war—and those sources of danger are very material questions. Men no longer fight, people no longer take up arms over the color of another's hair or because of his faith or his religious creed. Those things might serve as a rallying cry in disagreements between nations, but they never will be the real cause of wars in the future. The wars to come will be wars of aggression, and largely economic in their origin; they will be for territory or for trade, or for both.

Now, if we can get the commerce and the finances of this world, of the different countries and peoples, so interwoven, so intimately related that nowhere in any great civilized center could war break out between powerful countries without a shock and an immense loss to the whole international fabric, the world's most potent elements always will find some method of averting war.

A certain study of international law, not in its technical sense but in its broader aspects to-day, is, it seems to me, a very essential thing for men in your profession. You have the most powerful profession in the world—the study and control of credit; credit, by which every human activity is regulated and guided; and when it shall become possible for that force to be used all over the world to say that war must cease, then war will cease. There is an old story about a doctor—I believe it is of American origin—who said that the most sensitive nerve in the human body is the one leading to the pocketbook. There is a great deal of truth in that, and when it is realized by people in all walks of life, and of all stages and degrees of education, that war is an economic loss, that it is imposing upon them an increasing burden which some time soon will become unbearable, the existence of a war party, a war lord, or of a war clique in any country will be regarded as an act of treason.

Now, as bankers, I do not think we want to finance war loans; it is not good business. I mean that in the broader sense; not speaking in the technical sense. We wish to finance industrial loans; we wish to finance something productive, not destructive, and in so far as a very practical profession such as banking can have influence in this direction, in a purely moral appeal, I think that its most enlightened minds, realizing this, will make it the fixed and united policy of bankers and financiers, and of great financial houses all over the world, to say to every government, "No war loan shall be financed except in the one case when a war is really justifiable—that is, when a people, justice-loving and willing to do justice, is actually outraged by some act of aggression."

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Another off week was experienced by the cities of the Central West when the record of bank clearings for the six banking days ending Feb. 27th showed a general loss in business all along the line. Kansas City showed a decrease of 2.8 per cent; Omaha, 3 per cent and St. Joseph 1.3 per cent, with smaller cities in about the same proportion. While general business in this district remains satisfactory, there is a heavy falling off in receipts of live stock and grain. As these are the principal items of commerce along the Missouri river, the banks have felt the depression. Yet this condition largely is offset by the fact that agricultural prospects are very bright and crops have been doing well recently. There now is plenty of moisture throughout practically all of the Central West territory due to several heavy falls of snow and rains following each other in just the right succession. President Webb, of the Missouri Savings of Kansas City, who just has returned from a tour of inspection in southern Missouri and parts of Kansas, reports that he never has seen better prospects for wheat. "No one can predict very far into the future when speaking of crops," said Mr. Webb, "but I am convinced that conditions thus far are ideal, and that wheat will be able to withstand considerable dry weather before it can be injured. I found farmers preparing for their spring work and everywhere there was the best feeling among them."

Railroad May be Taken Over

Unless the bondholders come forward with 15 million dollars before the expiration of six months, the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient railroad will be taken over by the Northern Pacific, is the statement made by J. O. Davidson, of Wichita, one of the receivers for that property. "English bondholders are trying to reorganize the company," said Mr. Davidson. "But they are having difficulty in securing funds because of the stringent money market in Europe. This financial condition is the result of trouble in the Balkan states. It will take 15 millions to complete the Orient and pay interest on the bonds. The bondholders of course will be given first chance at the road. If they are unable to reorganize it, the road probably will be taken over by another line. The receivership will not be discharged for six months at least. The Orient is making money now. Both passenger and freight business is picking up." It is said that representatives of the Northern Pacific have been stationed at Wichita and other points along the Orient to ascertain the amount and character of business handled at present.

A. I. B. Chapter For Oklahoma City

After several weeks of preliminary work, a chapter of the American Institute of Banking was organized in Oklahoma City last week to promote the interests of bank employees. The organization has started with thirty-five active members. This is said to be about half the number of bank employees in Oklamoha City and it is expected that the membership will increase rapidly after the first few regular meetings of the chapter. It was decided to take up the regular course of study outlined and recommended by the American Institute of Banking and study classes will meet two evenings a week until the end of the summer, when more frequent meetings will be held. Following are the officers of the chapter: President, R. O. Wunderlich of the State National; vice-president, W. W. Vance of the American National, and secretary-treasurer, F. H. Shelley, Jr., of the Farmers National. The chapter has met with great encouragement from the bankers of Oklahoma City, and it is expected that permanent quarters will be secured some time during the summer and that social features will be added to the chapter's activities.

Dallas Bank Opens

Amid a profusion of floral tributes from other banks and scenes of hearty congratulation and welcome, the Merchants National of Dallas, Tex., opened its doors for business last week. The motto of this institution was displayed conspicuously and all of the employees and officers have subscribed to the sentiment, "Courtesy, Safety and Efficiency." On the opening day the new banking rooms at 1109-1111 Main Street were crowded with visitors among whom were many other Dallas bankers. "I never have seen anywhere such cordiality and courtesy as has been shown by the banks of Dallas," said Ben B. Cain, vice-president and chairman of the new bank. "These flowers are silent attestation of the spirit that has been manifested toward us." The officers of the Merchants National are: L. L. Jester, president; Ben B. Cain, vice-president and chairman of the board; W. Frank Knox, vice-president; Herbert W. Jester, cashier, and Harry Williams, assistant cashier. The bank starts with a capital of $250,000 and a surplus of $50,000.

Texas Banks in Good Condition

The Texas department of banking has issued a condensed statement of the condition of Texas state banks at the close of business Feb. 4th. During the period from Nov. 26, 1912, to Feb. 4, 1913, being the dates of the last two calls, the capital of state banks and trust companies has increased a net amount of $921,500. There have been three new banks and trust companies with a combined capital of $400,000; eighteen new banks with a combined capital of $370,000; eighteen banks increased capital to $316,000 and one bank and trust company increased its capital $200,000. Six banks liquidated, withdrawing $105,000 in capital; one bank decreased its capital $10,000 and one bank and trust company decreased its capital $250,000. The capital stock of all banks and trust companies combined amounts to $28,223,500 with combined surplus and undivided profits of $8,654,787. Nineteen state banks in Texas have savings departments and the actual cash on hand, being the required reserve of 15 per cent of the deposits in these savings departments, exceeds the reserve fund $125,005. The opinion of the Texas banking department is that the state banks are in excellent condition.

Oklahoma State Banks

A consolidated statement of the state banks of Oklahoma was issued last week by the banking department on the date of call, Feb. 4th. It shows individual deposits of $43,201,273, a decrease of $69,842 compared with the call of Nov. 26, 1912. There was a decrease

Reports Favorable Conditions in South

William T. Kemper, president of the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City, returned last week from Shreveport, La., where he spent several days in consultation with local capitalists regarding the proposal of launching a new trust company in that city. Capitalists of Shreveport and vicinity are back of the enterprise, and Mr. Kemper was asked to pass on the proposition as an expert. "The proposition certainly looks good to me," said Mr Kemper on his return to Kansas City. "The city, its people and the entire country about are enjoying a season of unusual prosperity. The interests of Shreveport and that part of the South are such that I believe a trust company there would prosper." Mr. Kemper also was much impressed with conditions general throughout that part of the South he visited and predicts a profitable season for the farmers and stock raisers.

Interesting History of Convicted Banker

The latest chapter in the remarkable career of John Ogden, former president of the Deepwater (Mo.) Bank, will close when he returns to the state penitentiary to serve a sentence of four years imposed upon him last week on the first of five counts against him of swindling in connection with his banking operations. Ogden has been a unique figure in Missouri financial history. Two years ago he appeared at Deepwater and established a residence. Although he was married and had a small family positively nothing could be learned of his antecedents. He said nothing about his past life. But he appeared to be of exemplary habits and character. He did not drink, smoke or stay away from home, and he was a leading spirit in church work. He posed as a capitalist and after a few months of residence in Deepwater, he organized the Deepwater Bank. Everything he touched appeared to be successful. Everybody trusted him and sought his advice. He proved to be a good banker, so far as people could learn, and he conducted important financial operations on easily obtained credit. Suddenly he disappeared, and last November it was discovered that he was in Kansas City, where he was spending money right and left and having a high old time generally. An investigation followed, and on November 30th last, the bank at Deepwater was closed and Ogden was arrested. It then came out that he was an ex-convict, having served three years in prison for the theft of some harness. It is said that his forgeries will amount to $30,000. He pleaded guilty to the count upon which he was sentenced, that of swindling Joseph Motter out of $1,800. Within six months after he had been released from the penitentiary for the harness theft, he was elected president of the Deepwater Bank, although at the time he and his family went to Deepwater he hadn't a dollar.

Central West Notes

The trial of J. A. Clopton, charged with the murder of James Lewis White, treasurer of the Republic Trust Company of Dallas, Tex., has been set for March 24th. Clopton now is in jail.

The Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City was the first financial institution of the Central West to receive a consignment of the new nickels, and so great was the demand for the novel coins when the news got out that tellers had to cut down the numbers desired by customers. One man, a speculator, wanted $50 worth. He was supplied with $5 worth. The trust company's original order was for $500 worth but this was cut down at the mint to $300, making 6,000 nickels in the first shipment to reach Kansas City.

C. B. McCluskey, vice-president of the National Reserve Bank, is on his way to Muskogee, Okla., with the body of his brother, J. B. McCluskey, who died in Berlin Feb. 13th. J. B. McCluskey was one of the first Americans to seek treatment from Dr. Friedmann in Berlin, but his malady was too far advanced for improvement.

Charles M. Sawyer, president of the First National of Norton, Kan., now is bank commissioner of Kansas, succeeding J. N. Dolley in that office March 1st. Mr. Sawyer's son, Lewis Sawyer, who formerly worked in the bank at Norton, has taken a position with the Fidelity Trust Company of Kansas City.

Fernando P. Neal, chairman of the board of directors of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce of Kansas City, with Mrs. Neal, left for several weeks, sojourn in southern California a few days ago.

J. T. M. Johnston, president of the National Reserve Bank of Kansas City, has returned from a stay of several weeks in Hot Springs, Ark. President Johnston brought back a silver loving cup, a trophy which he won in a golf tournament at the springs.

C. A. Middaugh, assistant cashier of the Missouri Savings of Kansas City, delivered an address before the Kansas City chapter of the American Institute of Banking the evening of Tuesday, March 4th, on "Savings Banks."

R. S. Wilfley of Maryville, Mo., and H. B. Kliewer, of Cherokee, Okla., have purchased from President J. R. Copple his controlling interest in the Alfalfa County National of Cherokee, Okla.

Frank Sherwood, cashier of the Lindsey National of Gainesville, Tex., will become one of the active vice-presidents of the State National of Fort Worth, Tex., March 10th.

The city of Dallas will vote on bonds amounting to $1,150,000 on April 1st, for parks, a municipal lighting plant and for public schools. Of the issue $500,000 will be for parks.

Because of advancing years, William H. Smith has resigned the presidency of the Citizens State of Marysville, Kan., and his successor is P. E. Laughlin, who has been cashier of that institution for many years.

Fort Worth will vote on $300,000 in waterworks bonds April 8th, instead of on March 14th as previously announced.

The Texas department of banking has approved the following reserve agents for Texas banks: for the First State of Handley, the Seaboard National of New York; for the Jester County Guaranty State of Tyler, the Merchants National of Dallas; for the National Bank of Commerce, San Antonio, the National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis; for the First National of Fort Worth, the First National of Kansas City; for the Union National of Houston, the National City of New York; for the First State of Columbus, the First National of Galveston and the South Texas Commercial National of Houston.

Among the out-of-town banker-visitors in Kansas City's financial district last week were: A. E. Maxwell, president of the National Bank of Commerce, Pittsburg, Kan.; E. J. Williams, president of the Wilson County Bank, Fredonia, Kan.; F. A. Mosher, president of the First National, Sentinel, Okla.; T. M. Walker, president of the Atchison (Kan.) Savings; Louis H. Wulfekuhler, vice-president of the Wulfekuhler State, Leavenworth, Kan.; I. L. Hull, cashier of the State National, Cordell, Okla.; Guy D. Hurlbut, traveling representative of the Bankers Trust Co., New York; T. C. Smith, president of the Lawton (Okla.) Bank; Frank S. Miller, vice-president and F. P. Cornish, cashier, of the First National, Boynton, Okla.; D. L. Noon, cashier of the First National, Logan, Kan.; George W. Reed, cashier of the Citizens Bank of Axtell, Kan.; J. McKinley, cashier of the State Savings, Iola, Kan.; E. L. Taylor, president of the Lebo (Kan.) State; J. W. Teter, president of the First National, Bristow, Okla.; O. A. Hutchins, president of the Citizens State Bank, Manhattan, Kan.; A. F. Tooley, treasurer of the Purcell (Okla.) Bank and Trust; W. E. Hazen, assistant cashier of the Watkins National, Lawrence, Kan.

What is believed to be one of the largest bonds ever made by a bank in this country to protect a deposit account has been arranged by the Western National of Fort Worth, Tex., where the county funds are kept. Until recently, the bond was $1,750,000 but last week it was ordered increased to $2,250,000 on account of the heavy increased deposit resulting from the sale of road bonds. Another block of these bonds to the value of $450,000 was ordered delivered to the purchasers, Bolger, Mosser and Williman of Chicago.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Out from the Northwestern National has come another great agricultural movement, the better farming field having been pretty well covered. The new stock-raising movement started with President E. W. Decker, following close on the heels of the energetic initiate work of Vice-president Joseph Chapman in regard to agriculture proper. At a luncheon Saturday, J. W. Wheeler, Capital Trust Company; J. E. Platt, Clark, S. D.; P. A. Pickett, Lead, S. D.; Thomas Cooper, Fargo, N. D., were appointed to prepare literature and send it broadcast as to the motives for the meeting and to ask co-operation. The plan is to get every bank and commercial and improvement organization in Minnesota and the Dakotas to help in the movement to put more stock on the farms. Thirty-four bankers, live stock men, business men and agricultural experts were present. Mr. Decker read statistics to show the falling off in stock in the three states because of short feed in recent years, and heavy marketing of breeding cattle and the marketing of too many immature cattle. Among the remedies suggested were:

Stimulating of interest in stock-raising.

An educational campaign showing possibilities in live stock raising.

Co-operation of the development association.

Co-operation of stockmen and farmers.

The help of the bankers to further the movement.

Prohibition by law of the marketing of immature cattle.

Bills before the legislatures of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, appropriating money for county demonstration work, were indorsed by the meeting.

Bankers' Views on "Money Trust"

"Doubtless there is a large concentration of capital in the money centers, but that is not to be wondered at. That does not mean that there is a money trust. It is due to the conditions which exist in the banking business. When demands are made on our banks we have to depend on other banks for capital. We cannot carry all of our deposits in our own banks, of course. Naturally, when those demands come, we have to secure the money from money centers."—F. M. Prince, First National.

"If there is a money trust to-day, its existence undoubtedly is due to the absence of adequate laws. The lack of such legislation leaves the bankers absolutely dependent on the big money centers. Of course, the greatest money center is New York City. The existing condition has been forced on the bankers because of the absence of government assistance in proper jurisdiction. The situation doesn't suit us any more than it does those people who are not in the banking business. Until there is a law that provides the banks with facilities for obtaining currency, using as collateral the general business assets of the country, such as notes, etc., the situation will continue as it is."—E. W. Decker, Northwestern National.

"If there is a combination of money interests I believe that it only is that sort of combination that is bound to result from the commercial methods of the day. It is not a combination of the trust sort; it is the combination that necessarily must be formed for the protection of the banks and of their patrons, the protection of the country at large."—Perry Harrison, Security National.

School Children Thrifty

More than 28,000 school children in the Minneapolis public school grades have savings accounts, said E. W. Hawley, treasurer of the Farmers and Mechanics Savings, before the state senate committee on banking, amounting in the last eighteen months to more than $113,000. Mr. Hawley spoke for a bill legalizing the work of savings banks operating savings plans among children of the lower school grades.

"Of this amount," said Mr. Hawley, "about $75,000 has been transferred from the stamp department into the savings departments and pass books have been issued and interest paid on deposits.

"This feature is of least importance compared with the educational value of developing thriftiness among the children, and practically every child interested enough in the savings department to obtain stamps has started a regular savings account."

The bill provides that a savings bank may borrow on any securities rather than sell securities to obtain cash to meet the demand of customers.

Would Establish State Credit Bureau

The state bank examiner would establish a state credit bureau for the protection of the state banks, which he thinks could be handled at $250 a month. The plan is to have the banks furnish the department statements of loans made, registration of commercial paper, etc., as in New York and Michigan. Mr. Chase said:

"Through the bank examiners we could learn of the conditions of all banks in the state. We could know to whom the banks were loaning money and we could warn the

Assets of the University of Minnesota are estimated at $13,225,119, $1,879,740 being in movables and perishable property. Operating expenses for 1912 were $1,354,887, salaries figuring $811,932.

The State Bank of Rapidan is the title of a new Minnesota bank with $10,000 capital and $2,000 surplus. Stock has been subscribed largely by Mankato people.

In its first year the Provident Loan of St. Paul, anti-loan shark company, put out $65,000 in 1,120 loans, rescuing 448 from the clutches of the sharks.

The officers of the society are: C. J. McConville, president; Luther S. Cushing, vice-president; Louis Betz, treasurer; H. W. Parker, secretary, and D. S. Coffee, manager.

George H. Richards of Minneapolis, secretary of the Minnesota State Automobile Association, and President D. C. Armstrong, of Albert Lea, attended the conference of state secretaries and presidents which began Thursday at the LaSalle hotel. Mr. Richards prepared a paper on "The Numerical Transit System."

Minnesota's revenue from the railroads was $14,192,352 greater in 1912 than in 1911. The gross returns from the earnings tax were $105,961,358. The receipts in 1911 were less than in 1910, due to lessened shipments of ore. The record for 1912 is heavier than in any previous year.

One hundred thousand dollars is required for proper supervision of state banks, according to Kelsey S. Chase, the examiner. This is $45,200 more than in 1912. Approximately half the cost of examination is carried by the banks themselves. The examiner asks that a clerk be appointed to accompany the examiner on his visits as his assistant, except in the case of inspections of the smaller banks. According to the report of the superintendent there are 860 state banks, savings banks, trust companies and loan associations which are required by law to be examined twice a year.

"It is impossible," said Mr. Chase, "under present limitations of time and expenditure, thoroughly to accomplish the work. Many of the state institutions cannot be properly examined in two days, in which, under the present condition, the state representative is enabled to spend but a few hours."

The total assets of the banks, trust companies, savings banks and building and loan associations examined by the department aggregate $188,566,526, and the cost of maintaining the department for last year was $54,138. These figures of expenses include a large sum invested in the fixtures of the department not strictly a charge against the cost of examinations for one year.

The First National of Fargo, N. D., celebrated its thirty-fifth anniversery March 1st. The bank began business in 1878, with $11,863 deposits. Ezra B. Eddy was made president and E. C. Eddy cashier. Deposits have reached $3,371,367. The capital is $200,000, and undivided profits more than $65,000. The high point in deposits reached last fall was $4,000,000. Development of the period in the state is hard to realize. When the bank was formed, the Northern Pacific was the only road in the state and went west only to Bismarck. The Red River Valley was sparsely settled. Untamed buffalo and the Indian roamed the prairies where now there are rich settlements and highly cultivated farms. The trails of the traders have become highways. Instead of the wigwam and the council fires of the Indians, church spires, colleges and homes now mark the land. The people through their earnings have become largely independent. The banking business really has been in the lead of the business of the state.

Along with other prosperity has been the growth of the First National. Officers recently elected are: President, E. J. Weiser; vice-president, Fred A. Irish; vice-president, John S. Watson; cashier, G. H. Nesbit; assistant cashier, L. R. Buxton; assistant cashier, Harold Sorenson; assistant cashier, E. G. Clapp.

The directors are as follows: Thomas Baker, Jr., Peter Elliott, L. B. Hanna, F. A. Irish, James Kennedy, R. S. Lewis, Peter Luger, W. O. Olsen, J. W. Smith, John S. Watson, E. J. Weiser.

E. C. Eddy, the first cashier, is deputy county auditor. He still is a depositor in the bank. E. S. Tyler, another orginal director, is a state bank examiner. S. G. Roberts, a charter director, is in California.

The Minnesota senate committee on banks has introduced a bill providing for a state charter commission with power to pass on applications for state bank charters. Under the bill the proposed commission is to be composed of the superintendent of banks, the public examiner and the attorney-general The board is to decide on the fitness of applicants for license for state banks, savings banks, trust companies or building and loan associations.

John H. Hall, cashier of the Union National Bank of Rochester, Minn., is dead at 41 years of age, after a brief illness from pneumonia.

He began with the bank as clerk. He was a member of the board of education and was prominent in civic and social life.

The Farmers State of Rockham, S. D., and the Bank of Rockham have been consolidated under the former name, and the capital increased to $25,000.

F. A. Chamberlain, president of the Security National, has gone to southern France to spend several weeks. He then will go to Paris.

The First National of Aitkin, Minn., is having plans drawn in St. Paul for a tapestry, polychrome terra cotta, portage brownstone building. The interior will be lined with dark brown roman brick.

About $10,000,000 is the increase in Minneapolis bank clearings for February over the same month in 1912. The total was $87,176,262, considered a high figure for so early in the year.

John Hayes, instructor in the commerce course at the University of Wisconsin, son of a La Crosse man, has been appointed a state bank examiner in Wisconsin. On his vacation he was in the State Bank of La Crosse. The appointment was effective March 1st.

L. E. Doudiet, importer, addressed the St. Paul bank clerks last week advocating absolutely free trade and an "importation federation of Germany, England, and the United States to control the world of commerce."

Interest on accounts borrowed to keep the state credit good after the regular funds had been exhausted last summer amounted to $54,708. Heavy gross earnings taxes paid by the railroads have set the state right again. All but $20,000 of a debt of $3,767,529 contracted last September has been paid. Inheritance taxes put Minnesota to the front in interstate assessments. Since Aug. 1, 1912, there has been received $250,892 in taxes on 263 inheritances. Last year the taxes were $678,513. $200,000 more than Iowa reported and $100,000 less than Wisconsin.

SECURITY NATIONAL LETTER

The monthly letter of the Security National, Minneapolis, says: "Some recession in business is to be expected but transactions recently have been so heavy that what would appear to be a material falling off would be nothing more than returning to the normal. Trading has been in excess of consumption and permanently trading can only equal consumption. While we cannot expect to set new records in many lines, it looks at this time as though the year 1913 would give a good account of itself."

Declaring his belief that the city is entering a new era of prosperity, R. T. Daniel, a Spokane pioneer, has invested $60,000 in two pieces of property on Main Avenue, which avenue a group of business men is seeking to make the principal retail street. Mr. Daniel states that faith alone netted him $1,000,000 in Spokane investments extending over the almost incredibly short period of eight years. He said:

"I believe in acting when others quit. In 1883 I bought the property on Riverside and Washington streets, where the Eagle building now stands. Every one told me I paid twice what it was worth, at a time when real estate had not moved for months. Four years later, I purchased a corner on Main Avenue, which the First National Bank had been trying for two years to unload. And I operated on Front Avenue when people thought it was a joke. Yet I cleared in profits about a million dollars in eight years. Spokane is on the verge of a new era of prosperity. No use being blue and discouraged and thinking everything is going to the bow-wows. Spokane is to be a great city—possibly the greatest inland city in the nation. I will stay with it always and be ready to do my part in public improvement."

An enormous deposit of first-class silica has been found 15 miles north of Spokane by George Latshaw and J. B. Carson, according to a statement made by Mr. Latshaw, who says the deposits comprise 5,000,000 tons on a 17-acre area. The silica is all on the surface. The owners have contracted with a Portland (Oregon) firm for 100 tons of the product for use in building a glass house. Clarence J. Smith, cashier of the Northwest Loan and Trust Company, sent samples of the silica to J. I. Arbigast, an experienced glass manufacturer of Pittsburgh, Pa., who has an experimenting plant located at Carnegie, Pa. He received two fine samples of glassware and Mr. Arbigast informed him that the product was of a high grade. Samples also were sent to the geological survey department in Washington, D. C., and a report on the product is expected soon.

Spokane was selected by the executive committee at a meeting in Colville, Wash., as the scene of the annual meeting in May of Group 2 of the Washington Bankers Association. At the executive committee meeting the bankers discussed the back-to-the-farm movement. The following compose the committee: W. R. Baker, Colville; F. J. Wilmer, Rosalia; W. L. Clark, Spokane; T. H. Brewer, Spokane, and E. L. Farnsworth, Wilbur. Among the visitors were the following from Spokane: Charles McLean, W. D. Vincent, R. Lewis Rutter, O. F. Green and E. R. Anderson.

"Banks in reserve cities such as Spokane are required to have a reserve fund of 25 per cent of their total deposits," states R. Lewis Rutter, president of the Spokane Clearing House Association. "With deposits of $31,312,342.63 the reserve of the Spokane banks should be approximately $7,828,085.65. As a matter of fact, the reserve in this city is $11,454,000, leaving a balance seeking investment of $3,625,914.35. However, this excess in reserve must be kept invested in such a way that the loans either on commercial paper, warrants or bonds, must come back in four months to be available to move the crops this coming summer. In other words, the Spokane banks are in the market for short time commercial paper and this same condition prevails in a great number of banks in the Spokane territory."

Dr. C. H. Shattuck, head of the forestry department of the University of Idaho, says research has convinced him there are $30 worth of by-products in the average yellow or white pine stump of the Spokane country. Dr. Shattuck believes means will be evolved whereby enough money will be realized from the stumps to pay the cost of clearing. The products obtainable are valuable commercial commodities such as tar, turpentine, acids, charcoal and shingle stain. Dr. Shattuck estimates the saving of these by-products will double the profits of the lumber business in this section.

Walla Walla Valley Railway has filed a deed of trust between itself and the United States Mortgage and Trust Company, it being agreed that $10,000,000 in bonds are to be issued, the property of the company in Walla Walla and Umatilla counties, both in Washington, being mortgaged. The bonds are to bear date of July 1, 1910, and run 20 years. Officers said the instrument means no new developments here, so far as they know.

Among out-of-the-city bankers in Spokane this week were: J. L. Mohundro, Washington state bank examiner, and C. Hay, deputy state bank examiner; V. W. Pratt, former state bank examiner of Idaho; F. H. Johnson, cashier of the Conrad National Bank of Kalispell, Mont.; George Seal, cashier of the Colville National Bank; Christ Berg, cashier of the State Bank, Svea, Minn.; G. E. Haverstick, assistant cashier of the United States National Bank, Omaha, Neb., and Theodore P. Tollefson, cashier of the Bank of Stites, Stites, Idaho.

EDMONTON NEWS

Twenty by-laws, authorizing the raising of $5,110,821 to be expended to civic purposes, by the sale of debentures, ranging in periods of from eight to forty years at 5 per cent interest, were sanctioned by the rate payers of Edmonton at a special election on February 24th. The vote was the largest ever polled in the city. A by-law to provide for the raising of $240,413 for the Miseracordia hospital was defeated by a vote of more than five to one. The purposes for which the money will be expended are as follows:

Civic buildings, $109,500; street cleaning plant, $58,400; horses and equipment, $37,960; market buildings, $110,960; extensions to municipal power plant, $484,720; extending municipal telephone system, $848,260; university of Alberta, $150,380; purchase from the provincial government of telephone system within city boundaries, $168,386; lands for warehouse and storage yards, $19,466; tools and equipment, engineering and waterworks departments, $15,692; lands for general unspecified purposes (street widening), $675,980; police signal service, $7,300; lands for fire stations, $4,866; extending and equipping the municipal street railway system, $1,543,220; four combined police and fire stations, $84,680; equipment for fire department, $85,166; fire alarm system, $6,813; completing and furnishing the civic office building, $30,660; extending the municipal electric lighting system, $453,086; Royal Alexandra hospital, $225,326.

The board of city commissioners, which recently sold $55,000 debentures paying 5 per cent interest, at 96 through the Imperial Bank, and authorized the sale of $1,228,000 by the same bank at a price not less than the foregoing, has asked the council for instructions in respect to the sale of debenture issues for 1913. The commissioners also reported receiving a request from the London agencies for an option of 10 days on 5 per cent debentures at 96. The report was referred to the finance and assessment committee and the commissioners. Mayor Short announces that civic improvements and betterments, involving about $10,000,000, will be undertaken during 1913, work to begin early this spring. The civic expenditures last year amounted to nearly $7,000,000.

Hon. Malcom McKenzie, provincial treasurer, said in the course of a discussion upon an act to incorporate the Canada Union Assurance Company of Calgary, in the private bills committee of the legislature in Edmonton, that while there are no intentions at present of introducing a general provincial insurance act this session, the necessary protection could be afforded meanwhile by raising the amount of deposit required in the case of hail insurance companies and making it binding upon all insurance companies. Three companies are operating under an act, passed by the last legislature, permitting companies to write hail insurance. The government requires a deposit of $10,000 from each company to protect the insured. No deposit is required from fire or other insurance companies. The incorporators of the Canada Union Assurance Company are W. A. Lowry, W. R. McKerlie, E. M. Whitley and James Fleming of Calgary. Capitalization is fixed at $500,000. The committee raised the amount required to be subscribed from $100,000 to $150,000 before the company can do business. A. G. Mackay, for the company, reports that $140,000 of the capital stock has been subscribed.

The city council of Edmonton has adopted the recommendation of the board of commissioners regarding assessing for local improvements, so that in the future the cost will be borne by properties abutting on the work. No portion of the cost will be borne by the city at large, as formerly was the case, for intersections of pavings, sidewalks, grading and boulevard work. The commissioners also recommended that the frontage rate for improvements be fixed at thirteen cents per foot instead of six cents as at present. This, they believe, will be sufficient for the next five years. Mayor Short suggested that in the future funds should be provided prior to the beginning of any work, but the commissioners say that while they are agreed to the proposal, they believe that a change this year would result in curtailing many improvements demanded by the public.

Delegates to the annual convention of the Alberta Association of Builders Exchanges which met in Edmonton, February 24th to 26th, requested alterations in the employers liability act. J. A. Trimble of Medicine Hat, president of the organization, said in his address that definite action should be taken at once to obtain amendments to existing legislation. Certain forms of unionism also were condemned and J. C. Lucier, a prominent contractor of Medicine Hat and Lethbridge, was expelled for signing an agreement with the bricklayers union at the first named place, contrary to the rule of the exchange. Mr. Lucier's offense was paying 90 cents an hour, whereas the rate adopted by the exchange permitted only a maximum of 67½ cents. He did this, it was explained, to have certain work completed on time. The resolution prohibiting members from entering into agreements with unionized labor, which was adopted at the Lethbridge convention in 1912, was endorsed this year. The association has petitioned the attorney-general's office to amend the present lien act extending the time of foreclosure from 90 days, as at present, to a year.

Probably the most ambitious program ever outlined in any province or commonwealth on the North American continent has been undertaken by the department of education of Alberta. The plan calls for the erection of a schoolroom and the installing of a teacher every work day in the year for six consecutive years, the organization of a school district every four days in each week of the year for six years and to assist in financing the projects and providing text books and giving other assistance. There were 2,029 school districts in Alberta at the close of 1912, as against 748 in 1906. Many schools have been erected in various districts, also in the larger cities, such as Calgary, Edmonton, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat. It is given out by the department that when the plan is carried out fully, Alberta will have the most advanced, practical school system in Canada, as well as the most economical in the country.

A. Davidson of the Robertson-Davidson Company, owners of Beverley Heights, a suburb of Edmonton on the east, has submitted a proposition to the city council to pay the cost of building an extension of the branch of the municipal electric street railway from the Highlands to the east boundaries of Beverley Heights and "such further distance as we may desire on the same terms," and guarantee operating expenses for eighteen months and then turn the line over to the city free of charge. The firm agrees to deposit the amount of money required to build and operate the line, in a chartered bank, within twenty-four hours after the agreement is signed, the extension to be completed and in operation no later than September 1, 1913, and to give at least hourly service. The Highlands branch, two miles, costing $24,000, was paid for by the Magrath-Holgate Company, owners of the district, who also guaranteed the city against loss for eighteen months of operation. A report for the first six months showed a profit of $792 over operating expenses.

Work will be started this spring on the extension of the Sixth Avenue South line of the Edmonton radial railway, municipal owned, for 2,960 feet further west than Seventh Street West in carrying out the amalgamation agreement with Strathcona. The council adopted the recommendation of the superintendent of street railways.

A. B. Kenny of the firm of Robert H. Kenny & Son, Ottawa, who is in Edmonton on a tour of investigation, reports that the outlook is bright for large investments of eastern capital in western Canada this year, saying also that money will be easier within the next sixty days. There is no difficulty, he added, in obtaining funds for good investment.

Mayor William Short has received advices from Calgary that the western section of the Canadian National Association of Builders Exchanges will meet in Edmonton early in 1914. The date will be determined by the executive committee. P. L. Fraser is secretary of the association.

While boring for coal near Edson, a divisional point on the Grand Trunk Pacific railway west of Edmonton, to locate the main beds that crop out on the river bank there, an extensive deposit of commercial gravel was found. The importance of this discovery lies in the fact that gravel is a scarce commodity along the railway line between Edmonton and the foothills of the Rockies, and the railroad contractors have been obliged to haul ballast many miles, also building spur tracks of from eight to fourteen miles to reach the deposits.

This new Burroughs Adding-Subtracting Machine is the sensation of the year among banks.
It prints dates—adds Deposits, subtracts Checks—gives Old and New Balance, and automatically marks Overdrafts—it eliminates all mental effort required in balancing the individual ledger.
It is absolutely automatic—and absolutely accurate.
The Cleveland National Bank say what appeals to them most is the "rapidity, neatness and accuracy," and they do in less than 3 hours, work that formerly took 8 hours, a day.
The Peoples Trust and Savings Bank have two of these machines and say "they will pay for themselves in about a year."
The National City Bank of Chicago is saving fully 50 per cent on statement work with the same style machine.
Besides the extraordinary work of direct subtracting—of handling your statement work and automatically getting the new balance,—this machine will also do all the work of a regular Burroughs.
We have forms showing work done by different banks on this Burroughs, also a little booklet, "Reconciling an Individual Account," which describes some of its possibilities.
Ask for this booklet and for Systems Form No. 551, or let us show you in your office without cost or obligation, the possibilities of this new Burroughs.

Although the court refused to grant Leslie M. Shaw further time in which to come across with the $400,000 which he bid for the Atlantic North and South Railroad, Shaw again was the highest bidder when the property was put for sale a second time. His bid this time was $390,000.

Des Moines, March 7th.—The state convention of the Iowa Bankers Association will be held in Des Moines, May 27th and 28th. This was decided at a conference at which an almanac was studied closely. It was found that previous engagements would keep the convention from meeting in June, unless it would be held off until the third week. This was decided to be too late so that the earlier dates were chosen. Last year the convention was held June 5th and 6th at Cedar Rapids. President Van Liew of the Des Moines Clearing House Association has named as the entertainment committee: Harry Blackburn, of the Iowa National; Leo Stevens of the Century Savings; George Richter, Capital City State. Thus far Secretary P. W. Hall has secured only one speaker definitely. This is Governor Clarke. Gov. Clarke had an engagement for the 28th and Secretary Hall regards himself as fortunate in being able to secure the governor for the opening day. The governor says he will not discuss financial matters, which in the opinion of Secretary Hall is a good thing.

Group Meetings

Des Moines bankers who attended the group meetings at Keokuk and Waterloo report that both were splendidly attended and highly enthusiastic. The main feature at Keokuk was the inspection of the big dam across the Mississippi there. The program for this meeting was given in an earlier letter. The meeting at Waterloo opened up strong with a smoker the night before the program. The sessions Saturday morning were held at the Elks hall with Chairman Hakes in charge. H. M. Harwood of Iowa City spoke on "Iowa's Assets." Allen D. Albert of Minneapolis spoke on "Government by Public Opinion." There was an interesting round-table discussion and at 2 o'clock the banquet was served at the Ellis Hotel. The banks and trust companies of Waterloo were hosts. Toasts were given by Emmons Johnson of the Leavitt and Johnson Trust Co., Waterloo; John Large and Alfred Longley of Waterloo. The toastmaster was L. S. Cass of Waterloo. The visitors were guests at a Majestic Theater party in the evening.

Des Moines Visitors

The recess taken by the legislators has reduced somewhat the number of bankers seen in Des Moines recently. Moreover, the arrival of the first of March means much business in the average country bank and the financiers have been staying close to their places of business. Among those who have called upon Des Moines institutions recently were: Vice-president E. D. Rayburn, First National, Montezuma; Cashier J. P. Laughlin, Bank of Bevington; Cashier F. H. Arts, German-American, Cairo; Cashier J. H. Van Scoy, First National, Rippey; Cashier W. H. Stanley, Indianola Banking Company; President Roger Leavitt, Cedar Falls National; Vice-president W. P. Foster, First National, Burlington; President Lafe Collins, City National, Knoxville; Cashier E. K. Burkett, Bank of Granger; President John Cooper, Boone National; Cashier N. H. Senator to Discuss Public Utility Bill

Senator L. E. Crist of Osceola will be the speaker at the March meeting of the Des Moines Bankers Club. Senator Crist is the father of a bill placing regulation of the public utilities in the hands of a state commission and it is that subject which he will discuss. He is an attorney. The bankers decided to hear from several legislators on subjects dear to their hearts. Last month, Senator Clarkson spoke on the employers' liability bill which he has espoused.

Waterloo Banker to Retire

F. E. McElhinney, president of the Blackhawk National at Waterloo, has startled the natives by announcing that he is going to retire—and that at the age of 42. Mr. McElhinney has been most successful and has amassed a fortune. He says he is going to enjoy it while he is able to do so, and he has planned to go to Europe with his wife and two daughters this coming summer. He retains his holdings at Waterloo, it is said. Mr. McElhinney says too many men stick at their desks until they get too old to have real pleasure out of their earnings.

Lively Legislative Fight Expected

It is apparent that the Iowa legislature has launched upon the second half of the session with some of the biggest scraps still ahead. The tax commission question has not yet come up, and there is no doubt from letters and petitions that are reaching the legislators that here is a live issue. The farmers are declaring that the report of the state tax commission and its recommendations are discriminatory against them. Consequently they have been asking for its defeat even before it has been properly presented in committee room. The law enacted at the last assembly which provided for a flat tax of five mills on moneys and credits already has been attacked. Bills have been presented in both senate and house asking for the repeal of this law and the enactment instead of a law providing for the taxation of moneys and credits on 20 per cent of the actual value. This would place moneys and credits on the same basis as bank stock for taxation purposes.

Bank Finds Finger Print System Satisfactory

The Des Moines Savings, which adopted the finger print system of identification some months ago, has found the scheme eminently satisfactory. It is stated that foreigners regard the new system as fine, because they think the bank is taking all possible pains to make their deposits safe. Some civilians who are not well posted balk a little at the idea. They think it is a sort of a method of putting them in the rogues' gallery.

Iowa Law Upheld

Judge A. B. Thornell at Council Bluffs has upheld the Iowa law providing for the taxation of national bank stock against the individual stockholders in an opinion in which he overrules the claims of the First National of Council Bluffs. The bank claimed that the law passed by the Iowa legislature discriminated against moneyed capital invested in national bank stock and violated the act of congress dealing with the subject and it sought to have its 1911 assessment set aside. The bank will appeal to the supreme court and if defeated there, will go on to the United States supreme court.

Des Moines Clearings Increase

As an evidence of growth in Des Moines, the clearing house association shows that the clearings for the month of February increased $1,808,315.07 over the clearings for the corresponding month last year. The total for the month in 1913 was $18,568,176.48.

Des Moines Banker Resigns

Fred Risser, for five years cashier of the Central State in Des Moines, has resigned that position. Grant McPherrin, president of the Drake Park Bank and one of the best known financiers in Iowa has been chosen his successor. Mr. McPherrin retains his holdings in the Drake Park Bank and E. A. Tyler, cashier of that institution, will be active manager. Mr. Risser announces that he has his eye on the controlling interest in a bank in one of the smaller cities in Iowa and that he expects to be located therein within a short time.

Iowa Notes

The power of example was seen in the juvenile courts at Des Moines recently, when a lad of eleven stood before the court charged with forgery. The boy said that he had watched his mother write checks, and discovered that it was an easy way to make money. So he had given the process a trial.

Frank Deklotz, for fifteen years manager and owner of the Bank of Kirkman, was presented with a handsome chair by friends and neighbors upon the eve of his removal to Idaho. He sold the bank the first of December and it now is the Kirkman Savings. It is announced that the institution will put in a new front and otherwise modernize its appearance.

J. J. Merrill, prominent with the Mason City Brick and Tile Company, has joined with J. E. Moore, formerly of Mason City, in the purchase of the Citizens Bank at Saratoga, Fla. They will change the institution to the First National and prepare to accept the deposits of Mrs. Potter Palmer, who makes her winter home at that place.

Word came to friends at Charles City that A. M. Hauser, formerly of that place, has been made vice-president of the First National at Anamoose, N. D., and director of the Lincoln Valley State. He left the Commercial National at Charles City three years ago to become cashier of the Anamoose institution.

Word from Washington announces the approval of the application to organize the Security National at Mason City with a capital stock of $100,000. Also the application to organize the Citizens National at Fort Madison. The latter likewise will have a capitalization of $100,000. It is possible that this bank will merge with the German American. President will be Maurice Wahwer; vice-president and manager, John Shephard; cashier, H. J. Kennedy.

The corporate existence of the Farmers National at Osage has been extended to February 23, 1933.

Fred Sehmann, Jr., has resigned as secretary to Superintendent J. A. Wagner of the Des Moines Union Railway, Des Moines, to become identified with the Empire Trust Co. at Fort Worth, Texas.

The new Dike Savings has procured a charter, and is ready for business. Carson Plaeham is president; W. G. Strayer, vice-president; George Jepson, cashier.

Frank B. Miller, the popular cashier of the Cedar Falls National at Cedar Falls, has been taking an active interest in agricultural development, and as a result was chosen secretary of the Farmers University, which holds yearly sessions in that city.

Mrs. Anna Michaels, who was arrested at Mason City along with Ollie Pickett who was dressed as a woman, was fined $300 for forgery. Relatives paid the fine and it is supposed she joined Pickett, who had been taken to Kansas City to answer charges there.

It appears that there is quite a scramble among Iowa democrats for plums under the Wilson administration. Candidates for national bank examiners in this state include Charles J. Duff of Council Bluffs; James F. Hart of Des Moines; A. J. Sourwine of Red Oak and Alphoz Brunning of Davenport.

The Kellogg Savings is the name of a new bank formed at Kellogg. The capital stock is $25,000. E. J. Birchard, F. V. Morgan, O. J. Turner and Henry W. Wulf are the incorporators.

The First National at Terrill now is in its handsome new brick building.

VICTOR HOTEL COMPANY, Limited

C. A. Hollingsworth, President NEW YORK CITY

Other stockholders have purchased the stock in the First National at Pocahontas formerly owned by C. S. and B. L. Allen of Laurens.

W. E. Bond has severed his connection with the First National at Cumberland.

The Winfield State has rounded out its twentieth year at Winfield, and under the wise management of James Green and H. S. Young has started on another twenty-year stretch.

The Security Trust and Savings at Charles City has increased its capital stock from $100,000 to $150,000.

C. C. Clements has succeeded S. E. Rowland as cashier of the First National and the Iowa County Loan and Savings at Marengo.

The Valley Savings at Missouri Valley has added a handsome new directors' room, also a new private office.

C. C. Earnist has disposed of a portion of his stock in the Riceville State, and retires as active manager after twenty-five years. C. F. Bartlett made the purchase.

Rumors have it that the Valley National, Des Moines, soon is to construct a new bank building to make room for its increasing business. The institution enlarged only two or three years ago and already feels the need of more space.

Miss Tressa McElhinney has been elected president of the Citizens State at Goldfield. She is said to be the only woman bank president in Iowa. Her father successfully guided the institution for many years.

The Scott County Savings at Davenport is the first institution in that city to install an interpreter. He speaks German, French, Greek and Bulgarian.

South Dakota Notes

Governor Byrne has been taking an active part in the movement for a law guaranteeing bank deposits. He has been making it plain that he is in favor of some measure of this sort. The governor has let it be known that a bill of this sort should not be passed without proper consideration and the fullest investigation.

The First State at Kingsburg has been granted a charter and is under way with the capital stock of $10,000. D. R. Brown is president; W. J. Brown, vice-president, and Henry Schneider, cashier.

No arrests have been made following the looting of the Owanka State at Owanka some months ago. The robbers secured $1,400. Detectives know that the men were professionals, but have not secured sufficient evidence to make an arrest.

The First State at White Owl has adopted a plan of shipping in dairy cattle for its patrons and the farmers in general who are getting started in that section.

The Farmers State and the Bank of Rockham, both located in the latter place, have consolidated, increased their capital stock to $25,000 and adopted the name of the former.

The Farmers State at Kadoka has purchased the Kadoka State with C. L. Millette of Fort Pierre as president. The Kadoka State and the Bank of Kadoka consolidated about a year ago. The Farmers State organized since that time.

Charles Medinnis has resigned as assistant cashier in the Valley State at Lake Andes.

Albert Strom has been added to the employes of the First State at Ipswich.

Bank deposits in Cavalier county, N. D., are reported from Langdon to be 30 per cent higher than a year ago. With four small banks not reporting the total is $2,531,829.

Believes That Banks Should Have Directors Who Direct

Kelsey S. Chase, Minnesota's efficient superintendent, believes that bank directors should be thoroughly conversant with the affairs of their institutions

Three thousand eight hundred bank directors in Minnesota should give more attention to their work in the opinion of the state bank examiner, Kelsey S. Chase, in his biennial report. The banks the examiner finds in poor condition, he has discovered, are those where the directors display lack of interest and depend too much on the cashier or managing officer. He warned that hereafter in case of trouble the director is to be understood as knowing as much of the bank affairs as he should know. The department expresses itself as not opposed to chain banks as honesty of the men is the principal consideration. The report points out that banks owned and managed by one man usually are the safest, but that where a cashier is employed with only nominal interest and the directors own only a few shares each, a one-man bank usually is full of errors. The department favors directors' meetings at least bi-monthly where assets are less than $100,000 and monthly otherwise. Mr. Chase in his report says each of the examiners meets with as many of the directors as he can persuade to attend a meeting each time an examination of a bank is made. It is important that the directors be present when the examiner desires to inspect and investigate the notes and bills, and it is equally important that the directors give the examiner their honest and candid opinion as to the worth of each note. The examiner is a comparative stranger in the locality where the bank is located and usually knows nothing of the worth of any of the makers of the notes which he examines. He must, of necessity, depend upon the judgment of the board of directors who meet and go over the notes with him. If the directors for one minute forget their responsibility and are not frank and open with the examiner and willing to place in his possession all information both favorable and unfavorable, and, if you please, think too covetously of dividends which they will not receive if poor assets are charged off and dread that possibly an assessment will be levied, then remember if the directors assume that attitude they are not of any assistance to the examiner, but a stumbling block and barrier which an examiner cannot overcome unless he realizes the directors' disposition. Without the wholehearted co-operation of the board of directors the value of an examination is minimized.

"Our efforts to enthuse the directors, and there are about 3,800 of them," said Mr. Chase, "have borne fruit and we believe the directors as a whole are beginning to realize something of the responsibility which is theirs."

In order that the examiners may have the attendance of the directors or at least half of them when an examination is made, it is essential that most of the board be composed of local men. The department is not opposed, however, to banks controlled by a set of bankers who are interested in a number of banks. There has been a great deal said against "chain banks," but there are elements of strength also which should be considered. A dishonest man, or set of men, is dangerous if in control of one bank or many banks, but a man or group of men who are good bankers and give the banks in which they are interested the benefit of their experience and advice, are an asset of any institution.

It is important, however, that a majority of a board of directors be men who live in the locality where the bank is located so that they can meet among themselves frequently, and with the examiner when he comes.

The banks which are the source of the most worry and concern to the department are the ones whose stock is widely scattered and no stockholder owns more than three to five shares. The result is that no stockholder or director is sufficiently interested to devote much time to the affairs of the bank and the management is left to the cashier, and this kind of one-man management is bad. Some of the banks which are owned and managed by one man are among the best managed banks of the state, but when a cashier is employed at so much per month with a nominal or no-stock interest and each of the directors with only a few shares, you usually will find a one-man bank full of faults and defects. You will find that the directors meet rarely if at all except to declare dividends, and give no attention to the bank's affairs. You will find that there is no discount or examining committee of any value and that the entire business is left to the cashier. Under such circumstances the bank is good or bad in the same way and in the same proportion as the cashier is good or bad.

The depositors in a bank ought not to be obliged to depend on the judgment and integrity of one man and especially one man who has only his job at stake if his poor judgment should cripple the institution. It is for this reason that we have tried to bring home to the directors in state banks that they have a duty to perform and that it must be performed well.

Some directors have complained that they could not meet with the board more than once in six months and others have said they could not conveniently attend except at the annual meeting. (This was for the purpose of declaring the annual dividend, I suppose.) Can anyone imagine what such men construe their duties as directors to be? Certainly they cannot expect to do what the name of their office implies they should do. The men subscribe to an oath that they will diligently and honestly administer the affairs of the bank; they permit their names to be printed and spread broadcast, fully expecting that the character and standing of the board of directors will entice new accounts and inspire customers with confidence as much or more than the published financial statement.

The director who strives to do his duty is in full sympathy with the requirement that all directors either direct or resign. The conscientious director is entitled to the co-operation of every other director on the same board and should have the assurance that no other kind of directors will be tolerated.

The department is in favor of a law requiring that directors' meetings be held at least bi-monthly in banks with assets less than $100,000 and monthly in all other banks, and that any director who did not attend fifty per cent of the meetings of the board during the year would be ineligible to hold the office of director for a term of three years. The public has no way of knowing that a director is inactive or indifferent. The days of using a prominent name as an advertising medium are gone, for a dummy director has no place on the directorate of a state bank in Minnesota.

After mature reflection, can anyone believe that any reputable man would want his name used for advertising purposes unless he also is willing to assume all the responsibilities which go with the office? There is no bank in this state which is giving the superintendent of banks the least concern where the directors are conscientiously doing their full duty, and every bank which has been troublesome to the department of banking has been characterized by lack of proper attention on the part of the board of directors.

Our present law requires that the board of directors shall appoint from its members an examining committee, who shall examine into the condition of the bank at least semi-anually and report to the superintendent of banks all assets which are carried in excess of their actual value.

There are many banks in this state which have but three directors and the cashier or managing officer many times is one of the examining committee. This should be made impossible by the enactment of a proper law with a provision that a stockholder who is not a director could be a member of the examining committee. Indeed it would be much more reasonable to have a principal depositor on such a committee than an active officer. It would seem that an examination of this kind is for the purpose of having an independent check on the management. A cashier who is quite likely more accomplished in figures than the others on the committee easily could conceal worthless notes and would be taking small chances in juggling the figures. Should not an active officer be prevented from participating and assisting the other directors in their examinations?

In this connection your attention is called to the incongruity of an examining committee composed of the president and cashier, both active in the bank, examining and investigating a bank's affairs. The utter worthlessness of a directors' examination under such circumstances is too apparent to need argument. The fact that many banks of this character are well managed does not alter the fact that the depositors in such banks are not surrounded with the safeguards to which they are entitled, and we would seriously recommend that a law be enacted requiring that four examinations be made by the examiners of this department each year, of any bank which has a board of directors two-thirds of which are composed of the active officers of that bank.

The laws of our state place certain restrictions and limitations upon the making of loans by the officers of banks, but these restrictions and limitations are removed so far as the liability of the endorsers of the paper is concerned when such paper is sold to the bank by the person who actually owns it. No doubt that this reasonable provision in excepting commercial paper from the usual restrictions surrounding loans facilitates the transaction of legitimate business and should be continued in effect. The privilege, has, however, been abused in a number of instances where the officers and directors of banks have become interested financially in enterprises. Cases arise where the officers and influential directors are endeavoring to sell land, and in carrying on their business in a perfectly legitimate manner are obliged to take on a great many land contracts and second mortgages. The temptation is great to unload these securities and secure the cash with which to purchase more land. Usually there is a first mortgage ahead and the bank is loaded with second class loans. The practice is a vicious one and should be stopped by timely legislation. Officers and directors of banks should not be permitted to negotiate, in their own banks, the paper which they have acquired in this way.

The right of a state or government to delegate a public officer to examine into the business and affairs of a bank or other quasi public institution is not now seriously questioned. The past twenty years have witnessed a marvelous change in the attitude of government toward corporaions, and we might say an equally marvelous change of view of quasi public corporations toward government. The supervision of banks by some officer representing the state is the usual condition and accepted as a matter of course. There are but two or three states at the present time that do not assume and exercise the right to legislate as to how banks shall be managed, and the business conducted, and provide for officers whose duties are to examine, investigate and ascertain that the laws are obeyed and that the business of banking is carried on in a safe and sane manner. Some states have made better preparations to carry on this work than others and a banking law which would be entirely satisfactory in states which have just assumed the supervision of banks would fail to meet the demands in states which have had the benefit of highly efficient bank supervision. The thoroughness of the examination is the test as to whether the supervision is or is not efficient.

Good laws are, of course, necessary. Capable men must be employed, who are interested in their work. But both laws and men of the right kind cannot definitely ascertain the true condition of a bank unless they have sufficient time at their disposal to determine accurately the value of the assets of a bank and the amount of the liabilities. The person who is charged with the enforcement of the banking laws and the responsibility of supervising banks may strive with ability and zeal for effective examinations, but the practical results will be limited by the information which the examiners in the field glean and what they can accomplish while making an examination.

The accurate determination of the extent of the liabilities and worth of the assets cannot be done by a mere scanning of the books and perusal of the notes. All of the conditions and influences surrounding the carrying on of the business must be taken into consideration as well as the ability and integrity of the officers. The methods employed by the management and the question as to whether the directors are giving their attention to the bank's affairs all must be weighed by the examiner in coming to a conclusion.

There is an idea quite prevalent in some quarters that a bank examiner is an auditor, a bookkeeper, perhaps one who can dexterously compile an elaborate set of figures and probably check up the clerical mistakes which have been made by the help in the bank. It is only right that the minds of people should be disabused of any such idea.

A man may be a capable accountant and able to add up columns upon columns of figures, he may be a beautiful penman, and an auditor of high rank, and in addition to this, popular with the bankers in his district, but if he cannot accurately gauge values, absorb the atmosphere of the bank, if you please, if he cannot determine, if sufficient time is at his disposal, whether the bank is or is not solvent, that man is not nor never will be a bank examiner.

On the other hand you may have the best examiner that can be had, and if on account of the volume of work and lack of time he is required to skimp his work, accurate results can not, nor will they be obtained. The kind of examinations which the depositors want, nay more, are entitled to, is the kind made by an examiner who knows his business and has the time to do his work thoroughly. The examiner must have the courage to enforce the law and the time to "stay on the job" until conditions which should be corrected are corrected. He must have confidence in his own judgment so that he cannot be swerved from his insistence that wrongs must be righted, that the officers and directors do their duty and the business be conducted in accordance with safe, sound and conservative banking principals, but he must not be so pressed for time nor hurried while making an examination that it is necessary for him to consult his railway time-table while examining the bills and notes, or to listen anxiously for the whistle of the train while addressing the board of directors.

PRESIDENT WILSON AND THE AMERICAN INSTITUTE OF BANKING

President Byron W. Moser of the American Institute of Banking is in receipt of a letter from President Wilson which reads as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Moser:

"Your telegram of congratulation sent on behalf of the American Institute of Banking has given me deep pleasure. I feel that the business of politics is, when properly conceived, so interwoven with the whole business of society that it can be successfully conducted only when there is a thorough common understanding. I therefore particularly value the confidence and support of bodies like your own, and hope most sincerely that the affairs of the country may now be released from cross purposes and misunderstandings.

Sincerely yours,
WOODROW WILSON."

A DISCOVERY IN FARMING

The Northwestern National at Minneapolis has been advocating more live stock on the farms and has made a discovery. The one-year-lease plan precludes anything but one-year grain crops. The bank is doing a vast work and President Decker is sitting up nights to convince the farmer he should have more live stock.

The building of the First National of Cherokee, Okla., was totally destroyed by fire. It will be rebuilt at once.

country or the education of the farmer and stockman towards that result.

A COMMITTEE was appointed to prepare and send out to all banks in the three states mentioned and to various associations reaching farmers and stockmen, literature embodying the sentiments and results of the conference. The committee named consists of Messrs. J. W. Wheeler, St. Paul; J. E. Platt, Clark, S. D.; P. A. Pickett, Lead, N. D.; T. A. Cooper, Fargo, N. D.

IN connection with the decrease in cattle, a very interesting statement made by the agricultural commissioner of the Rock Island system recently was that cornstalks made into ensilage were worth 60 per cent of the value of the grain, and that by wasting their stalks the farmers of this country were losing $1,000,000,000 a year.

THEY are using every effort in Minnesota to have a county agent bill, which provides state aid of $1,000.00 for each of fifty counties, providing the county would assess itself a similar amount, to employ an expert demonstrator to work along the lines of the work being done in North Dakota by the Better Farming Association. Seven counties in Minnesota already are doing this work by voluntary assessments.

SCHENECTADY SAVINGS has printed for the third time the largest bank ad ever seen in the United States.

THE advertisement covered ten pages and was a complete transcript of the depositors books—giving number of the book and the amount of deposit.

IT also gave a list of investments in bonds, mortgages, etc., in detail, and reported on its School Savings Department, which has been quite a success.

IT was a complete audit of the affairs of that institution showing the balance on each and every account, each account being listed by number, and any depositor could look up his or her account by referring to the number on the pass book.

THE bank is the depository for the school savings system which has been adopted by the board of education in that city. As yet this idea is only in its infancy, having been started in Schenectady during September of last year at the opening of the school term. It is growing rapidly, however, and promises to become an important factor in the future.

ANOTHER new and interesting departure of the savings bank is the junior department, which is already well known to many Schenectady children who are learning the art of saving at an early age, the average age being eleven years, and the average deposit being 30 cents.

SO far as we know the Schenectady Savings holds several enviable records. Deposits are close to nine millions.

"SECOND Annual Conference of State Bankers Associations" is the high-sounding title under which a dozen state secretaries and two-thirds as many state presidents met in Chicago at the expense of "the entertaining banks."

THE state associations as such probably had no knowledge of it. President John D. Phillips of Illinois did not appear even in face of the entertainment lure.

KENTUCKY passed it up entirely and the lonesome secretaries represented the states of Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and North Dakota.

THE presidents "also came" from Indiana, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Nebraska, Ohio, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

THE little army of patriots allowed some one grandiloquently to describe it on the printed program as:

"THE thirteen original states initiating a movement for co-operation between the State Bankers Associations in the different divisions of the country and their final amalgamation in a national federation, which will afford greater advantages for all the banks in the United States."

NO Chicago banker appeared on the program although a number of absentees were listed. There were talks or papers on "Monetary Legislation," "The Sherman Act," "Financial Legislation," "Credit Information," "Federal Taxation," "Mortgage Banks," "Loaning upon Real Estate," "State Clearing Houses," "Use of Transit Numbers," "Blue Sky Legislation," but not even one little squeak on the duties of a secretary.

"PRESIDENTS of associations are expected to take part in the discussion," the funny, pretentious program said. If the Pujo committee ever sees the above-the-clouds program all the secretaries will be summoned for examination.

NOTHING in the funny papers is equal to it. The delegates were to go to the theater with the "junior officers of the entertaining banks" and to lunch with the "senior officers of the entertaining banks."

JUST before his pipe went out the program fiend printed in black face type that "Other Divisions of the Country in Which It Is Suggested the State Bankers Associations Meet for Organization at an Early Date."

THEN followed four separate lists of states which are to "confer" and the names of the cities in which they are to meet. This hasn't been made obligatory as yet?

CASHIER.

NATIONAL CITY BANK LETTER

The March financial letter of the National City Bank of Chicago says of western conditions that "business in the West keeps up well and there are good grounds for taking a favorable view of the future. The railroads still are handling a traffic which shows heavy gains over last year. There is some unrest of labor, and it is evident that the railroads are to have a serious struggle before long with all classes of labor which they employ. As soon as the wages of one set of men are advanced, applications come from other classes of labor, with the result that the unions soon make aggregate demands which virtually are impossible for the railroads to accede to on the basis of the prevailing rates which they now are allowed to impose. The railroads are up against a situation where the Interstate Commerce Commission forbids them to raise freight rates, and where the labor unions threaten to put them out of business unless they receive increased pay. It would seem, therefore, of the highest importance for congress to investigate this whole matter, so that some fair and satisfactory basis of settling such disputes may be arrived at. The situation has come to be almost intolerable for the reason that every few months some fresh demand for higher pay is made by the men under penalty of engaging in a general strike which would imperil both life and property."

SHE is doing it all right. I append herewith the last government report on the situation as relates to population, business and banking establishments, output, etc. It shows your inquiry was well founded.

THEY did this in Alabama with fine effect.

F. E. FARRELL and wife of Jacksonville are at Fort Myers, Fla., where Mr. Farrell is recuperating from an illness which had lasted several weeks.

GRANT McPHERRIN of the Drake Park Bank, suburban to Des Moines, has accepted the cashiership of the Central State in Des Moines, the strong institution of which the veteran Simon Cassidy is president. Mr. McPherrin's brother-in-law took charge of his interests in the private institution.

MR. McPHERRIN is a man of means as well as a "desirable" banker and citizen and eventually will acquire substantial holdings in the Central State, the shares of which are in good demand at 300 with a book value of 170.

PRESIDENT JOHN D. PHILLIPS of the Illinois Bankers Association has been "on tour" lately with a vim which suggests that he must have picked up an Edens itinerary.

PRESIDENT PHILLIPS spoke at the Farmers Institute at Delavan; worked hard at the Springfield conference on education and agriculture, and later addressed the Farmers and Grain Dealers at Jacksonville.

AT present he is giving time to the program for the Chicago convention of his association, hoping to pull it off before the A. B. A. talkfest at Boston.

WE do not wish to tell tales out of school, but with even fair luck President Phillips will give Illinois another record breaking convention to remember and talk about.

THE bankers of Chicago will be active hosts. The visitors will bring their wives in great numbers, owing to the certainty of good hotel accommodations and the fame of Chicago as a shopping center and summer resort.

WE hear that the Honorable Train Committee—Messrs. Crandall, Edens and Farrell—has conspired with George Thompson in the matter of going to Briarcliff.

NATURALLY Thompson is prejudiced in favor of the "Twentieth Century" and it has been decided to go via the Lake Shore to the May meeting "the week of May 5th."

THE train will be a duplicate of the famous Century, precisely as last year. All compartment cars will be used, leaving Chicago on Saturday, behind the Century, and arriving at Briarcliff Lodge on Sunday morning in time for church or golf—just as you've been raised.

RESERVATIONS may be made as usual through THE CHICAGO BANKER, any agent of the railway or through any member of the committee.

ROUND trip tickets will be sold, but are not obligatory nor any cheaper. It is a gentleman's arrangement throughout.

NOW that Taft and Roosevelt are both off the public pay-roll, let the secret come out. Each went on the public pay-roll at 21 years of age and both kept on until they began coppering each other's bets. Then the end.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS is to be the "high gun" on the Minnesota program in July this year. Chapman gets the credit of making the catch.

PRESIDENT E. W. DECKER'S cattle conference, held last week at Minneapolis, was attended by forty bankers and business men. He believes in using the farmer's credit to increase the live stock; in cutting it down if he doesn't do it.

IT was found to be the sense of the meeting that efforts be made through better farming associations and the medium of the bankers' associations of Minnesota, North and South Dakota, to disseminate facts and figures to members of those associations regarding the existing conditions.

BILLS now before the legislatures of Minnesota, North and South Dakota relating to state and county appropriations for demonstration work among the farmers were discussed at length and resolutions unanimously were adopted endorsing these bills and recommending their passage.

DURING the discussion it was brought out that one of the prime reasons for the decrease in live stock is the fact that many calves and young cattle are being marketed and slaughtered instead of being retained on the farm and grown to maturity. The fact that in some countries it is prohibited by law to market young and growing female cattle illustrates the need of similar restraint in this

The CHICAGO BANKER

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking and Financial Interests of the Middle West

MARCH 15, 1913 | Entered as Second-Class Matter January 15, 1903, at the Post Office at Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879 | 10 CENTS A COPY

BANK LEGISLATION PROMISED AT WASHINGTON

Reports from good sources in Washington are that Representative Carter Glass of Virginia will introduce in the house at the special session of congress a bill embodying the ideas of his committee as to currency and banking reform. From the same sources come reports that President Wilson is desirous of having a democratic bill introduced and passed by the house at the special session and made ready to go before the senate at the regular session next December. In the interim such a bill could be discussed thoroughly and criticised by bankers, business men, legislators and others interested with a view to pointing out its faults and suggesting changes necessary to make a workable measure suited to the needs of the entire country.

It has been decided in the senate to create a new committee to be designated as the committee on banking and currency. The gossip is that Hoke Smith of Georgia will be its chairman. He is a banker. It is expected that the republicans will put on the committee such men as Burton of Ohio and Weeks of Massachusetts. Weeks is a practical banker, and before his recent election to the senate was a member of the banking and currency committee of the house.

There is a feeling in Washington that some interests in congress will try to pass a radical banking bill. The influence of Senator La Follette is feared in this regard. Much will depend, of course, on the attitude of the President, and he is not regarded as favoring a radical measure or any such legislation as a few democrats and progressives probably will urge.

MONEY SITUATION

The minimum rate for money in Chicago at the present time is from 5 to 5½ per cent. Although call rates are quoted at a 5 per cent minimum this figure is not easily obtainable. Other collateral loans range upward to 6½ per cent, the average being from 5½ to 6.

The average rate for money since January 1st has been 1 per cent higher than a year ago. It is estimated that loans run around $700,000,000. An increase of 1 per cent in the rate, therefore, would mean a gain of $7,000,000 in earnings of the banks. This year commercial paper rates are 5¼ to 6 per cent.

GUARANTY TRUST GAINS NINE MILLIONS

The deposits of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, as reported to the state superintendent of banks as of close of business, March 7th, are $177,336,742. This is a gain of $9,000,000 since the statement rendered to the superintendent in response to his last previous call, December 26, 1912. The resources of this company in the same period have grown from $223,000,000 to $237,000,000.

DECREASE IN BANK DEPOSITS

According to figures recently made public by the state bank examiner showing the condition of state banks as of February 4th as compared with November 26th, individual deposits in Ohio banks fell off $3,000,000.

St. Louis Bankers in New Positions

CHICAGO

JAMES R. LEAVELL
ST. LOUIS

Charles L. Boyé, formerly assistant cashier of the Mechanics-American National of St. Louis, has been elected to a similar position with the Fort Dearborn National of Chicago, effective March 10th. Mr. Boyé has traveled extensively throughout the country and enjoys a wide acquaintance among bankers. He expects to devote a considerable portion of his time on the road in behalf of the Fort Dearborn and to assist in the handling of the accounts of banks. Mr. Boyé has had a valuable banking experience, his first connection being with the National Bank of Commerce at St. Louis and later with the American Exchange National of that city, which subsequently was merged with the Mechanics National. He continued with the combined institutions and was elected assistant cashier in 1910.

The Fort Dearborn considers itself very fortunate in being able to secure the services of Mr. Boyé and his many friends all wish him success. He will be a valuable addition to the very efficient staff of the Fort Dearborn, which is as follows: Wm. A. Tilden, president; Nelson N. Lampert, J. Fletcher Farrell and Henry R. Kent, vice-presidents; George H. Wilson, cashier; Charles Fernald, Thomas Newcomer, Wm W. Le Gros and Charles L. Boyé, assistant cashiers, and Harry Lawton, manager of the foreign department.

James R. Leavell, who has been elected assistant cashier of the Mechanics-American, has been connected with the bank for many years and recently has been in charge of out-of-town correspondents. He is a son of James A. Leavell, cashier of the Home Savings of Fulton, Mo. Mr. Leavell through his long connection with the Mechanics-American, enjoys an extensive acquaintance in the St. Louis district as well as in the South and Southwest. He is a thorough banker and admirably equipped to discharge the duties of his new position. He is receiving congratulations from his large circle of friends, who all unite in wishing him success. The staff of the Mechanics now is Walker Hill, president; Jackson Johnson, Frank O. Hicks and Ephron Catlin, vice-presidents; J. S. Calfee, cashier; C. L. Allen, James R. Leavell and P. H. Miller, assistant cashiers.

NEW CHICAGO NATIONAL FORMING

Application has been made for a charter for the Transportation National Bank, to begin business next August, with $1,000,000 capital and $250,000 surplus, in the Transportation building, 608 South Dearborn street, Chicago. The organizers are: John Sebastian, J. A. Gauger, W. L. Sharp, W. B. Austin, Willis Smith and F. Hobbs. Some of the stock has been placed at $130 a share.

GARY TO HAVE NEW BANK

Gary's seventh banking institution will open for business in the Indiana city, April 15th. The new bank will be capitalized at $50,000 and will be known as the Broadway State. The officers are: F. A. Dagling, president; Alfred Carlson, vice-president, and J. K. Reppa, cashier. Andrew Melin of Chicago is a director.

NEW YORK CONVENTION DATES

Secretary Henry of New York has announced the dates of his convention, to be held at Ottawa, Canada. The meeting will be held June 12th and 13th. A very large attendance is anticipated. Canadian banks will send many representatives and a good entertainment program will be a feature.

BANKER APPOINTED EXAMINER

Joseph G. Boggs, assistant cashier of the Fairfield (Ill.) National, has been appointed examiner for the building and loan department of the state auditor's office.

N. W. HAWLEY, Geo. F. Orde and Joseph Chapman were the first three names down on the Briarcliff Special list.

MR. ORDE was on his way to Augusta for two weeks at rest and golf. (Look out for S. H. Burnham.) He had a few hours to spare while in Chicago and thought he'd "just cinch the train business."

HE is vice-president and Charles B. Mills is president of a new venture called the "General Securities Company," located, of course, at Minneapolis.

THE new company will handle farm loans, general mortgages, bank stocks (in country banks chiefly) and do a general investment business.

THE capital will be only $100,000, for it is considered that capital can be had much cheaper than by issuing stock for it.

MR. MILLS has interests in a dozen Iowa banks; Orde has stock in four and others interested have similar holdings. Bank stocks and refunded loans will be quite a feature. The company actually began making money before its charter was issued.

A SECOND bunch of choice names were registered, on Monday, for the Briarcliff Special. They are W. T. Fenton, J. Fletcher Farrell, F. A. Crandall, Ralph Van Vechten, W. G. Edens, all of Chicago, and Nelson H. Greene, and E. E. Crabtree from "near by."

LAST year the train started early on Saturday and arrived on Sunday morning. Some have expressed a wish "to get there on Saturday morning." How do you feel about it?

THE FIRST NATIONAL at Joliet has created another new service for the public known as coupon certificates of deposit. Persons living at a distance from Joliet can deposit in the First National without trouble for the interest can be collected by simply "clipping the coupons like a bond" instead of bringing a pass book to the bank. These certificates look just like bonds and are payable on demand.

"DID TAFT MAKE GOOD?" is the title under which Charles D. Hilles appeals to the readers of Leslies. Good stuff, Charlie, but too late, too late!

SECRETARY BROUSSARD of the Louisiana Bankers Association has sent word that his convention this year will be on April 17th and 18th at Alexandria. Hotel Bentley will be headquarters.

A MICHIGAN private banker died last week and one of our big Chicago banks got caught with a notice to "file your claim in the probate court."

LUCKILY the new Arkansas law keeps the private bank's deposit funds separate from the owner's estate. New Tennessee law does it also but not so direct.

STACEY B. RANKIN, dean of all the state secretaries, spent a part of last week in Chicago. The legislature being in session at home, he didn't stay overtime.

THE Ohio private bank bill, prepared by the private bankers association after ten years' warfare, was up for final passage in the senate.

MR. RANKIN was so pleased with the new Arkansas bill which keeps the deposits of the private banker out of his other business and separate from his estate at death that he took a copy to try to get this wise provision in the Ohio law.

THE Ohio legislature has passed nearly all of the uniform bills prepared by Counsel Paton of the A. B. A., but she's been woefully slow in giving the state a good bank act. Almost as bad as Arkansas was. The latter state has beaten her to the goal of an up-to-date statute.

JUST as the Ohio nationals were threatening to convert to state banks on account of the federal tax, the Ohio legislature, with the governor's help, began legislating on state bank taxes, and there they are—on the fence for the present.

RANKIN says he'd be a contented man if Geo. E. Allen could forget that Columbus hasn't a chapter of the A. I. B.

HE tried to square it with G. E. last year with staging a chapter debate between Cleveland and Cincinnati at his state convention and now he's trying to "pass the buck" to the Columbus Clearing House.

YET Allen keeps on his trail and the betting is odds-on that Columbus will surrender and organize a strong chapter.

HALL of Iowa was in, also, and he's got the other secretaries all beat on one important item.

EVERY one of them worth the name is sending out the Holden seed testing charts, a cleverly illustrated sheet telling how to take a strip of cloth and make a seed-corn tester of it.

"WHY not," said Hall to Homer Miller, "why not send the strip of cloth itself with numbers all printed on and with the very spots for the grains marked?"

"GREAT head," said Homer, and Hall has been doing it. "Hall is the best thing we ever got from Illinois for all the bankers we've been loaning her," said H. M.

E. H. DOYLE, commissioner of banking in Michigan, has found it advisable to issue a general cautionary notice to bankers on the bills of lading subject.

MR. DOYLE says that while the losses have been small the good faith of the customer often has been the principal reliance.

HIS latest bulletin presents a complete set of rules on the subject and ought to reduce B. of L. losses in Michigan to the minimum.

BANKERS returned from the inauguration tell us that Kentucky senators and congressmen are very much in earnest in asking to have J. R. Downing of Georgetown, in that state, made comptroller of the currency.

SENATOR OLLIE M. JAMES was quite active and quite willing to talk on the subject. Some of the nice things he said about Mr. Downing are these:

"HE is supported almost unanimously by the bankers of Kentucky, and those who served with him as an official in the American Bankers Association are equally fervent in his behalf."

"THE comptrollership requires expert knowledge, excellent judgment, a high type of efficiency and splendid character. Mr. Downing is accredited with all these qualities. I shall present his qualifications to President-

Wilson with the feeling that Kentucky has a candidate for this important office whose astuteness is not surpassed by any other."

MR. DOWNING is cashier of the Georgetown National, former president of the Kentucky Bankers Association and is a member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association.

CINCINNATI bankers who know Mr. Downing personally are helping to secure his appointment. The group chairmen of the Kentucky Bankers Association recently indorsed his candidacy, and the southwestern Ohio group is expected to do likewise.

OF course Illinois, which has been holding this particular job so long, will hate to give it up even to as good a neighbor as Kentucky and to so good a fellow as John R. Downing.

HENRY M. CARPENTER, Monticello, Iowa, is planning a trip to Panama. The bankers' conventions should have been called for Colon. At least the executive council could have done the trick neatly.

SECRETARY J. L. HARTMAN of Oregon, noting the fact that Secretary Kauffman had landed Pollard and Edens for his convention, has invited them to "c'mon over" to his meeting.

ANOTHER "private bank outrage" has been committed. One of them has been elected treasurer of the University of Illinois over a powerful and prosperous Chicago banker, president of one of our biggest nationals.

OF course, circumstances had to do with it. The winner, Matt. W. Busey, lives and banks right in the college town and is a favorite with the college boys and the professors as well as with the trustees. The Busey bank is one of the staunchest and oldest in the state.

COL. BUSEY is banker and friend to the boys when "short" and Mrs. Busey is the only one to dispute with him the premiership in college popularity. Governor Dunne met with the trustees and waived his preference for the Chicago man very gracefully.

WE hear that the "Permanent National Federation of State Bankers Associations" had a very narrow escape from an "unanimous death" last week.

THE resignation specialist from the Rookery (which some of the "delegates" called the Jokery) was the one favoring vote. All the others were opposed.

THIS year the secretaries stipulated that President Macfadden and Vice-president Hall should supervise the program. Hall came to Chicago and spent several days "helping" the resignation artist to get it up.

WHEN the Iowa man left town he had a "carbon" of it "in his inside pocket" but when he saw the printed copy at the LaSalle Hotel meeting he asked Keyser to fan him.

ALL that offensive platitude about "the thirteen original states" and the "permanent organization" had been injected. Also all the attempted dictation to state secretaries in other parts of the Union.

BUT if any one guesses that the state secretaries of the Middle West can be bulldozed as a pastime he should buy a Big Ben to wake him up.

THERE was a hand-picked committee on resolutions, one of the kind which doesn't need a guardian.

WELL, the committee decided that if such conferences of secretaries are to be kept up it should be done under the group system by and under the auspices of the secretaries section of the American Bankers Association.

THE grandiloquent, brainstorm title of "National Federation of State Bankers Associations" was thought to be misleading and adopted without the knowledge of the associations concerned.

THE resolution putting these ideas into effect was presented to the conference and adopted without a dissenting vote.

BUT the resignation-with-a-string-to-it participant was out of the room conducting the rest of the obsequies. He was indignant. He called it snap judgment and got himself all in a "fuss."

AN obliging secretary then moved that the whole matter be sent back to the committee along with any resolution for a permanent organization which its only proponent had to offer.

THE resolutions committee (all top notchers) again retired and then brought in their own former resolution as its unanimous agreement. On a vote it was everybody present voting against the solitary and lonesome vote of Illinois.

WITH the quietus put upon the National Federation the secretaries adjourned. The secretaries are right. If conferences are necessary, the boys can adopt the group plan and justify their proud position as a section of the American Bankers Association.

ONE lonesome secretary who prints a little unread house organ "wrote in" to several prominent Chicago bankers to "read what THE CHICAGO BANKER had to say about the conference."

IT was kindly meant no doubt but unnecessary. The boys were "as welcome as the flowers in spring" to the Chicago banks, big and little. Hospitality carried no indorsement of the second edition of "the plan that failed."

GEORGIA Bankers Association has gained 122 new members in the past year. Each of the five groups has 100 or more members, showing fine geographical distribution of membership strength.

L. D. SKINNER, assistant cashier of the Central Trust, celebrated his birthday on Wednesday. The beautiful bouquet of roses which adorned his desk came from appreciative employees of the bank.

MR. SKINNER is a native of Iowa and had a valuable banking experience in that state and later at Wichita, Kan. When the Central Trust was organized a little more than ten years ago he opened the books and has had charge of the bookkeeping and of the employment of help of the bank from the first.

MR. SKINNER prides himself on the kind of employees the Central Trust has developed, all of whom feel a personal interest in him in return.

"LET'S QUIT GESSING AND GO TO TESTING" is the catch line on a new, long, seed-tester tract designed and issued by Bert Ball of the crop improvement department of the organized grain exchanges.

THE state secretaries are busy buying and sending out the circulars. In cloth they are ready to use; in paper they are cheaper, and anyone can make up the strips. Letters can reach Mr. Ball care of Chicago Board of Trade.

A. W. BARRETT, former treasurer and now president of the Guardian Trust, New York, continues to be talked of for superintendent of banking in the Empire state.

MR. BARRETT has been active in connection with the American Institute of Banking and is one of the charter members of the organization. He began his banking experience with the Western National Bank of New York and later was associated with the National Bank of Commerce. He is author of several books on finance and banking.

THE GUARDIAN has merged with the Empire Trust and signally has honored Mr. Barrett by making him the chief liquidating official. He is well qualified for the big job at Albany.

ILLINOIS still stands behind Irving Shuman for the comptrollership at Washington. There is one eastern and one southern man, running neck-and-neck with him. Shuman deserves well at the hands of the administration but Illinois is handicapped in all such matters in not having a senator on the job.

DON'T forget the following from President Wilson's inaugural. It is a direct invitation to bankers to come to his aid. He said:

"THIS is not a day of triumph, it is a day of dedication. Here muster, not the forces of party, but the forces of humanity. Men's hearts wait upon us, men's lives hang in the balance, men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do. Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try! I summon all honest men, all patriotic, all forward-looking men, to my side. God helping me, I will not fail them, if they will but counsel and sustain me."

AT the annual dinner of the First National official staff, President J. B. Forgan opened his remarks in a most characteristic way. He said:

"MY annual remarks are the only part of the function that I do not thoroughly enjoy. I am afraid they are becoming stereotyped and what Scotch people designate as 'cauld kail het again,' a Scotch form of criticism of their ministers who preach the same sermon twice within too short a period of time."

THOSE who are planning a western trip for the coming summer can have no better preparation than they may get by reading the delightfully informal but well informed writings of Enos A. Mills or J. Smeaton Chase. Mr. Mills' "Wild Life on the Rockies" and Mr. Chase's "Yosemite Trails" already have established their position as books which are equally attractive to young folks and grown ups.

INTRODUCES BILL PROVIDING FOR CREDIT UNIONS

A bill designed to permit the incorporation of "credit unions" for the purpose of promoting thrift among their members and making loans to members at reasonable rates with or without security has been introduced in the New York legislature by Senator Pollock, chairman of the committee on banks. Seven or more persons may form such a corporation, under the proposed law, and membership may be limited to employees of a particular person, copartnership or corporation.

Tennessee Has a Brand New Banking Law

Establishes banking department with closest of supervision over all branches of the business. Privates must comply with all provisions of the law. Restrictions are notable. Tennessee Bankers Association drew the bill and will select the five names from which the superintendent is chosen

Nashville, March 12th.—Owing to the splendid work of the Tennessee Bankers Association, this state has been added to the long list of commonwealths which have adopted up-to-date banking laws with complete state supervision over all forms of banking. The fight has been long and hard, almost as long drawn out as the battle in Arkansas which covered a period of eight years. The law which has just been adopted in Tennessee was prepared by the legislative committee of the Tennessee Bankers Association and was introduced entirely as an association measure. It is not quite so strong in many of its provisions as was hoped by the members of the association, for parts of it are the result of compromise with its opponents. Speaking generally, however, it will compare favorably with any of the new banking laws adopted recently. One very unique feature of the act is that provision which allows the Tennessee Bankers Association to nominate five names from which the governor shall appoint the superintendent of banks. In this particular the new law follows that of Minnesota. It is hoped that this provision entirely will remove the position of banking superintendent from politics. The governor is hoping with the association that he may discover a Kelsey S. Chase or a Kuolt or a Dolley to create the position. Tennessee has been without banking supervision except in a very fugitive sort of way and the state has suffered in reputation thereby. Bankers have known of this for a long time, but have met with very serious opposition from political forces and from banks not desiring supervision throughout the entire contest for better things.

The law provides that the names submitted to the governor for superintendent of banks shall be made up of men of good character with at least five years' experience as executive officer in a reputable, solvent bank doing business in the state of Tennessee. He must not be interested in any corporation doing a banking business in the state, nor interested with any person, firm or association engaged in the banking business while he holds the position. A considerable portion of the new act has to do with the details of the new office—the furnishing of proper offices at the state capital and fixing salaries of the superintendent and his examiners, which at the first will be five in number. The new law from the very first and in every section includes all forms of banking described as "every corporation, firm or individual doing a banking business under the laws of the state of Tennessee." The law differs from many banking laws in that instead of paying for examinations the banks contribute directly twice a year according to their capital stock to a fund in the treasury of the state. This is one of the items which frequently causes friction. It probably is responsible for the defeat of a new law in the state of Ohio where the bankers claim that the overhead charges for the department should be borne by the state direct and that the examinations should be based on a proper fee for the work done.

Section 7 gives a very good idea of the scope of the new act and is as follows:

Every corporation doing a banking business under the laws of the state of Tennessee, and every individual banker or partnership carrying on a banking business in the state shall be subject to the supervision and inspection of the superintendent of banks and the regulations and supervisions thereof. The superintendent of banks shall either personally or by a competent examiner appointed by him visit and examine every corporation doing a banking business and every individual banker or partnership doing a banking business, in and under the laws of the state of Tennessee, at least twice in each year. On every such examination, inquiry shall be made as to the condition and resources of the corporation (or of the individuals in case of individual bankers); the mode of conducting and managing the affairs of the bank, the action of its directors (in case of a corporation), the investment of the funds of the bank, the safety and prudence of the management of the bank, and whether the requirements of its charter and of law have been complied with in the administration of the affairs of the bank, and as to such other matters as the superintendent of banks may uniformly prescribe. In addition, the superintendent of banks shall have power, and it shall be his duty, in like manner, to examine, or cause to be examined, into the affairs of every corporation, firm and individual banker doing a banking business, whenever in the judgment of the superintendent the management and condition of the bank is such as to render an examination of its affairs necessary or expedient, or whenever in the opinion of the superintendent the interest of the public demands an examination.

All foreign banks doing business in the state are subject to the same charges and supervision imposed upon domestic institutions. One provision of the new law is that any stockholder or any partner of any incorporated or private bank may have a special examination made upon request. This provision was opposed by many who believed that it might lead to internal dissension and cause considerable trouble in bank administration. The superintendent is given full authority in Section 9 to compel the officers or directors of any bank which he may find to be in an unsafe condition to file a bond at once, sufficient to protect the depositor and other unsecured creditors. Officers who have been guilty of any misappropriation of funds of the bank for their individual business either by loan or otherwise will be punished by penalties provided and it will be the duty of the superintendent to take immediate charge of the institution through a custodian.

This section of the act is made to apply specifically to individual or private banks where the proprietor is misusing the funds by using them in his own business. The new act does not appear to have specifically separated the funds of a private bank from the estate of the private banker, but it does call for a fixed capital, and private bankers are compelled to comply with this provision and with every other which is applicable to a state bank. The bank is obliged to be operated entirely as a bank and not as a part of the estate of the banker or owner. Failed banks are not to be subject to court receiverships but are to be administered by the superintendent at no other or further compensation for his personal services than that provided for in his salary as superintendent. This will rob bank failures of a standing scandal in court affairs as among the most costly known. In cases where one bank may purchase another, all creditors are to be paid in full by the purchasing bank. Any creditor who fails to receive the full amount of his debt shall have the right to bring suit in the name of the superintendent against the purchasing bank. Section 15 throws considerable light on the character of the supervision which the new Tennessee law will bring to the banks. It is as follows:

All banks, persons, firms and corporations doing a banking business in this state shall make to the superintendent of banks, on the call of the superintendent for such report, two reports during each year, according to the form which may be prescribed by the superintendent; such report must be verified by the oath or affirmation of the executive officers or agents thereof, and in case of a corporation, by the president or cashier or secretary, and must be attested by the signature of at least three directors of the corporation. The superintendent shall make one call in the first half of the year and another in the latter half of the year.

Each of such reports shall exhibit in detail and under appropriate heads the resources and liabilities of each bank at the close of business on any past day specified by the superintendent, which day for report shall be uniform throughout the state, and shall be transmitted by the bank to the superintendent within five days after the receipt of a request or requisition therefor from him, and the same shall be published by the bank or private banker once in a newspaper in the city or county in which the bank is located, at the expense of the said bank; proof of such publication shall be furnished by the bank to the superintendent as may be required by him, including the clipping of the report as published in the newspaper.

It shall be the duty of the superintendent to prescribe to the bank the form for the published report made by the bank, which form shall contain such items as is deemed necessary by the superintendent to inform the public as to the financial condition of the bank, and such form shall be uniform throughout the state, and it shall be the duty of the superintendent to see that each bank has published its report in accordance with the form prescribed, and if the report is not published by the bank or private banker, the superintendent shall, at the expense of the bank, publish the report, and to check such published report, using the newspaper clipping furnished him by the bank, with the sworn report of the bank filed with the superintendent.

In the event there are discrepancies in the published report of the bank and the sworn report furnished to the superintendent, if, in the opinion of the superintendent, the discrepancies are due to clerical errors, it shall be the duty of the superintendent to notify the bank to republish its report so as to conform with the sworn report filed with the superintendent, and it shall be the duty of the bank to make such republication. If, in the opinion of the superintendent, the discrepancies in the published and sworn report are not due to clerical errors, it shall be the duty of the superintendent to forthwith publish a true and correct report as shown by the sworn report filed with the superintendent, stating in such publication that the published report of the bank did not conform to the sworn report on file with the superintendent, and it shall be the duty of the bank to pay the cost and expense of such publication by the superintendent.

Following sections provide penalties for failure to make report or to exhibit books and papers upon request. The smallest capital requirement is $7,500 in towns and villages of less than 1,500 and graduated from that up to $50,000 in cities of 100,000 or more. Ten per cent reserve must be kept by all banks or dividends must be discontinued or loans reduced until this reserve is restored. Thirty days is the time limit. Sections 20 and 21 cover the matter of making loans and are as follows:

No bank, person, firm, or corporation doing a banking business shall lend money to any salaried officer or agent, or employee of the bank, nor to any firm or corporation in which such salaried officer, agent or employee of the bank owns an interest, without the loan being submitted to and approved by the board of directors of the bank (where the bank is a corporation), and by all of the officers of the bank where the bank is not a corporation; provided, however, if the board of directors of a corporation has delegated the power to pass on loans to an executive or financial committee, the approval of such loan by such committee may be made in lieu of the approval of the board of directors.

Sec. 21. No bank, person, firm, or corporation doing a banking business shall be allowed to lend any one person, firm, or corporation (including in loans to a firm, loans to several members thereof) more than fifteen (15) per cent of its capital, surplus and undivided profits; provided, however, a loan in excess of fifteen (15) per cent of capital, surplus, and undivided profits may be made if the loan be approved by a majority of the executive or financial committee, in case of an incorporated bank, or by all its officers, if not an incorporated bank.

No bank, person, firm, or corporation doing a banking business shall make any loan or discount on the security of the shares of its own capital stock, nor be the purchaser or holder of any such shares, unless such security or purchase shall be necessary to prevent loss upon a debt previously contracted in good faith, and stock so purchased or acquired shall, within six (6) months from the time of its purchase, be sold or disposed of at public or private sale.

The entire subject of making good dissipated capital is covered and no act increasing or decreasing capital or of consolidation can be done without the consent of the superintendent of banks. The superintendent is not given authority to refuse charters absolutely. Corporations, firms or individuals which shall comply with the law either must have a charter or they have an appeal to the courts. If the court decides that the capital has been paid in and the laws complied with, his mandamus is good on the superintendent for a charter. Heavy penalties are provided for any corporation or individual attempting to do a banking business without a state permit. Any individual banker or officer of an incorporated bank who overdraws his account is subject to $500 fine and to a jail term of one year. The determination of the law-makers and of the Tennessee Bankers Association throughout has been to put a stop to individual bankers doing business in some other capacity on their depositors' money. A strong penalty is provided for an individual banker who takes possession of other property than that belonging to the bank, the fine and imprisonment being the same as in a case where money is appropriated. Section 42 makes the entire act apply to all persons and corporations carrying on a banking business in Tennessee except nationals. The full scope of the bank is made applicable in Section 44 which reads:

Sec. 44. The term or word "bank," or "banker," as used in this act, wherever it may occur in any part thereof, shall signify, mean, cover and include every trust company, loan company, mortgage security company, safe deposit company, receiving money on deposit, and every individual, firm, corporation, association or company doing a banking, loan or discount business and receiving money on deposit and performing functions of a bank.

Double liability on the part of stockholders does not appear to have been provided for.

CHICAGO BANK WINS BIG SUIT

The long fought Penn-Wyoming Copper Company case, involving approximately $10,000,000, and with stockholders probably in every state, has been decided against the stockholders in favor of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings of Chicago, by federal Judge John R. Riner.

The Continental, as holder of a $3,368,500 trust deed, secured by first mortgage bonds on the property of the company in Carbon county, entered an interplea to the suit originally brought by stockholders to have certain sales of stock set aside because of alleged fraud, contending that before any prejudicing action was taken by the Copper Company its position as trustee for bondholders secured by the mortgage should be protected.

Judge Riner declared the first mortgage would take precedence and could not be interfered with by the charges of fraudulent stock selling which had been made. Edward W. Stone of Cheyenne, master in chancery, is ordered by the decision to set a minimum price of one-fourth value, or $842,125, on the property to satisfy the bank's claims.

Touches upon proposed banking and financial legislation by congress

WASHINGTON LETTER

By R. A. ALBERTSEN

Relates to administrative and department matters interesting to our readers

Washington, D. C., March 13th.—The very newest thing out in currency and banking is the new book by Charles N. Fowler of New Jersey. Even the advanced sheets were in great demand, as the former chairman of the currency and banking committee has more than a hold-over reputation. He is considered one of the most virile thinkers and best posted men in the country on economic and financial topics.

Wilson in New Monroe Doctrine

President Wilson has set forth the new Pan-American doctrine of his administration in chaste, pure English which even a revolutionist can understand. He says:

"One of the chief objects of my administration will be to cultivate the friendship and deserve the confidence of our sister republics of Central and South America and to promote in every proper and honorable way the interests which are common to the peoples of the two continents. I earnestly desire the most cordial understanding and co-operation between the peoples and leaders of America, and therefore deem it my duty to make this brief statement.

"Co-operation is possible only when supported at every turn by the orderly processes of just government based on law, not upon arbitrary or irregular force. We hold, as I am sure all thoughtful leaders of republican government everywhere hold, that just government rests always upon the consent of the governed and that there can be no freedom without order based upon law and upon the public conscience and approval.

Against Disturbed Conditions

"We shall look to make these principles the basis of mutual intercourse, respect, and helpfulness between our sister republics and ourselves. We shall lend our influence of every kind to the realization of these principles in fact and practice, knowing that disorder, personal intrigue, and defiance of constitutional rights weaken and discredit government and injure none so much as the people who are unfortunate enough to have their common life and common affairs tainted and disturbed.

"We can have no sympathy with those who seek to seize the power of government to advance their own personal interests or ambition. We are the friends of peace, but we know that there can be no lasting or stable peace in such circumstances.

"As friends, therefore, we shall prefer those who act in the interest of peace and honor, who protect private rights and respect the restraints of constitutional provision. Mutual respect seems to us the indispensable foundation of friendship between states, as between individuals.

U. S. Has No Selfish Interest

"The United States has nothing to seek in Central and South America except the lasting interests of the peoples of the two continents, the security of governments intended for the people and for no special group or interest, and the development of personal and trade relationships between the two continents which shall redound to the profit and advantage of both and interfere with the rights and liberties of neither.

"From these principles may be read so much of the future policy of this government as it is necessary now to forecast, and in the spirit of these principles I may, I hope, be permitted with as much confidence as earnestness to extend to the governments of all the republics of America the hand of genuine disinterested friendship and to pledge my own honor and the honor of my colleagues to every enterprise of peace and amity that a fortunate future may disclose."

Business Men Want Banking Law

Word has been received in this city by house leaders interested in the adoption of banking reform legislation that a very vigorous protest is to be made by influential commercial interests against the omission of such legislation at the special session of congress. During the past few days President Wilson has been overwhelmed with requests from members who desire to have the whole subject tabled that he should not take any steps toward the introduction of such legislation this spring. The controversy has come to an acute point, where the president must decide what he will do. The belief of those who are interested in getting the legislation is that if bankers and business men want to see any action, they will have to come forward and furnish distinct support to Mr. Wilson, otherwise he will be unable to act upon the unquestionable desire he has for some time felt to initiate a banking measure.

Bankers Committees to be Active

It is understood that in all probability committees of bankers in various parts of the country will visit Washington and seek interviews with the president and secretary of the treasury within a few days. They are not expected to come in a body, but individually and in small groups. Business men not primarily engaged in banking will undoubtedly be included in these groups and they will endeavor to make clear to the president's mind that they believe something should be done without any unnecessary delay. It has been realized by a number of national organizations which have been promoting banking reform that the critical point in the whole campaign has now been reached and that failure to take steps to make their wishes known during this month will subject them to the suggestion of having refrained from exerting their influence at the time when it would have done the most good, and when some definite results might have been realized from their activity.

Mass of Banking Bills in Ohio Legislature

Columbus, Ohio, March 13th.—Ohio has been putting off too long her very necessary banking legislation. The private banks have been suffered in the mining and manufacturing centers to the prejudice of all banking for many years. Ohio, just as Illinois and Iowa, has been backward in the matter because of the many good private banks and the intense political activity of the others. The present legislature has a multiplicity of bills before it. The Private Bankers Association entered supervision bills of its own making and liking but they were not well received. The advance upon present conditions was not recognized even by use of a microscope. Some of the bills now being considered will be interesting to bankers in all states.

This is an Administration Measure

The Holl bill is an administration measure, to make the state banking department self sustaining. The minimum annual payment was reduced from $50 to $30. The maximum is $1,500. The bill was amended to fix the percentage assessment at one sixty-fifth of the aggregate resources, instead of one seventy-fifth. Objection was made that the tax will raise $77,000, while the cost of the department last year was but $52,000, the law providing that the balance be paid into the general fund, to which bankers object. Reighard, of Fulton county, said that the average cost of examination of banks is $36, making the total cost about $30,000. The remainder of the department's expense is for overhead charges.

Deposit Guaranty Cuts a Figure

Nearly all bankers are opposing the Hillenkamp bank depositors' guaranty bill. In main the bill provides a system of examination not by the state, as under the present system, but by the bankers themselves.

A. G. Tame and T. J. Monk, Cleveland bankers, and Fred Halenkamp, Cincinnati banker, spoke against the measure at the hearings.

W. L. Casady of Marion, a concrete fence post maker, held the floor against a score or more bank officials from all sections of the state, in defense of the Hillenkamp bill providing for the guaranty of bank depositors. He declared the measure to be the best that has been presented to the assembly. He recited numerous instances of bank failures, in some of which he had lost money. A guaranty such as is provided in the Hillenkamp bill would have avoided these, he said. The bill would require banks to pay into a state fund a sum equal to one-fourth of their capital stock.

Bankers Favor Regulations

Many bankers approved the proposition of incorporating clearing houses, making their membership open to every sound and well managed bank, and having the examinations now conducted under the supervision of a governing committee made by a state examiner. It was agreed generally that such a plan would place the clearing house on a higher plane of efficiency and remove it from all possibility of selfish interest or abuses resulting from the influential bankers enforcing arbitrary rules upon competitors. In effect, this plan would take the clearing house back to its original purpose of simply exchanging checks. The more frequent examinations which the banks through their clearing house organizations have determined are necessary would be made by a public authority who would be assigned by the state banking department and would have no connection with any other banking interest. This, it was pointed out by bankers, would eliminate all possibility of favoritism or abuses and would provide adequate machinery for ascertaining the solvency and character of every clearing house member.

National Banks Not Exempt

Attorneys here held that the state would have authority under a law incorporating and regulating clearing houses to make examinations of national banks that were members of these associations as well as state banks. This question was raised in regard to the proposition of requiring the incorporation of clearing houses and their control by the state by bankers whose institutions are organized under the national banking laws. It was pointed out by the attorneys that the state had power to regulate any institution within its borders and any member of such institutions would be compelled to submit to such regulations as might be prescribed. So long as the membership to the clearing houses was made optional with the banks, it was explained that the act of accepting membership amounted to an acceptance of such regulations as the law provided. The suggestion was made by the attorneys that a law requiring the incorporation of clearing houses should provide for their regulation under the state department of banks and banking by such rules as might be determined at the discretion of the department officials. This would give elasticity to the regulations and enable banking conditions under any set of financial circumstances to be met without injury to any interest.

banks, doing any sort of banking business in the state, whether it be conducted by a firm, person or corporation, must be subjected in operation to the rules of the state banking department if a bill, introduced by Senator Zmunt of Cuyahoga county, becomes a law. Thus all private banking institutions will be governed by state laws and subject to inspection.

The bill prohibits any person connected with the state banking department from borrowing from institutions which come under his supervision. A charge that the present superintendent, F. E. Baxter, used $37,000 of the funds of the Columbus Savings and Trust Company to pay a private loan, now is being investigated.

The measure is drastic in that it empowers the state banking department to limit the amount and size of loans which a bank may make.

A similar bill by Representative Kennedy now is before the senate banking committee. It does not limit the loans.

The two measures will be embodied in one bill and rushed for passage. The Zmunt bill is an administration measure.

The notes are convertible into preferred and common stocks of Utilities Improvement Co. on the basis of par for the preferred, with a "bonus" of 30 per cent in common, if the privilege is exercised before May 10, 1913. All notes converted subsequent to that time will carry a less "bonus" of 1 per cent for each month until the date of maturity. Subscriptions are payable 10 per cent in cash on date of subscribing and the balance on allotment. Subscriptions will be received until noon March 20th at the office of Henry L. There now have been added to the assets $3,500,000 preferred and $1,750,000 common stock of the Utilities Improvement Co., which, at present market prices, are valued at $3,920,000, making the total present assets $6,996,654. This is approximately twice the total issue of notes.

Utilities Improvement Co., as as a result of the rearrangement of Doherty properties, has been placed in an unusually strong financial position. At the present time its total liquid assets, including stocks, bonds, cash, etc., amount to $29,374,081. Current earnings are at the rate of 5.18 per cent on its common stock.

COOK COUNTY GOOD ROADS MEETING

Chicago Association of Commerce will hold a Cook county good roads meeting at the Sherman Hotel, Saturday evening, March 22d, under the auspices of the good roads committee consisting of W. G. Edens, J. C. Clair, Geo. J. Charlton, P. S. Eustis, John H. Hardin, J. W. Morrison, H. Paulman, H. S. Pettis, W. H. Richardson, John D. Shoop, George E. Scott, L. Wessel, Jr., J. C. Wilson, and Wm. C. Van Gilder.

The association will invite as its guests, Governor Dunne and Lieutenant-governor O'Hara, all of the Cook county members of the legislature, the president and members of the Cook county board of commissioners, as well as the members of the South, West and Lincoln park boards. Committees representing the Chicago Real Estate Board, Board of Trade, Automobile Association, Sheridan Road Improvement Association and commercial and road improvement clubs of the municipalities lying in each of the Cook county townships will be invited also. Representatives of the Cook county truck gardeners and farmers, rural letter carriers, and, in fact, it is expected that every interest in the city and county which has to do with the road situation will be represented at this meeting.

The condition of Cook county roads and plans for their improvement will be discussed by the speakers, whose names will be announced later.

MUNSEY STARTS TITLE COMPANY

Baltimore financiers are interested in the announcement that interests identified with the Munsey Trust have incorporated the Maryland Title Guarantee, which will engage in the business of insuring titles. Up to the present time there has been only one company in Baltimore engaged in this kind of work and those closely connected with the Munsey Trust felt that there was a broad field for one or more similar companies. The capitalization of the new company will be $200,000 of which the Munsey interests will furnish $125,000. All of the stock will be common stock; the $75,000 stock not subscribed by the Munsey Trust interests will be offered to the public at par. The business of the new company will be confined to insurance of titles; it will not engage in banking in any form but will work in close harmony with the Munsey Trust. It will begin business to-day.

DROVERS NATIONAL OF EAST ST. LOUIS

The new bank at East St. Louis of which A. J. Williford, formerly cashier of the Nokomis National, is to be president, will be known as the Drovers National of East St. Louis.

Many of the commission men of the national stockyards group will be interested in the new institution.

The safe of the White Banking Company at Wilmer, Tex., not far from Dallas, recently was blown open and the thieves secured about $3,000 in currency and gold. The looters placed guards near the bank who intimidated inquisitive citizens and afterward escaped on a hand car. About the same amount of money was secured in similar fashion from the Gurantee State Bank of Kiefer, Okla., a few days later. These robbers also escaped.

By C. C. Burford

Bankers over the state now are looking forward to the crop indications for the year with the keenest of interest. Spring work upon the farms has not commenced to any great degree (March 13th), and farmers are awaiting anxiously the coming of real spring. The ground is in most excellent condition and there is an abundance of moisture in the soil.

The supply of corn in the hands of farmers still is large but there probably will be very little more movement of corn to market until after the spring farm work is about over. This fact means that aside from the stocks held now by country elevators there will be comparatively small shipments of corn for a few weeks. There also are large stocks of oats in the hands of farmers and with the new oats crop several months ahead of a new corn crop it is difficult to see a sharp increase in the price of oats for some time. Meanwhile, trade is generally good in towns and cities and country banks are, as a rule, well loaned up. Business conditions are satisfactory.

New State Banks In Illinois

The past three or four weeks has been a period of prolific bank chartering and Auditor Brady has been a busy man since he assumed office a few weeks ago. Among the state banks recently chartered are: Hartsburg State of Hartsburg, Logan county, capital $30,000, Daniel Van Gerpen, Claus Van Gerpen and Klaus Behrends, the incorporators; LaFayette State of LaFayette, Stark county, with capital of $25,000; United States Bank of Chicago will be incorporated with the customary capital of $200,000 by Fred Bernstein, Simon Keck and Carl Lundberg. Another new state bank in Chicago is the Madison and Kedzie State with capital of $200,000 and with Benjamin Kulp, Joel W. S. Flesh and A. L. Peterson as the organizers. City Trust and Savings and Lincoln Trust and Savings of Chicago, each with $200,000 capital, have received permits to organize. R. N. Lansing, J. B. Christerson and John R. Gray are granted the permit for the former bank and Oscar B. Conklin, Theodore G. Behrens and Fred O. Schmidt for the latter.

M. W. Busey, Treasurer U. of I.

At a meeting of the board of trustees of the University of Illinois held on the campus at Urbana-Champaign, March 11th, M. W. Busey, president of Busey's Bank of Urbana, was named treasurer of the funds of the institution for the next two years. All of the trustees of the university, including Governor Edward F. Dunne, were present.

The election of Mr. Busey to the treasurership means that the funds will be withdrawn from Chicago for the first time since the university was organized. The many friends of Mr. Busey in Illinois banking circles are well pleased with his election and are confident that he will prove as efficient a treasurer as the able bankers who have preceded him in the position. There was a sharp contest in the trustees' meeting for the position and Mr. Busey was named on the third ballot.

Urbana people are very happy over the election of Mr. Busey to this position and voiced their sentiments in a rousing front-porch reception, Tuesday evening, at the banker's home. Mr. Busey has been for thirty-seven years with Busey's Bank of Urbana, has been a partner in the business for thirty-four years and president for about twenty years. He has been very active in the welfare of his city and county and has taken a leading part in many local enterprises. He has served as a member of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association and as a member of the private bankers committee.

The trustees voted that the tenure of office should be for two years only and that no treasurer should be eligible to succeed himself. The rate of interest upon university funds (2%) remains the same. The appropriation for the biennial period of 1911-1913 was $3,519,300 and the mill tax for the biennial period of 1913-1915 provides for $4,499,852. The bond required of Mr. Busey will be the customary one of two million dollars.

John R. Trevett, vice-president of the Trevett-Mattis Banking Company of Champaign and Allen F. Moore of the Moore State Bank of Monticello, were named members of the executive committee of the board of trustees. W. L. Abbott of Chicago was re-elected president of the board and President Edmund J. James was re-elected to his position as the head of the university.

THE LOGICAL REASONS FOR "SIX PER CENT AND SAFETY"

IN our opinion conservative investors are justly entitled to a rate of six per cent on their investments. We will be pleased to submit on application reasons why six per cent may be obtained on invested funds with perfect safety in the class of securities we offer.

¶ Investors for income, desirous of obtaining the highest interest rate consistent with safety, are advised to investigate these bonds which are issued in denominations of $100, $500, and $1,000.

¶ No investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us during the thirty-one years since this house was founded.

¶ We maintain a market for the securities we sell through our custom of repurchasing from clients, at par and accrued interest, less only the handling charge of one per cent, thus giving reasonable assurance of their convertibility.

Mitchell, president of the State Bank of Rock Island and formerly president of the Illinois Bankers Association, is well known. The State Bank is the successor to the private bank of Mitchell and Lynde and advertises itself as "Ye Olde Banke." It was established in 1852. K. T. Anderson is the cashier.

Rock Island National and Central Trust and Savings have the same president and cashier, H. E. Casteel and H. B. Simmon occupying those positions respectively. The former bank was established in 1870 and the latter in 1899. The Rock Island Savings, occupying a beautiful bank building of the monumental type, was organized in 1890. H. S. Cable is the president and A. J. Lindstrom, cashier. The Peoples National is another venerable bank in that city, having been established in 1874. Otto Huber serves this bank as president and G. O. Huekstaedt as cashier. The German Trust and Savings, a new institution, is receiving a large volume of business from Rock Island people.

Banker Is Extensive Cattle-feeder

A. W. Bragg, president of the private bank of Bragg, Helm and Company of Tuscola, is feeding thirty carloads of cattle on his 1,300-acre farm in Douglas county near Tuscola. The bank of Bragg, Helm and Company has back of it six thousand acres of Douglas county, $250-an-acre land, as choice as any in Illinois, all of which is pledged to the solvency of the bank. There are five partners in the bank who own the above amount of land "at home" as well as real estate elsewhere. Mr. Bragg also is interested in banks at Camargo, Garrett and Pesotum, villages near Tuscola. The bank of Pesotum, housed in a beautiful new building, is finished in a manner which would do credit to many banks in cities of 15,000 people. Mr. Bragg is interested greatly in his cattle feeding and is a most careful farmer and banker. More of such extensive cattle feeding would be better for the future welfare of Illinois soil which now is being farmed too hard for the conservation of its great natural fertility, as a rule.

Illinois Notes

I. E. Merritt, president of the Hoopeston National and chairman of the Vermilion County Bankers Association, has been requested by many petitioners to be a candidate this spring for mayor of Hoopeston. He has consented, and it is conceded by Hoopeston people that there will be no campaign against him. Mr. Merritt is president also of private banks at Buckley and Danforth, in Iroquois county, and is well known to many Illinois bankers.

The school savings system in Rock Island is proving a success and in a recent week $233.14 was saved by the school children who thus are taught a valuable lesson in the gospel of thrift. The State Bank of Rock Island is the collecting agency. Kankakee and Joliet are other Illinois cities where the school savings system has been tried with success.

Frank L. Smith, president of the First National of Dwight, has resigned as United States internal revenue collector for eighth Illinois district. Mr. Smith has been considering resigning for some time and his resignation is effective at the pleasure of President Wilson. Mr. and Mrs. Smith will travel abroad. H. F. Adams, chief deputy revenue collector, will have charge of the office until Mr. Smith's successor is named.

Ross S. Wallace, vice-president and general manager of the Peoria Gas and Electric Company, has been named a director of the Illinois National of Peoria to succeed the late John C. Streibich. With the names of John W. McDowell and Frank T. Miller, who recently were added to the directorate of the Illinois National, it seems that President William C. White is building up a strong directorate of wealthy and influential business men. Mr. Wallace is a director of the Bradley Polytechnic Institute and vice-president of the Creve Coeur Club, both of Peoria, and is the son of Judge and Mrs. R. R. Wallace of Pontiac.

Frederick W. Thompson, head of the real estate department of the Merchants Loan and Trust of Chicago, has been invited to address the Champaign County Bankers Association at the annual banquet and meeting to be held in the Hotel Beardsley in Champaign, March 20th. Mr. Thompson will discuss the general topic of farm mortgages. William A. Heath, president of the Live Stock Exchange National of Chicago and a former cashier of the Champaign National, also has been invited to attend and to speak. Mr. Heath always is a welcome visitor among the bankers of his old home county. "The Banker," the publication of the First National of Joliet, is in the hands of bankers over the state. President Woodruff is emphasizing the value of savings and has added the coupon certificate of deposit bearing 3% interest to his attractive ideas of thrift. "The Banker" is a most interesting little publication and furnishes good publicity for the bank.

BANK ADVERTISES IN FIVE LANGUAGES

The savings department of the Millikin National at Decatur, Ill., has been advertising not only in English, but in Italian, Greek, German and Polish and the results have justified the venture. J. P. Gorin, in charge of that branch of the bank, declares that the advertisements brought results, although prior to that time there were depositors of all of the nationalities mentioned. Many of the depositors can read and write in their own language, but are unlettered in English.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

Following strenuous efforts on the part of national banks of the state it is probable that the bill excluding national banks as depositories of state funds will be shelved by the legislative joint committee on finance or recommended killed outright. Attorney Ralph W. Jackmann, representing the Rock County National of Janesville; Vice-President E. M. Wing of the Batavia National of LaCrosse; President J. W. P. Lombard of the National Exchange of Milwaukee; President A. E. Proudfit of the First National of Madison; and Solomon Levitan of the Commercial National of Madison opposed the bill at the hearing this week. The chief arguments against it were that it constitutes class legislation in discriminating against citizens owning stock in national banks; that it would restrict the state depositories to banks of perhaps less responsibility than national banks, and that it would cause great inconvenience in the payment of claims against the state. The Milwaukee Sentinel administers the following editorial rap at the proposed legislation:

"The bill is so palpably unjust as an open and unabashed attempt at discriminatory class legislation; so manifestly against the public interest in the observance of sound banking rules by the state treasurer; and so manifestly opens wide the door to a risky favoritism, that it should get short shrift at the hands of the legislative finance committee."

Second Ward Sends Out Monthly Letter

Second Ward Savings has accomplished another step in backing up its claim as "the bank of personal service" by instituting a monthly letter on trade conditions throughout the United States. This letter, in emulation of those of several larger institutions, already has attained a large mailing list.

Swindlers Sentenced

Signed checks secured from the Milwaukee office of the Illinois Steel Company were responsible for the sentencing, for three and one half years, each, of Arthur L. George, aged 21, and Roland Gimmer, aged 19, to the state prison at Waupun. It is Gimmer's fifth trip to the penitentiary.

Allis-Chalmers Sale Confirmed

The petition of Attorneys Leon B. Lamfrom, Milwaukee, and Sydney Bernheim, Boston, representing Nathan Eisemann, Boston, to have the recent sale of the Allis-Chalmers properties in Milwaukee canceled and new proceedings instituted was disregarded last Friday by United States District Judge Ferdinand Geiger, who confirmed the sale with the provision that the purchasing committee sign a bond that the sales of the property outside the state would bring a price that would insure the bondholders 62½ per cent. Counsel for the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings of Chicago, Wisconsin National and First National, Milwaukee, argued for the confirmation of the sales.

Wisconsin Notes

A petition from the Milwaukee Housewives League setting forth the advantages of direct country produce transportation to the city proved a telling point in favor of the Milwaukee Western Electric franchise at a council committee hearing Monday. The franchise dispute, of two years standing, probably will be decided in favor of the railway company before summer.

A fourteen story hotel at Sycamore and Second streets to be erected by Saxe Brothers and a ten story addition to the Wisconsin Hotel now being erected by Richards Brothers near Second street and Grand avenue are this week's high scores in the building boom.

Edward A. Farmer, cashier of the German-American Bank, recently confined to his home by illness, is back at his desk this week.

The new Farmers Bank at Eldoeron received deposits aggregating $2,000, on its opening day. The officers are: president, J. N. Manson; vice-president, A. J. Plowman; cashier, Benjamin Olson.

Charles Chafee, aged 73 years, one of Rhinelander's earliest citizens and president of the First National of that place, died on Tuesday after a week's illness. Mr. Chafee was one of the pioneers who helped develop northern Wisconsin and was interested in many enterprises. He was a prominent Mason.

FOREIGN TRADE OF THE UNITED STATES BY PORTS, 1912.

The increasing share of our foreign commerce which is handled by the gulf, northern border, and Pacific ports again is illustrated in the import and export figures of the calendar year 1912, and is especially notable when compared with those of a decade earlier. The ten-year tables of the trade of the United States, by ports, appearing in the Monthly Summary of Commerce and Finance for December, 1912, prepared by the statistical division of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, show that while the imports of the Atlantic ports increased but about 80 per cent in the decade from 1902 to 1912, those of the northern border ports increased 100 per cent; those of the Pacific ports, about 120 per cent; and those of the gulf ports, about 200 per cent. On the export side the contrast is even more striking, the increase in exports through the Atlantic ports having been but about 50 per cent; through the Pacific ports, 62 per cent; through the gulf ports, 116 per cent; and through the northern border ports, about 220 per cent. The share which the Atlantic ports handled of the total import trade of the United States was in 1902 80 per cent; in 1912, 76 per cent; and of the total export trade, in 1902, 64½ per cent; and in 1912, 54½ per cent.

Considering the various ports forming the great groups, Boston shows a marked increase in imports during the ten-year period, from 78 million dollars in 1902 to 151 million in 1912. Exports, however, slightly declined from 87 million dollars in 1902 to 66 million in 1912. New York shows an increase of about 81 per cent in imports and 76 per cent in exports, the figures being, of imports, 591 million dollars in 1902 and 1,068 million in 1912; and of exports, 492 million dollars in 1902 and 896 million in 1912. Philadelphia shows an increase in imports from 55 million dollars in 1902 to 93 million, 1912; but in exports a slight decline, from 76 million dollars in 1902 to 73 million in 1912. Baltimore shows a slight increase in imports during the decade, from 25 million dollars in 1902 to 28 million in 1912; and a larger increase in exports, from 74 million dollars in 1902 to 100 million in 1912. Newport News shows a marked decline in both imports and exports, imports having decreased from 4 million dollars in 1902 to 2 million dollars in 1912, and exports, from 30 million to 9 million during the same period. Savannah shows an increase in imports from three-quarters of a million dollars in 1902 to 4 million in 1912, and in exports, from 48 million dollars in 1902 to 85 million in 1912.

The gulf ports show remarkable increases, especially on the export side. New Orleans show imports, in 1902, 25 million dollars, and in 1912, 83 million; and exports in 1902, 131 million dollars, in 1912, 171 million. At Galveston, imports increased from a little over 1 million dollars in 1902 to 6 million in 1912, and exports from 95 million dollars in 1902, to 286 million in 1912, Galveston thus ranking second in the list of exporting ports in the United States.

On the Pacific Coast, San Francisco shows an increase in imports from 36 million dollars to 63 million, and exports from 38 million to 56 million dollars during the period 1902 to 1912, while Puget Sound shows an increase in imports from 13 million dollars in 1902 to 48 million in 1912, and exports from 35 million dollars in 1902 to 67 million in 1912.

The northern border districts show very large increases in both imports and exports, the increase in imports for the entire group being from 75 million dollars in 1902 to 151 million in 1912; in exports, from 114 million dollars in 1902 to 364 million in 1912. This growth in the trade through the northern border ports parallels closely the growth in our trade with Canada during the same period, the exports to Canada having grown from 111 million dollars in 1902 to 376 million in 1912, and the imports from Canada, from 53 million dollars in 1902 to 121 million in 1912.

The interior ports, to which merchandise passes direct from the border for appraisement and payment of duties at these ports, and which now number over 20, show very large gains in direct importations during the ten-year period, the total value of their imports being for 1902 less than 3 million dollars, and 1912 over 23 million.

WOULD AMEND SAVINGS BANK LAW

In the annual report of the New York superintendent of banks, attention is called to the necessity of amending the savings bank laws.

"In connection with the bill pending in the legislature and urged by the superintendent of banks to require the creation of reserve funds for savings banks the attention of the legislature has been called to the existing lack of any provision in the banking law of the state requiring the maintenance of any reserve to protect savings bank depositors against loss."

Superintendent Van Tuyl, in conclusion, expresses the hope that the legislature may be so strongly impressed with the necessity for the passage of remedial legislation for savings banks as to insure favorable action on measures now pending.

Complaint also is made that some savings banks number among their depositors people who have no right to be classed as such, but who take advantage of the opportunity to evade taxation by depositing their money in savings banks, and then when there is a money stringency, withdraw their funds in order to take advantage of the low price of bonds and other investments.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, March 12th.—Bank clearings during the past week have been large and all branches of banking have been active. The demand for money has been of fair proportions, while rates were firm at 5 or 6 per cent on call and time loans. Commercial paper was discounted by banks and brokers at 5½ per cent. New York exchange was in fair offerings, while the demand was light and the discount rate between banks was 10 cents per $1,000.

County Bankers Organize

The St. Louis County Bankers Association was organized at a dinner at the Algonquin Country Club last Saturday night. J. H. Trembly was made president; P. P. Lewis, vice-president; Fred J. Hollocher, secretary and Robert E. Collins, treasurer. The bankers assembled at the Trust Company building in Webster Groves and were taken in automobiles through the suburb's residence section to the club. Breckinridge Jones was a speaker and Charles L. Martin addressed the bankers on their relations to good roads. George Lane Edwards talked of the benefits to accrue from the social side of a county association; P. P. Lewis told of the relation between the agriculturist and the banker, and Robert E. Collins discussed annexation of the suburbs to St. Louis. A committee composed of Robert E. Collins, E. Hereford and C. E. King was appointed to draft by-laws and a constitution to submit to the next meeting subject to the call of the chairman. All but three of the twenty banking institutions of the county were represented. They were: The Trust Company and Bank of Kirkwood, St. Louis County Bank and the Trust Company of St. Louis County at Clayton, Bank of Eureka and the Farmers Bank of Eureka, Bank and Trust Company of Webster Groves, Bank of Ferguson, Maplewood Bank, Bank of Florissant, Creve Coeur Bank, Bank of Manchester, Valley Park Trust, Lemay Ferry Bank, DeHodiamont Bank and the Wellston Trust.

Bank Stockholder Sues

A dissatisfied stockholder in the Commerce has brought suit for an accounting against B. F. and George Lane Edwards, charging that they benefited pecuniarily and the Commerce lost by the purchase of the Fourth National. The Edwardses were owners of 3,600 Fourth National shares, bought by the Commerce at $300. President B. F. Edwards will deny the allegations in the bill filed.

Bank Gets Finger Tester

The Commonwealth Trust Company is the first of the St. Louis banks to install apparatus for identifying depositors by their finger prints. The system will not be used for all depositors, but only for those who lack the literacy of writing a characteristic signature. R. L. Gurney, manager of the savings department, who was responsible for the addition of the finger-print system to the company's equipment, said, "I have observed a number of savings depositors who wrote with difficulty and still maintained desirable accounts. The finger-print system will be an advantage to them. We shall use the system especially with Chinese, who are very hard to distinguish either by face or signature." The prints of the index, middle and ring fingers of the right hand are taken on the signature, and subsequent checks are required to have the same prints.

Deepwater Banker Guilty

John Ogden, former president of the Farmers Bank of Deepwater, last week pleaded guilty to the charge of swindling Joseph Motter out of $1,800, and was sentenced to four years in the penitentiary. Four other cases remain on the docket against him. His swindling operations and forgeries are estimated to have netted $30,000. The Farmers Bank of Deepwater was closed November 30, 1912, when Ogden was arrested on a charge of forgery. He was made president of the bank six months after his release from the state penitentiary, where he served a three-year sentence for theft of some harness. At the time of his last arrest, it was said that his speculations would not affect the bank, individuals being the principal sufferers.

Edina Banker Dead

J. W. Ellis, president of the Knox County Savings, Edina, Mo., died at his home last week, at the age of fifty-one years. His death was caused by typhoid fever. Mr. Ellis was a graduate of one of the biggest law schools in the country, and for many years a practicing lawyer. He was county recorder of Knox county for sixteen years, and became president of the bank about two years ago.

Bankers Meet at Texarkana

The fifth annual meeting of Group 6 of the Arkansas Bankers Association convened at Texarkana on Friday of last week, with about sixty members and a number of visitors present. Judge William Hodges delivered the welcoming address and the response was made by President Thomas C. McRae of the Bank of Prescott. The annual address of Chairman Charles M. Blocker, and the annual report of Secretary Geo. H. Bell then were heard, after which Col. Henry Exall of Dallas, president of the Texas Industrial Congress, delivered an address. Officers elected for the year are: Chairman, Jesse N. Riley, of the Hope National, Hope; vice-chairman, R. C. Childs, Clark County National, Gurdon; secretary, T. E. Brown, Farmers and Merchants Bank and Trust Company, Dequeen; member nominating committee, Alten Winham, vice-president of the Merchants and Planters Bank, Texarkana; member of executive council for three years, T. A. Magee, Peoples Bank, Magnolia. In the afternoon the visitors were taken for an automobile ride over the city and in the evening were the guests of the local bankers at a banquet, over which Judge W. H. Arnold, former president of the Arkansas State Bar Association, presided as toastmaster.

New Bank at Freeport, Texas

Following the information received in Freeport, Tex., that the treasury department at Washington had approved the organization of the Freeport National, with a capital stock of $50,000, work was commenced on the construction of a new building which is to be the bank's home. Ground was broken for the foundation on March 6th. The site for the bank building is located on the northwest corner of Park Avenue and Broad Street, with the structure facing Park Avenue, in the very heart of the business section. Details of the bank building plans now made public show that the edifice has been designed as an exclusive bank building and will be occupied solely by the Freeport National. The building is to be built of Roman pressed brick from St. Louis, with native Texas Luders cut stone trimmings. Architecturally the building will present a very attractive and pretentious appearance. The interior arrangements provide a main banking room in the front part of the building, and a directors' room in the rear. All of the interior fixtures and furniture are to be of mahogany, while all the floors are to be tile. The bank will be provided with a burglar proof vault and safe, both of the most modern and perfected pattern. The structure throughout will be lighted by electricity. The cost of the building is given at approximately $20,000. The arrangements of the interior and style of fittings and equipment have been designed to present not only an artistic appearance, but to provide also every modern facility and convenience to the new bank's customers when its doors are thrown open for business. The first officer to be appointed is George C. Morris, former cashier of the First State of Gainesville, who resigned from the latter institution to accept a similar position with the Freeport National. Mr. Morris has been cashier of the Gainesville banking institution for several years, and is well known in Texas banking and financial circles. He also was a member of the board of aldermen in Gainesville and president of the Young Mens Business Association of that city.

IMPORTANT FEATURES OF ARKANSAS LAW

Now that another delinquent state of the Union has seen fit to enact a banking law which contains provisions in the nature of solutions of some of the distressing banking problems with which certain states, even though they have a general banking statute, are confronted, an examination of the Arkansas law with a view of appropriating some of its salient features possibly would prove profitable to the aforesaid sufferers.

Possibly that portion of the law with which Illinois, and some of the other afflicted states, chiefly are concerned, is that part which relates to private banks, which always have proved a sore spot in the history of bank legislation in this state. As is the case in all banks under state supervision, the new law provides for examinations, etc., and further says that any individual, firm or corporation holding himself or itself out to the public as a bank or banker shall be subject to the provisions of the act.

Section 15 of the law reads:

"Any individual or firm doing business as a private bank shall designate a name for such bank, which shall show that it is not incorporated and all property, real or personal, owned by such bank, shall be held in the name of the bank, and not in the name of the individuals of the firm; all assets of any private bank shall be exempt from attachment or execution by any creditor of such individual or firm until all liabilities of such bank shall have been paid in full. No private banker shall use any of the funds of his bank for private business, and the note of the owner or owners of any private bank shall not be considered or accepted as a part of its assets. In case of the death of an individual banker, his widow shall not be endowed of any of the property of the bank, except such as remains after the payment of all depositors and other creditors."

As private banking is carried on in Illinois, the proprietor occupies exactly the same legal status as does the proprietor of a bakery shop, or any other enterprise. He constitutes the "bank." He also may run, as was revealed not long since, a saloon and a barber shop in conjunction with his banking venture. Inasmuch as he is the whole works, whatever assets there are belong to him, and of course he assumes the liabilities. In other words, in winding up the affairs of his respective businesses, the law can take cognizance only of the personal estate of the proprietor. Consequently, if the saloon or the barber shop prove a failure, the depositors of the bank, who are ordinary creditors sharing pro rata with the creditors of the saloon and the barber shop, stand an excellent chance of losing some, if not all, of their money.

The injustice of bank depositors being compelled to make up losses sustained by the banker in other ventures wholly foreign to that of banking is at once apparent. The supreme court of Illinois has ruled that banking is a calling affected with a public interest. As such, suitable legislation should be enacted which will prevent the occurrence of such a disgraceful situation as has been outlined above. The same state of affairs prevails when the "banker" dies or goes insane; his estate must be administered by the probate court.

So much has been said and written of late with respect to the crude banking law of Illinois which permits the existence of the present almost intolerable conditions that almost anything one might say in that connection would prove to be trite. The law has been denounced from the bench, by the press and by public speakers. Even a cursory examination of it reveals the glaring defects and inconsistencies. It doesn't require any argument to convince an intelligent person of the disastrous effects which necessarily must follow as a result. Almost everybody appreciates the situation; they couldn't help doing so when there are so many horrible examples. Most people also know why and by whom attempted remedial legislation is opposed. Those who are desirous of a better order of things, however, are hoping that this time the legislature will manifest a disposition to listen to reason and afford Illinois the much needed and long-sought relief.

HOW THEY DO IT IN OKLAHOMA

The little pamphlet—Oklahoma's New Banking Law—which is being sent out as a document by Secretary W. B. Harrison has one very brief section in the midst of its wilderness of guaranty and liquidation sections which ought to be in every new banking law. It reads:

Section 8. From and after the passage of this act no charter or authority to engage in the banking business of this state shall be issued, and no bank shall be permitted to engage in business, except on certificate issued by the bank commissioner upon approval of the banking board.

This section operates against all comers and the effect is to bar, so far as may be, undesirable banks and good banks in undesirable locations. It prohibits private banking as a "bank" and furthermore all power rests "solely in the discretion of the bank commissioner and the banking board."

Quite as much harm to right banking conditions may be done by having too many banks for the business at hand as in almost any other way. Competition gives way in a healthy sense to necessity. Loans are scrambled for with too little regard for safety and deposits command an ever increasing rate and oftentimes become the subject of barter. The importance of not allowing a town or community to be over-banked takes rank in the end with care as to whom banking charters are issued. The Oklahoma "section 8" ought to go in all new laws, including the next national bank act.

BANKING REFORM

The official organ of the National Citizens League has come to the belief that we are entering an era of currency and banking reform. It has resumed activities and quotes President Wilson's inaugural with hopefulness and approval. After quoting the pure, chaste English of the president, "Banking Reform" goes on to say:

Here is a specific and official announcement that banking reform is at least second only to tariff reform in the mind of President Wilson. Of his intention to include the two in the program for the special session he says nothing. The first reason for calling the new congress in special session was to revise the tariff. That work was begun long ago. When congress meets the ways and means committee will be ready to report several schedules and work on all of them will be well along. The other question is in the same position. The "Money Trust" has been investigated. If the result is not satisfactory there is little fault to find in respect to the information obtained. The other subcommittee of the banking and currency committee also finished its work. It has a plan formulated and the new committee will find that the work has been done.

Banking reform, as a question for the consideration of congress, therefore is as far advanced as tariff reform. If we consider the course of bills through congress we see a period of inactivity for the house when the senate is considering the tariff and for the senate when the house is doing the same. The two measures would not interfere with each other particularly. Congress, in fact, is ready to act. Whether or not there is action depends entirely on Mr. Wilson.

The League has a better cause in espousal of reform by congress along acceptable lines than it had in reform by Aldrich along specific lines. The country will take the League at its full worth in its broader field, even if its former devotion was more in appearance than in fact.

LYNCHBURG BANKS MERGE

The Lynchburg National and the National Exchange, both of Lynchburg, Va., have been consolidated under the name of the Lynchburg National Exchange Bank, with a surplus and capital of $1,000,000, half of which will be capital and half surplus. The officers are William V. Wilson, Jr., president; Allen Cucullu and James R. William, vice-presidents; H. T. Nicholas, cashier; B. F. Cousins, assistant cashier. The Peoples National of Lynchburg, which is building a skyscraper costing $350,000, has decided to increase its capital from $300,000 to $500,000, and its surplus from $400,000 to $500,000. This will give Lynchburg three banks of a million dollars capital each.

WASTING ROAD MONEY

Illinois now wastes nearly $3,000,000 every year on road work. If the present road funds were spent under an efficient system permanent roads could be built with a comparatively small additional outlay. If things keep on as they are now $30,000,000 will be wasted in the next ten years.

Do Illinois farmers want to stand for this? If not, they should not let uninformed agitators turn them against the movement for the enactment of a new road law.

NEW CONTINENTAL AND COMMERCIAL BUILDING

The iron work on the monster new Continental and Commercial bank building is up fifteen floors at the east end of the block on Fifth Avenue, and nine on the LaSalle Street end. Eight huge polished granite columns are in place on LaSalle Street front, and the iron for the block-long, vaulted roof of the banking room is up. So is the iron for "the grand staircase." Thousands gather to watch the developments day by day.

NEW ALABAMA BANK

One of the strongest financial institutions in north Alabama is the Bank of Commerce, Decatur, which was organized recently with a capital stock of $200,000. The officers are as follows: Colonel C. C. Harris, president; John L. Brock and J. L. Hutton, vice-presidents; W. B. Shackelford, cashier; J. William Pole, assistant cashier.

GEO. B. CALDWELL ELECTED DIRECTOR

George B. Caldwell, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings of Chicago, has been elected a director of the Oak Park (Ill.) State Bank.

NEW OFFICERS FOR CHICAGO SAVINGS

Henry C. Burnett, is receiving congratulations from his many friends in the banking fraternity upon his appointment to the position of cashier of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company, succeeding Huston Jones, who resigned some months ago to enter other business.

Mr. Burnett comes to the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company from the National Bank of Commerce, St. Louis, with which institution he had been connected since 1897, starting as collector and gradually advancing to the position of manager of their exchange department and assistant cashier, which latter office he has held for the past five years. He comes from a family of bankers, his father being cashier of the First National of Richmond, Va., for twenty-five years, and Charles R. Burnett, his brother, being first assistant cashier of that bank at the present time.

W. A. Nicol, has been made additional assistant cashier of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company, being promoted from chief clerk. Mr. Nicol began his banking career in 1902, with the National Bank of North America, later going to the Continental National, and from there to the Chicago Savings Bank in 1905. This recognition of Mr. Nicol's ability and faithfulness to service is well merited.

ALL STOCKHOLDERS TO PARTICIPATE

In accordance with a decision rendered this week by Judge Honore, none of the stockholders of the old Chicago National will be barred from participating in possible proceeds of the suit now pending against C. K. G. Billings, on account of not contributing toward the expense of the suit. There is a possibility, however, that those stockholders who were represented by directors or directors who also were stockholders and who are accused of negligence in the conduct of the bank may be barred from participation.

WOMEN LARGE STOCKHOLDERS

It is said that sixteen women, most of whom reside in St. Louis and immediate vicinity, hold almost $3,000,000 worth of stock in the banks and trust companies of that city. The individual holdings range from $75,000 to $322,017, and the average is $179,855. These figures represent the market value of the stock, which is more than twice that of the par value. It is said that women prefer putting nearly all their money in one kind of stock while men scatter theirs around. Only three of the sixteen women have stock in more than two institutions.

FARMERS AGAINST ROAD REFORM

Springfield, Ill., March 12th.—Two hundred farmers, comprising the Farmers Protective League of Sangamon county, held a meeting in the Odd Fellows building in this city, and went on record as unalterably opposed to the Tice bill changing the roads and bridges laws of the state. It was decided to establish a lobby to work against the passage of the measure.

Cleveland Central States News Letter Cincinnati

Recommendation has been made to the Cleveland Clearing House Association that a country clearing house be established there. The recommendation was made by Joseph Ward for a committee of the American Institute of Banking, Cleveland Chapter, which had investigated the advisability of making the departure. A country clearing house would provide means whereby Cleveland banks collecting checks on banks in other Ohio cities and towns, especially small towns, would do so through a clearing house. The clearing house would gather all items meant for one out-of-town bank and send them in one package, saving a tremendous amount of postage in the course of a year. The institution also would be able to effect more advantageous exchange terms or collection charges than now is the case.

Seeks Amendments to "Blue Sky" Bill

The directors of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce on Tuesday adopted the report of the committee appointed to investigate the provisions of the "Blue Sky" bill directed at fraudulent stock-selling schemes. The report assails the Kansas plan of licensing securities, but favors licensing the dealer, and suggests some minor amendments. Vice-president F. A. Henry and Secretary M. A. Havens of the Chamber of Commerce went to Columbus following the meeting, to be present at the hearing Tuesday night before the legislative committee in charge of the measure. The bill drafted, known as House Bill No. 357, combines the Kansas idea of licensing securities and the plan to license dealers, which is not included in the Kansas law. The committee's report held licensing stocks unavoidably would result in the imputation that the state is guaranteeing the investment to a certain extent. The committee favored licensing a dealer but keeping watch of his transactions and revoking his license if fake securities should be offered by him. Other amendments suggested were in objection to compelling the licensing of municipal bonds, the licensing of corporations selling stock to their own stockholders, or the licensing of a bank desiring to sell loan securities that had been forfeited. "The principal amendments suggested are pretty well known to have the approval of men who drew the bill," said Assistant Secretary Baxter of the Chamber of Commerce, "though some of the amendments have not been submitted to the authors of the measure."

Bankers Preparing Play

Members of the Cleveland Institute of Banking are making elaborate preparations for their musical extravaganza, "Bankers at the King's Court," which will be produced at one of the Cleveland theaters the latter part of the month. Over sixty members of the chapter will participate in the cast, and there will be a chorus of sixty voices. This will be the second production offered by the institute, their first effort being a minstrel show last year.

Bank Deposits Fall Off

Individual deposits in Ohio banks fell off approximately $3,000,000, according to the report of the state bank examiner showing the condition of state banks as of February 4th, in comparison with the last previous statement, which was issued November 26, 1912.

Bank Examiner Baxter Resigns

Frank E. Baxter has resigned as state superintendent of banking and his resignation has been accepted by Governor Cox. Recently, Baxter asked for a leave of absence in order that his official conduct of the department of banking might be fully investigated without hindrance from him. The resignation came as a climax to the recent indictment of Clement Baxter, a brother, in connection with the affairs of the defunct Columbus Savings and Trust Company, and charges that the funds of that concern were misapplied.

Mutual Bank Wins Suit

Affirming the Cuyahoga county courts the supreme court has handed down a decision by which the Mutual Bank wins a judgment of $54,449.98 from the Cleveland Trust Company, as assignee for the defunct Euclid Avenue Trust Company of Cleveland. The original suit of the Mutual Bank was begun on a $50,000 certificate of deposit, issued to P. J. Kiernan. By the decision the Assets Realization Company is loser for $27,224.99. It had bought up the assets of the Euclid Avenue Trust Company and guaranteed creditors 50 cents on the dollar.

Increase In Cincinnati Clearings

Cincinnati clearings for the week ending March 8th, were $1,734,650 in excess of the corresponding week of 1912, while the daily average clearings for last week show an improvement of $289,108 over the daily average for the corresponding week last year. The clearings for the week were $28,815,300 and the daily average $4,802,550 as compared with an average of $4,516,400 for the week ending March 1st.

Ohio News Notes

Henry P. Shanks has been elected secretary and vice-president of the Union Savings, Toledo, to fill the vacancy left by the death of William H. Maher.

The Commercial State Bank has been organized at Napoleon with a capital stock of $50,000. Ex-congressman D. Meekison is president; A. E. Mearker, vice-president; Mathias Rieser, cashier, and Geo. McKee, assistant cashier.

No Charge For Collection

The Syracuse Clearing House Association has voted to abolish charges on checks coming to Syracuse banks from the states of New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, New Jersey, Rhode Island and Connecticut, and from Baltimore, Detroit, Washington, Chicago and St. Louis. The plan goes into effect to-day and it is announced that after that date all checks on Syracuse banks will be accepted without collection charges by all banks in New York City. It is estimated that the abolition of these charges will add $75,000 a year to the expenses of Syracuse banks, but it is argued that the amount of Syracuse deposits in out-of-town institutions that make no collection charges is sufficient to more than make up the expense.

Michigan Banks In Excellent Shape

The bi-monthly report of Banking Commissioner E. H. Doyle shows the state depositories and trust companies to be in excellent condition. Since November 26, 1912, there has been a gain in aggregate business of $4,835,907.11. In the last year there has been an increase in savings deposits of $24,052,747.23, while the commercial deposits have increased $6,420,901.78. The total reserve maintained by Michigan state banks and trust companies on February 4, 1913, was $63,370,382.66 or 19.47 per cent. The total cash reserve amounted to $22,548,781.61 or 6.93 per cent. The total reserve carried by Michigan state banks is $12,065,498.09 over the requirements of the banking law.

Increase Capital Stock

The stockholders of the Home Savings, Detroit, Mich., have approved the recommendation of the directors by voting to increase the capital stock and surplus of the bank from $750,000 each to $1,000,000 each by the issue of 2,500 shares of new stock.

Private Bank Closes

The Gobleville Exchange Bank, the largest bank in Van Buren county, Mich., closed its doors last Friday. The owner, Stanley Sackett, has informed the depositors that everything is all right and that the bank probably will re-open within a week as a state bank. The bank was established by Sackett twenty years ago.

Kentucky Banks Consolidate

The consolidation of the Phoenix and Third National and the Lexington Banking and Trust Company was perfected last Saturday. All liabilities and deposits of every nature were assumed by the Phoenix and Third National. The new institution will have a capital of $800,000, a surplus fund of $160,000, and $200,000 has been provided for the trust company known as the Phoenix and Third Trust Company, which is in course of organization and will be in operation about April 1st. The merged institutions will have assets aggregating about $4,500,000 and will be the largest banking institution in Kentucky outside of Louisville. The officers of the new bank are: Younger Alexander, president; H. P. Headley and W. A. McDowell, vice-presidents; W. L. Threlkeld, cashier; B. M. Darnaby, C. Y. Freeman and Sam B. Walton, assistant cashiers.

HARRIS TRUST HAS CANADIAN ISSUE

Harris Trust and Savings Bank is bringing out in this market $2,000,000 Montreal Tramways Company first and refunding mortgage five per cent gold bonds, due July 1, 1941. The Montreal Tramways Company owns and controls the entire street railway system in the city of Montreal, including all suburbs and the Island of Montreal, with the exception of one mile of interurban railway entering the city. The population is over 500,000. The street railway service in Montreal has been in successful operation since 1861. The Montreal Street Railway Company, the principal predecessor of the Montreal Tramways Company, paid consecutive annual dividends on its annual stock for more than thirty years. The cost of the present property was more than twice the amount of all outstanding bonds. The gross earnings of the company have increased from $4,056,100 in 1908 to $6,378,212 in 1913. The net earnings are practically two and one-half times the annual bond interest charges. The bank is offering the bonds at 99 and interest.

A $3,000 plaster model of the Minneapolis art museum as it is to be when completed is the central point of interest at present in the Security National lobby. The artist, who worked nine months on the model, is setting it up. It will be covered, when aggregated, with a glass case and will continue a shop point for months.

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Through the filing of a perfunctory petition in the circuit court of Kansas City last week there was revealed a story of fidelity and business honesty seldom met with nowadays. The story makes a particularly pathetic appeal to the people of Kansas City because of the universal regard in which the principals are held. And these principals are Willard P. Holmes and his wife, now bent and aged, and who for more than twenty years have worked and saved and suffered self-denial because of a sense of honor that impelled them to pay back dollar for dollar the debt owed by a bank that failed in 1892.

In the prime of his business life Willard P. Holmes organized the Security Savings Trust Company of Kansas City. It was a flourishing institution of modest proportions and it attracted hundreds of smaller depositors because of the high character of Mr. Holmes, the president. In 1892 the bank became involved in many difficulties and finally was forced to close. At that time Mr. Holmes gave up every dollar's worth of property he owned to pay the depositors. But when the wreckage was cleared away it was found that $62,536 still remained due the depositors. Mr. Holmes modestly told the creditors that he would pay back every cent with interest. He had nothing left except courage and a wife who shared fully his purpose. These two faced the world together and for more than twenty years they have toiled and saved and paid. Year after year the debt has been reduced and oddly enough none of the intimate friends of Mr. and Mrs. Holmes knew of the sacrifices that were made daily to achieve this result. Perhaps the grim tragedy of this struggle never would have come to light had it not been that Mr. Holmes went into court and asked to be appointed assignee in the place of A. N. Gossett who asked to be relieved and desired to resign in favor of the former banker. It was shown by the filed statement that only a few thousands of dollars remain to be paid and Mr. Holmes wanted the court to bond him to "search diligently" for about fifty small depositors who have left the city and who have not been located. Mr. Holmes explained briefly how he and his wife had worked and paid the bank's debt. Both now are well over 60 years old but their one hope is that they may see the debt wiped out entirely before they die. Mr. Holmes could have taken advantage of the bankruptcy law to shake the burden from his shoulders but he would not. "Give me just a few years more," he pleaded, "and I can die in honor and in peace." The court granted his request.

Ex-Banker Dies

C. E. Denton, former secretary of state of Kansas and former president of the American State Bank of Wichita, fell dead of heart disease in the Wichita Club, Thursday, March 6th. He had been ill for several months but it was believed his health had improved. Mr. Denton came to Kansas from Peoria, Ill., where he was born 54 years ago. He settled on a farm in the southern part of the state and later went into the banking business in the small town of Attica, not far from Wichita. His business flourished and he removed to Topeka and became identified with several financial institutions in the Kansas capital. A little more than four years ago he was elected secretary of state and retired from office a year ago. He went to Wichita and bought heavily in the American State Bank of that city and became its president. He was very popular and enjoyed a wide acquaintance. Burial was at Wichita.

Another Candidate for Comptroller

Bankers all over the Central West are working hard for the appointment of Lon V. Stephens of Missouri, as comptroller of the currency. Last week every member of the Oklahoma legislature and all of the state officers signed an indorsement for the Missourian and in Kansas a similar petition is being circulated among the bankers with great success. In Missouri it merely is a matter of seeing the bankers, who are in favor of Stephens almost to a man. Mr. Stephens served as state treasurer of Missouri for seven years, under two governors, until he himself was elected chief executive. He has been engaged in the banking business at Booneville, Mo., for thirty years and is interested heavily in financial institutions in Kansas City and St. Louis. He is a very popular man, a lifelong and prominent democrat, and his indorsement by the bankers of this part of the country is unusually sincere and earnest.

Reports Good Conditions in Central West

"Two weeks more of favorable weather will mean a prosperous year to the Central West," said Watt Webb, president of the Missouri Savings, to the correspondent for THE CHICAGO BANKER a few days ago. Mr. Webb had just returned from the second tour of investigation he has made this year which included parts of Missouri and Kansas. He was impressed with the satisfactory condition of farming operations and said that everywhere the wheat was in splendid progress and of large acreage. Small bankers who are in direct touch with the farmers declare that there will be little or no winter loss of crops or live stock, provided always that the fateful two weeks pass without unseasonable weather. Fruit prospects are fine and especially good in the apple, strawberry and peach districts of the Ozark region of Southern Missouri. For more than thirty years Mr. Webb has not missed at least one tour of inspection in this part of the country and usually he makes his trips at this critical season when the wheat is showing well above ground.

Bankers Club Meets

A large number of local bankers, business and professional men, among whom were several out-of-town visitors, attended the monthly dinner of the Kansas City Bankers Club, Friday evening of last week. Two addresses, as divergent in subject as the poles, were delivered. George H. Forsee, industrial commissioner of the Commercial Club of Kansas City, spoke on the "Industrial Outlook in Kansas City," and the Rev. Dr. J. B. Silcox, pastor of the Westminster Congregational Church, spoke to the supposedly unemotional money lords on "A Plea for Poetry." Mr. Forsee made direct reference to the difficulty of securing financial aid for factories and other commercial enterprises seeking to locate in Kansas City, and said that local bankers had been criticised because of a lack of encouragement to new factories. He made a plea for greater interest among bankers in home enterprises and his address made a deep impression upon his hearers.

Central West Notes

Frank Miller and George Bates, alias George Jackson, believed to be leading spirits in the bank-robbing industry of Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma, have been placed on trial at Washington, Kan. The specific case now under consideration is the robbing of the State Bank of Hanover, Kan., about two years ago. The prisoners were arrested in Arkansas a few months ago after a series of robberies in that state and they had several thousands of dollars in their pockets when taken. It is alleged that Miller and Bates were the organizers of the famous Wymore (Neb.) gang of bank robbers which operated so successfully a number of years ago. There are sixty witnesses from Wymore and points in Kansas and Arkansas to testify at the trial.

Alfred B. Day, president of the First National of Mansfield, Mass., who died recently, was well known in the Central West where he had been engaged in various kinds of business for many years. He had lived in Omaha, Kansas City and St. Louis, and a son, Alfred K. Day of Kansas City, survives him.

J. C. Rogers, 65 years old, and for many years a resident of Wamego, Kan., died at his home in that place last week. Mr. Rogers was a unique and interesting character and gave away a fortune. At one time he was a millionaire banker, having organized the private banking company of J. C. Rogers & Co. of Wamego. Ten years later this bank became the First National of Wamego. Mr. Rogers purchased the Wisconsin building at the World's Fair in Chicago and removed it to Kansas City and it now is owned and occupied by the Elks. He owned considerable other valuable property in Kansas City.

Word has been received of the arrival in New York of Lord Monson of London, chairman of the reorganized committee of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient railroad. W. T. Kemper, president of the Commerce Trust of Kansas City, the three receivers for the railroad, and a number of attorneys have gone to New York, and a general meeting of representatives of all interests will be held. It is believed that the fate of the great property will be decided soon.

J. De Forest Richards, cashier of the Omaha National, addressed the Omaha Real Estate Exchange last week on currency and credits. He argued strongly for currency reform.

Phineas E. Burke, a paying teller for the Fidelity Trust of Kansas City, died last week, following an operation for appendicitis. He was 29 years old and had been with the company seven years.

E. F. Swinney, president of the First National of Kansas City, returned last week from Augusta, Ga., where he took part in the reception to former President Taft. Mr. Swinney and Mr. Taft have been warm friends for many years and they played golf together on the Bon Air links last week in celebration of the former president's return to private life.

The Bank of Worth (Mo.) has been purchased by Walter W. Head, cashier of the German-American National of St. Joseph, Mo. The bank has a capital stock of $10,000 with deposits of $80,000.

Following the death of A. L. McPherson, president of the Bank of Elgin, Okla., a few weeks ago, O. A. and E. McPherson, vice-president and cashier respectively, and sons of the deceased, have disposed of the family's interest in the bank to H. P. Wattengel, former cashier of the Bison (Okla.) State.

W. J. Bailey, former governor of Kansas and now vice-president of the Commercial National of Atchison, addressed the Interstate Agricultural and Industrial Congress in St. Joseph, Mo., last week. Other speakers of prominence were R. T. Forbes, president of the First National of St. Joseph, and W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central Railroad. Hundreds of farmers, bankers and business men were in attendance at the congress.

The A. W. Lander Bank, a private institution of New Hope, Tex., not far from Dallas, was robbed recently by bunglers who managed to secure only about $200 from a badly mutilated safe.

The Citizens Guaranty State of Hutchins, Dallas county, Tex., has been chartered with $16,000 capital. The Farmers State of Brandon, Tex., has been chartered with $20,000 capital. In Oklahoma, the State Guaranty Bank of Sperry, with $10,000, has been authorized.

F. G. Dennis, treasurer of the Oklahoma State Banking Board, was a Kansas City visitor last week.

J. E. Stephenson, cashier of the State Bank of Westphalia, Kan., with Mrs. Stephenson, spent several days in Kansas City last week, en route for California for a three-weeks' stay.

Before final adjournment, the Kansas house of representatives killed the senate bill prohibiting the making of derogatory statements about banks under penalty of a jail sentence. The house discovered that the bill was one-sided in that a man who said that a bank cashier was not conducting himself properly could be sent to jail, while that same bank cashier could say that any customer of his bank was insolvent and crooked and could not be punished.

Among the out-of-town bankers in Kansas City's financial district last week were: W. D. Fulkerson, president of the Bank of Buchanan County, St. Joseph, Mo.; Whitsed Lanning, president of the State Bank of Tonganoxie, Kan.; F. P. Elmore, cashier of the Shawnee State, Topeka; F. A. Farmer, cashier of the Bank of Commerce, Siloam Springs, Ark.; V. J. Day, cashier of the Schell City (Mo.) Bank; Carl Wil, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, Lincoln, Neb.; C. A. Garrison, president of the Smith County State, Smith Center, Kan.; C. G. Cochran, president of the First National, Plainville, Kan.; H. H. Johnson, cashier of the American National, Sapulpa, Okla.; George Olsen, cashier of the Cedar (Kan.) State Bank, J. D. Colyer, assistant cashier of the Farmers and Merchants State, Kinsley, Kan.; J. T. Wettach, president of the First National of Coffeyville, Kan.; F. R. Zacharias, president of the National Bank of Harper, Kan.; W. C. Little, president, and J. N. Talley, cashier of the Bank of Rogers (Ark.); Claud Carey, assistant cashier of the State Exchange of Hutchinson, Kan.; Ben C. Bond, cashier of the State Bank of Buffalo, (Kan.); S. A. Wood, cashier of the Peoples State Bank, Lawrence, Kan., and R. H. Sheffield, cashier of the Bank of Excelsior Springs, Mo.

HIGHWAY ASSOCIATION HOLDS MEETING

Officers and directors of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, the organization which has done so much during the past year to advance the good roads movement in Illinois, met at the La Salle Hotel Saturday evening, March 8th, and decided to continue the agitation for indorsement of its platform throughout the state. A hundred or more important organizations in the state now have indorsed this platform, which includes state aid, use of convict labor in the preparation of road material, and for actual road work where practical, under the honor system as recommended by Governor Dunne, and the dragging of earth roads.

A committee was appointed to look after the legislative situation at Springfield. S. E. Bradt of De Kalb, chairman of the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers Association, will head this committee. Mr. Bradt also is a member of a committee appointed to arrange the date and other details for a state convention of the members of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association when they expect to have a joint session of the members of the legislature in the house of representatives to present their program.

CONGRESS TARIFF WORK BEGUN

Washington, D. C.—With the house ways and means committee meeting to organize, the real tariff work of the 63d congress was begun. With only three new members on the democratic side of the committee, it seemed practically certain that the tariff measure framed under the supervision of Majority Leader Underwood during the last session would be accepted by the new committee and laid before the caucus before the extra session begins April 1st.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Clinton Morrison, founder of the Northwestern Knitting Company, which makes the Munsingwear, is dead. He was president of the Farmers and Mechanics Savings Bank from 1886 to 1895, and in 1893 and 1894 with the late Thomas Lowry, also trustee of the bank, with bonds representing the assets of the institution went to New York and obtained the money that enabled that institution to weather the storm. When Mr. Morrison was president, the present building was erected which in appearance breathes the conservatism and stability that afterwards enabled the bank to withstand unfounded runs. He was identified in the building of the Minneapolis Harvester works and prominent in the formation of the North American Telegraph Company of Minneapolis, now the Northwestern end of the Postal Telegraph Company. When Minneapolis undertook the art museum campaign with the moral support of Chicago art experts, two years ago, Mr. Morrison gave a $250,000 site, four blocks of land.

Says People Distrust Banks

With an estimate of $200,000 stored in stockings in Minneapolis, made by Vice-president J. S. Pomeroy of the Security National, he added: "This money is kept by people who distrust banks and never gets into circulation." "Stocking bankers even distrust the government," said Cashier A. V. Ostrom of the Northwestern National in a burst of confidence. "We thought the postal savings banks would bring out the secret garnerings of years, but they didn't. Some people want their money where they can see it all the time. They risk burglars, fire and loss, but will keep it." H. A. Willoughby, cashier of the First National, said $200,000 is a fair estimate of the hoards. He believes education is the only cure.

Believe Too Many Calves Are Killed

That too many calves and immature animals are sold, is borne out by the statement of Secretary A. A. McKechnie of the St. Paul Union Stockyards that receipts of calves in Feburary amounted to 7,684 as compared with 6,385 the year previous. W. E. Briggs, cashier of the Stockyards National, at the stock dinner held recently at the call of President E. W. Decker of the Northwestern National, called attention to the state of affairs.

There was an increase of 4,432 sheep in Feburary, with a total of 32,399 received. Cattle receipts were 23,793, an increase of 5,182, but hogs fell off, the 89,625 that came in totaling 2,090 less than last year. J. W. Wheeler, chairman of the committee named at the luncheon to draw up a statement of the ideas of the bankers relative to promotion of the livestock industry, will have his report ready at once. Every banker, stockman, railroad official, commercial club or agricultural improvement association official in the Northwest then will receive a copy.

Banker Appointed Deputy Examiner

I. E. Hansen, six years assistant cashier of the State of McVille, N. D., has been appointed deputy bank examiner for the state. Mr. Hansen, according to the local press, has received an important appointment that is a tribute to his skill as an expert accountant, and a host of friends join in extending congratulations on his promotion, yet regret his removal from McVille. He has been connected prominently with the welfare of the village, having been village clerk for more than two years, a member of the commercial club, chancellor commander of the Knights of Pythias, and has acted in other responsible capacities while a resident of McVille.

Northwest Notes

The Financial Northwest, Lumber Exchange building, is a new periodical in Minneapolis. It is intended to cover industrial, commercial, manufacturing and investment as well as financial news.

To put the loan sharks out of business a Minneapolis representative has introduced a bill in the Minnesota legislature. It provides that on loans of $300 and less the interest shall be not more than 1 per cent a month, without preliminary exactions. In chattel mortgage loans a preliminary fee of from $1.75 to $5.75 for a $300 loan can be collected. In Minnesota, the legal rate of interest is 10 per cent, and to get more than that amount the loaner must obtain a license from the state and allow examinations if found necessary. The fee is $50.

Thirteen banks in Swift county, Minn., report loans and discounts of $2,372,275, capital of $255,000 and surplus of $126,500, with undivided profits of $59,007. Deposits are $2,554,960.

The city statistician, who constantly is excavating in figures, has found Minneapolis to be the youngest city of 300,000 or more, advancing in fifty years from 126th to 18th.

Appointment of examiners and clerks in the office of state bank examiner, will be on a new basis if recommendations of the state examiner are carried out. He wants a law to provide that only persons who have had at least three years actual experience in banks

E. S. Tyler and F. B. Chapman have resigned as national bank examiners in North Dakota and the latter has located at Alexander, to go into the real estate and banking business. He made the decision because of the prominence given the city by the Great Northern's New Rockford to Lewiston, Mont., road.

J. F. McEwen of the public examiner's office has gone to Isabel, S. D., to supervise consolidation of the three banks. The First is to go into liquidation and its assets are to be absorbed in equal amounts by the Moreau River State and the Dewey County Bank.

The estate of Judge M. B. Koon, vice-president of the Northwestern National, was appraised at $518,822, of which $41,570 was left by the will in trust with the Minnesota Loan & Trust Company.

AMERICAN BANKERS ASSOCIATION'S THRIFT CAMPAIGN

An event which surely is one of the first rays of the dawn of the era of co-operation occurred on Wednesday evening, March 5th, in the great hall of Cooper Institute, New York City, when the first of a series of lectures upon Thrift was given through co-operation between the board of education of the City of New York, represented by Dr. Henry M. Leipziger, supervisor of lectures, and the American Bankers Association, represented by E. G. McWilliam, secretary of its savings bank section.

These lectures are a part of the campaign of education in saving and thrift and for the curtailment of extravagance which the savings bank section has instituted among the people throughout the United States, and New York City is the first to take up popular education along these lines. The object of these lectures is to give the people an intimate knowledge of the nature and functions of the various aids to thrift at hand, such as the commercial bank, trust company, savings bank, postal savings bank, insurance company, savings and loan association, thrift association and co-operative association, omitting all technical terms and explaining the most ordinary transactions in detail, as well as the organization and management of these institutions. It is felt that by these means a closer relationship will be established between the banks and the people, and a new confidence engendered, born of knowledge.

The committee having in charge this educational work throughout the country is composed of V. A. Lersner of the Williamsburgh Savings, Brooklyn, chairman; J. C. Griswold, Excelsior Savings, New York, and W. R. Meakle, Paterson (N. J.) Savings Institution, and the work, the details of which are handled by Secretary McWilliam, has received favorable comment from all parts of the United States, demonstrating as it does that the members of the American Bankers Association have a real human interest in the people they serve.

The complete course, with dates, is as follows:

WANT REAL SUPERVISION IN OHIO

Columbus, March 10th.—The Ohio legislature wants real supervision for private banking in Ohio. Refusing to accept the bill to cover examination of private banks of the state as it came from the house, the senate has a new bill up this week offered by Senator Zmunt, of Cuyahoga, termed "a real inspection bill."

The house bill contemplated no inspection for two years and provided the private banks were only to make reports showing solvency. No laws or regulations were to be effective for one year and none were provided that were to be really effective after that time.

Senator Zmunt in his bill makes the law effective in all particulars after July 1, 1914, and requires reports and provides for inspections from the day the bill becomes effective. The measure simply takes the present bank inspection law with additional provisions to cover the private bank problems. They thus are to be taken in, if the law is passed, as state banks, subject to the same restrictions and regulations as the regular incorporated state banks.

After July 1, 1914, no bank shall engage in business in the state with less than $10,000 paid in capital. Ohio has banks incorporated for as little as $3,000, and no state records of condition or inspections. The new law probably will be amended to keep private bank deposits separate from the estate of the proprietor at his death or failure.

Notice for Bids and Disposition of Bonds in Accordance with Section 792, General Statutes of Florida.

The Board of County Commissioners of Duval County, Florida, will receive bids for the purchase of the last installment of $250,000 of the issue of $1,000,000 of Duval County, Florida, five per cent bonds, at the Clerk's office in the Court House, at Jacksonville, Duval County, Florida, on or before 12 o'clock noon, Thursday, the 3d day of April, A. D, 1913.

The principal of said bonds shall be due and payable on the first day of December, 1939. Interest on said bonds at the rate of five per centum per annum shall be due and payable on the first day of June and December in each year.

Any and all bids may be rejected if the County Commissioners deem it to the interest of the county so to do.

Address all bids to the County Commissioners of Duval County, Florida, care Frank Brown, Clerk, Jacksonville, Florida.

The County Commissioners require of all bidders for said bonds that they give security by bond in the sum of five per cent of the amount of the bid, running to the County Treasurer, with sureties, that the bidder will comply with the terms of the bid.

CONFERENCE ON MARKETING AND FARM CREDITS

First national conference on marketing and farm credits will be held in Chicago, April 8th, 9th and 10th, under the auspices of co-operating farm papers. Quite an elaborate program has been prepared embracing some well known speakers, among whom are: James J. Hill, Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, Hatton W. Summers, member of congress, David F. Houston, secretary of agriculture. Three Illinois bankers are included in the program, viz.: George Woodruff of Joliet, B. F. Harris of Champaign and W. G. Edens of Chicago.

The committee on arrangements in explaining the purpose of the conference, issued the following statement:

"While the people are complaining of the high cost of living, many farmers are finding that their business does not yield profitable returns on labor and investment. This constitutes the giant paradox of our time, and is so because of certain remediable defects in the economic structure of the nation. We believe these defects come from a crude organization of the farmer's way of doing business. The losses occurring yearly amount to millions and affect producers, transportation lines and many business interests. This waste not only makes for exorbitant retail prices of foodstuffs, but also makes impossible a healthy growth of the farming industry. A generation ago the neighboring village or the county seat offered fair markets to the individual farmer; but such a method of distribution to-day is in disharmony with the business world. Yet, in but few sections have farmers made the necessary adjustment to modern conditions. Through no fault of their own, this situation reacts harmfully upon all.

"Compared with European countries, the business organization of American agriculture must appear crude. We remember, however, that our nation is still young, and just emerging from an era when farmers might exploit the land without regard to soil conservation. Even now a large part of the nation has not reached the 'settling down stage.' A constructive program, therefore, is necessary, since both our marketing methods and our provision for the financing of farmers have been outstripped by other countries, and by the evolution of other industries within the confines of the nation—a pathologic condition of supreme importance. Our investigations have led us to believe that conditions, such as we have described, can be improved with the least delay by co-operation with farm producers from others interested in the growing and distribution of farm products, and by the creation of a bureau of markets in the United States department of agriculture. We believe that any attempt to reconcile the high cost of living with the earning powers of the people must be founded upon a normal condition of the agricultural classes. But the present season offers little hope either to producers or consumers unless the people take quick action."

Pacific Northwest Banking News

With unmistakable signs of spring in the air, conditions in Spokane and surrounding country are commencing to show renewed activity. The quickening effect is noticed particularly in the retail stores, and building this year in Spokane will be more active than for a number of years. Work is progressing rapidly on the $2,000,000 Davenport hotel and on the Welch building, which will be occupied by the Culbertson-Grete-Rankin Company, a consolidation of a large department store and furniture house.

Work will be begun this spring on the $1,000,000 union passenger station of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and O. W. R. & N., which will occupy the site of the present city hall. The new municipal building is within a few weeks of completion. Railroad officials have assured the city that the station will be an expensive and handsome building, in keeping with their large investment in ground to reach the business district. The franchise calls for its completion in 1913, but the time has been extended 18 months. Large crews of men are removing other buildings on the right of way.

That the building activity will not be confined to the large projects is evidenced by a general movement to improve existing buildings with new fronts and increased facilities. This movement affects not only Riverside Avenue, the principal retail street at present, but also Main Avenue, which now is attracting the attention of business houses as the probable future retail street of Spokane. Business men on Main have organized to improve general conditions along the thoroughfare, and have the co-operation of the city health department in a general clean-up campaign.

Frank M. March, president of the National Bank of Commerce, is at the head of a committee of bankers and business men in charge of arrangements for a Spokane country carnival to be held in Spokane June 16th to 21st. The carnival will be one of a series of events planned to popularize the Pacific Northwest as the summer playground of America. It is designed also to unify the various interests in all parts of the Spokane country, known as the Inland Empire. Mr. March has announced a series of pageants and open-air events that will secure the interest of the people of this section. A big athletic tournament will be a feature, together with a number of other events being considered by Mr. March and his associates. The carnival is timed to follow the spring planting and to precede harvest.

C. F. Waterman, George H. Waterman and W. A. Waterman have closed a deal by which they take over the controlling interest in the First National Bank of Clarkston, Wash. C. F. Waterman will be president, succeeding N. R. Gilchrist; W. E. Howard continues as first vice-president, George H. Waterman was elected second vice-president, H. G. Jones continues as cashier and W. A. Waterman was elected assistant cashier. C. F. and W. A. Waterman are recent arrivals from southern Minnesota, where they have extensive land and banking interests. George H. Waterman is interested in three other banks in the Spokane country, being president of the State Bank of Kamiah and of the State Bank of Peck, and vice-president of the State Bank of Kooskia.

Charles H. Moore, trust officer of the Union Trust and Savings, has accepted a position with a New York firm as credit man and has gone with Mrs. Moore, via the Isthmus of Panama and New Orleans to New York. Mr. Moore was admitted to the bar in New York, where he engaged in the practice of law before coming to Spokane. A number of farewell receptions were given by friends of Mr. Moore.

H. M. Richards, vice-president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, who is enjoying tarpon fishing off the coast of Florida, in a letter received in Spokane tells of some interesting experiences with the deep sea fish of the tropical ocean. As yet he has landed none of the tarpon, as the season is early. On two different occasions Mr. Richards hooked a shark, and both gave him some exciting moments. The first shark hooked himself so securely on the steel barb that he was unable to shake himself loose and only freed himself when he caught the line on his tail and severed it while threshing the water to free himself. The second shark headed sea-ward when he found himself hooked and, towing the small rowboat at a rapid rate through the water, started on a transatlantic journey and was well on his way to the Azores when the line struck a reef and was cut, allowing him to proceed minus the boat with Mr. Richards and his guide.

Action assuring its vigorous participation in the field of insurance operations was taken at the recent annual meeting in Spokane of the Washington National Life Insurance Company, which was organized two years ago, with a capitalization of $100,000. J. Grier Long, president of the Washington Trust Company, and his associates organized the company. Forty-five thousand dollars worth of the stock has been sold, and arrangements were made at the annual meeting to sell the remaining $55,000 worth. The following officers were elected: A. L. Porter, president; F. N. Martin, vice-president; Boyd C. Barrington, secretary and general manager; Dana Child, treasurer; Dr. Harvey Smith, medical director; Richard B. Harris, general counsel; S. J. Mason, cashier; trustees, A. L. Porter, F. N. Martin, Dana Child, C. E. Frederick, William G. Pratt, Ralph C. Dillingham, Frank A. Chase, F. H. Sammis, George E. Stone, John Salisbury.

Two delegates to the national convention will be elected April 18th by the Spokane chapter, American Institute of Banking. Keen competition for the honor of representing the chapter already has developed, more especially for the presidency, whose incumbent acts as delegate at large. The annual meeting and banquet of the chapter will be held April 18th. B. A. Russell, the president, announces a theater party for Tuesday night, March 25th. A number of specialties, in which Spokane bankers will participate, are being planned.

EDMONTON NEWS

While in Edmonton a few days ago, J. G. Coster, general manager of the Holland Canada Mortgage Company, which has between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000 invested in Canadian loans, appointed F. B. Mathews, manager of Messrs. Allan, Killiam and McKay as its representative in this city. The company will in the future handle its business direct, with Canadian headquarters in Winnipeg. Edmonton will be one of the principal loaning districts.

Mr. Coster announced that the advisory board of the company in Canada includes the Hon. D. C. Cameron, lieutenant-governor of Manitoba, president; A. McTavish Campbell, manager Canada Life Insurance Company, vice-president; the Hon. H. A. Robson, ex-judge for the king's bench of Manitoba, public utilities commissioner; D. Wilson, ex-M. P., member of Messrs. Oldfield, Kirby & Gardner, and F. F. Brock, manager investment department of the Great West Life Assurance Company.

The city council of Edmonton at its last meeting fixed March 28th as the date for a special election, when the ratepayers will vote upon a proposal to purchase land costing $2,712,000 for a civic center. A committee, headed by Alderman Lundy, was appointed to make arrangements for the disposal of debentures amounting to nearly $9,000,000, to be issued this year. The debentures range from eight to 40 years and carry 5 per cent interest. The council also asked for a report from the finance committee as to the best method of marketing future debenture issues.

George S. Stogin of Buffalo, who has resided in the state of New York since 1871, has come to Edmonton to look over the situation in the city and district with a view to investing in mortgage loans.

A. B. Sowter has been appointed chief clerk of the customs office in Edmonton, succeeding M. Shapiro, who resigned to engage in other business. He has been in the service six years,

Interior of Harris Trust & Savings Bank of Chicago

The Harris Trust & Savings Bank makes a specialty of handling inactive reserve accounts for banks and bankers, and of supplying carefully selected bonds for investment or circulation purposes. ¶ During the past thirty years its officers and directors selected and purchased, after careful investigations, over one thousand, two hundred and fifty million dollars of bonds, which have been sold to a constantly growing list of conservative clients. ¶ In buying bonds of this institution the investor secures the benefit of the extensive experience and trained judgment gained through the selection of this large amount of safe investments. ¶ The special character of the bank's business permits of liberal interest terms on inactive or reserve accounts of banks, bankers, corporations and individuals.

Harry Zellingsky was arrested in Edmonton on March 4th on the charge of forgery. Two checks were drawn against the P. Anderson Brick Company. The cashier says the checks were not issued by the company. The prisoner has been identified by storekeepers where he sought to cash the checks.

James O'Brien, who was committed for trial some time ago on the charge of obtaining money in connection with forged checks, will face additional charges when brought up at the next session of the district court. The police say he is wanted at Unity and Wilkie, Sask.

The city commissioners of Edmonton awarded six contracts, involving $2,000,000 for paving and trunk sewers. The contracts call for 75,000 square yards of complete paving, 100,000 square yards of surface paving and two miles of four and eight-foot sewers.

Edmonton police are searching for R. Hill, who is charged with raising accepted checks on the Traders Bank of Canada. His plan was to deposit $200 in the bank and present a large number of small checks to the ledger keeper for acceptance. Five-dollar checks were raised to $50 and $7.50 to $75. He presented these at stores, taking the difference between his purchases and the amount of the checks in cash.

BANKS HAVE PLAN TO STOP FORGERIES

Elgin banks have a plan which they believe will prove effective in preventing forgeries, the scheme being to render difficult the procurement of blank checks. It is proposed either to remove from their counters all blank checks or to print across the face of the counter checks "for use in bank only."

TELLS NEED OF FARM SCHOOLS

Edwin G. Cooley of Chicago last week told the Iowa legislature of the need for winter agricultural schools, where farm boys and girls can be trained for their work, explaining the plan used in Germany and advocating its adoption in this country.

Des Moines, March 14th.—Iowa bankers have every reason to be gratified over the report of the Iowa banking department as shown by the report following the call of February 5th. This report shows that in the year from February 7, 1912, to February 5, 1913, deposits in the state and savings banks and trust companies of Iowa increased $34,848,299.94. As compared with the showing following the call of November 26th, the deposits have increased $14,908,888.13. Surely here is good evidence of the prosperity of Iowa. The report shows that in the past year there have been forty new banks established coming within the jurisdiction of the state banking department. The net increase since the last preceding report was ten. The average reserve is shown to be 24 per cent as against a usual reserve of 15 to 18 per cent. The surplus total, shows an increase of $349,518.37. The undivided profits show a decrease of $1,427,242.19. There now are in Iowa 748 savings banks, 288 state banks and fifteen trust companies.

Deposits Reach High Mark.

Comparing the figures of the banks under state supervision and of the national banks, it is estimated that there are in the banks of Iowa all told $775,000,000 due depositors. The savings banks contain $207,925,226.50. The state banks contain $300,192,615.90. The trust companies contain $92.267,390.40. The 333 national banks contain $125,000,000 and the private banks, it is estimated, $50,000,000. It is believed that this is by far the biggest sum ever held in the banks of Iowa.

High Mark for Clearings.

Iowa banks are making some splendid records in clearings. Last week the Des Moines clearing house association on two separate days broke all previous records for a single day's clearings with $2,388,000. Sioux City also reports all clearings broken for a single day with $1,042,387.32 while the previous high mark was $996,000. For the week the Des Moines clearings totaled $11,000,000 more than $5,000,000 in excess of the corresponding week last year.

Tax Law Arouses Discussion

The tax which exempts money and credits from taxation in Iowa except on a flat five mill rate continues to be a subject of discussion among legislators, many of whom wish the law repealed. It was enacted by the last legislature and its enemies claim that it has so resulted in loss of revenue from this source as to make other taxpayers increase the amounts which they contribute to the general upkeep. However, tax experts in Polk county show that $2,000,000 in money and credits was reported the past year more than was reported from this source under the old system. This is a convincing argument in favor of the new tax plan for it was argued against the old system that owners of this form of property either concealed much of it that was subject to taxation or went to other states where it was not assessed. It only is a question of time, Polk county experts say, until the increase in amount reported under the new system will more than make up the amount lost through the change in assessment. In the meantime, capitalists are content to remain in Iowa and pay this reasonable rate rather than remove with their money to California. Bankers for the most part are favorable to the present scheme of taxation.

Bankers Bill is Defeated

The bill which would allow Iowa bankers to invest money in real estate located in other states has met its usual fate at the hands of the Iowa legislature. The senate put the measure to sleep by a vote of 21 to 15. Senators Farr of Sioux City and Schrup of Dubuque fought for the measure which they said is desired by every banker in every city located along a boundary line of the state. However, the senators took the view that Iowa money should be invested in Iowa real estate. The bill to abolish the office of school treasurer also looks like it is defeated.

Bank Pays Tax Conditionally

The First National of Council Bluffs which lost out in its attempt to have the present Iowa law taxing bank stock declared unconstitutional, has consented to pay the taxes in controversy but on the condition that if the supreme court shall overrule Judge Thornell, the amount shall be refunded.

Sees Prosperity for Nation

Leo Stevens, president of the Century Savings, Des Moines, is an ardent democrat. Consequently he has been more than ordinarily interested in explaining that the change in administration is going to spell only prosperity for the Americans. "President Wilson is conservative, conscientious and high minded," says Mr. Stevens. "I think business people in general look forward with me to a safe and sane administration, one which will be devoted to the cause of building up enterprises rather than to tearing them down. The president's cabinet is one that should be eminently satisfactory to people in every class and in every walk in life. So far as laws affecting banks are concerned, there will be none passed unless they are given every proper consideration."

Des Moines Visitors

The automobile show in Des Moines last week proved a magnet for many bankers in various Iowa towns and cities. Among those who were seen in Des Moines during the week were Cashier R. A. Shreves of the Greenfield Savings; Cashier H. C. Hoffman, Murray Bank; Cashier H. Johnson, Farmers Savings, Alleman; Cashier E. C. Halsey, Commercial Savings, Mason City; Cashier J. C. Reid, Altoona Savings; President J. A. Brown, State Savings, Chariton; Cashier J. E. Anderson, Peoples Savings, Eldora; President Parley Sheldon, Story County, Ames; President M. A. Manning, Commercial at Ames.

Embezzler Sentenced

E. A. Boggs, the frenzied financier who was found guilty of larceny by embezzlement from the Bank at Morrison, was sentenced to do five years penance in state's prison. Boggs, it will be remembered, borrowed thousands of dollars practically on his I. O. U. He will appeal to the supreme court.

New Nickels Popular

The new nickels have attracted as much attention in Des Moines as the presence of a winning baseball team. The banks were somewhat belated in getting supplies of the new coins but since the invoices have been received the demand has been too great almost for the supply.

Court Rejects Bid For Railroad

Judge Arthur at Council Bluffs set aside the bid of Leslie M. Shaw for the Atlantic North and South Railway although his bid was the lowest received, $370,000. The Shaw bid was not accompanied by proper forfeit, the court held, while the other bids were held by the court to be not commensurate with the value of the property. The railroad will be put up again for sale. It will be remembered that Shaw got the property the first time it was up but failed to secure the money to back up his offer and the resale was ordered.

GOV. DUNNE AND GOOD ROADS

One of the strong features of the inaugural address of Governor Dunne is the portion relating to the good roads question. The governor shows a surprisingly familiar grasp of all the details of this important topic and considered it from a broad viewpoint. There are few who will not agree with him when he says that the entire citizenship of the state is affected by the present bad condition of Illinois roads and that, therefore, the state should assist in building good roads.

Wisely the governor points out that the main highways carry the great bulk of the traffic and suggests that the state aid the counties in improving these main thoroughfares. He also advocates the compulsory use of the road drag on earth roads and that the state automobile tax fund, which will amount to about $750,000 by July, be used as the nucleus of a state aid fund. It is his further suggestion that convicts be employed more extensively in the preparation of road material and that short-term convicts be used in actual road work when necessary.

The governor's suggestions are entirely practical. If they are carried out Illinois will be put in the way of saving $2,500,000 that now is wasted on road work every year and will get improved roads to show for it. There may be details of this important question on which there may be a difference of opinion, but Governor Dunne has hit the essentials and should receive the united support of the members of the legislature and their constituents in the reforms which he advocates.

SEVENTEEN TALKS ON BANKING QUESTION

Every student of the money question should possess himself of a copy of "Seventeen Talks on the Money Question" by the dean of all the talkers on this much talked of question, Charles N. Fowler of New Jersey. It contains 500 pages, every one of them illuminating and convincing. The author plays up no favorites and makes no attempt to punish opponents. He wants you to know, wants everyone to know, the whole truth about money and finance in a simplified form. Let those answer him who can.

NEW YORK CHAPTER

By Harold S. Schultz, Secretary.

The twelfth annual banquet of New York Chapter was held at the Hotel Astor on Thursday evening, February 6th. About 725 members and guests were present, including many well-known representative bankers from different parts of the country. The speakers were as follows: Right Rev. L. D. Wilson, resident bishop M. E. Church, N. Y.; Rev. Robert M. Moore, St. Johns M. E. Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.; W. Morgan Shuster, National City Bank, N. Y.; B. W. Moser, president American Institute of Banking; E. G. McWilliam, president New York Chapter, N. Y.; James G. Cannon, president Fourth National, N. Y.; Frederick E. Crane, justice of Supreme Court, second judicial district; General R. Reyes, ex-president, United States of Colombia, S. A. Mr. Shuster discussed the power of money and banking as a force for peace among the nations, which though a widely known subject is always interesting and very encouraging.

Our membership is now past the two thousand mark and we are in the midst of a season filled with new plans for the future and various entertainments and enterprises.

Among the new undertakings which we are considering at the present day, the development of the transit department in the banks is engaging a great deal of our attention. A course designed to cover the important elements of this work is being planned by O. H. Wolfe, secretary of the clearing house section of the American Bankers Association, and C. F. Manchon of the transit department of the Union Exchange National.

In recognition of the faithful support and deep interest so long given to our work by W. M. Rosendale, assistant cashier of the Market & Fulton National of this city, the board of governors of New York Chapter at its regular meeting held on the evening of February 11th unanimously passed the following resolution:

"New York Chapter suggests W. M. Rosendale for the chairman of the Institute Executive Council. Mr. Rosendale is an Institute graduate, and represents orthodox educational principles and policies. His sound convictions, broad experience, and exceptional personality eminently qualify him not only to participate in Institute administration but to represent the Institute in the Executive Council of the American Bankers Association."

Mr. Rosendale is a past president of New York Chapter and has long been an earnest worker in Institute interests. He is a man of remarkable executive ability and well known to Institute men throughout the United States.

BANK SEES FAVORABLE CONDITIONS

The March financial letter of the Anglo and London Paris National of San Francisco has a very optimistic tone in speaking of conditions in California. The letter says in part:

"The present outlook for agricultural production, so far as there can be prospects at this season, is excellent. Such an aggregate of production and traffic at a time when there is marked commercial and financial conservatism, and business everywhere on as sound a basis as ever before in our history, would be expected to result in extreme business activity, heavy investment in all lines of enterprise, and an extremely active stock market. The economic features of the day in this state are hydro-electrical development side by side with great investments of capital in reclaiming, draining or irrigating land in the Sacramento and San Joaquin valleys. The problems of reclaiming the great areas of swamp and overflowed lands in the Sacramento-San Joaquin delta gradually are solving themselves as the demand for land for productive use develops at prices which justify the necessary capital investment, which in turn justifies the public expenditure for improving the navigable channels and relieving them from destructive floods. An incident of the remarkable development which is taking place in the Sacramento valley is the introduction of rice culture, which is enabling owners to put to highly profitable use large tracts of rich but very refractory clay soils hitherto considered of little value except for pasture. About 1,300 acres of rice were harvested last year in Butte and Colusa counties, and it is stated that not less than 5,000 acres will be planted this season in the Sacramento valley.

The Balkan war evidently is drawing to a close by reason, if no other cause, of financial exhaustion of the belligerents. As yet, however, the financial strain and hoarding of gold continues, especially in France, where the Bank of France is finding unusual difficulty in maintaining its gold reserve. Thus far occurrences in Mexico have had no appreciable effect on American finance, but there is no doubt that the re-establishment of order in that country would be followed by very large demands upon our money market.

VINCENT JOINS LIVE STOCK CULT

W. D. Vincent of Spokane is one of the livest members of the "farmer" committee of the American Bankers Association. He's joined the live stock propaganda to give the calf a chance to grow to the beef age. Mr. Vincent urges the slogan of an eastern packing house, "Save the Veal," and is of the opinion that greater profit would accrue to the farmer, and cheaper beef would be the lot of the consumer, if less veal were killed and the young animals allowed to grow even for a year into more natured beef.

The United States is the greatest veal-consuming country in the world. Its demand for veal is so great that the number of calves slaughtered has increased 100 per cent in the last decade. In the United States in 1911, 8,000,000 calves were killed. These did not average over 70 pounds. If they had been allowed to live one year they would have averaged 600 pounds of good beef, and would have produced 4,800,000,000 pounds of beef instead of only 560,000,000 pounds of meat.

South Dakota will not have a bank guaranty of deposits law. The senate last week slaughtered the Morgan bill looking towards that end.

McLEAN (ILL.) BANK INSTALLS SEED CORN TESTER

The McLean State Bank has installed a Holden Ideal Corn Tester and is testing seed corn for customers. There are 700 ears in the machine. It takes about four days for the corn to sprout sufficiently to decide on its strength. While some corn will sprout in a tester of this kind that would not sprout in the cold ground, none that will not sprout in the tester is good enough to plant. Each ear is numbered and five grains taken from it and put into a tray in which are 100 boxes, numbered from 1 to 100. In this way each box that does not sprout means that there is a bad ear and this ear of corn be thrown away, thus saving the farmer a loss of about fourteen bushels for each totally bad ear. Each farmer is limited to 100 ears at one time and while this is not very much when compared to each farmer's total seed corn, if each ear that is marked sound is planted and the weak ones thrown away, it will save him many bushels of corn on the test of only 100 ears.

NEW BOND HOUSE

A new bond house to be known as W. G. Souders & Co. has been organized and will open offices at 809-812 Westminster building. W. G. Souders has been a member of Devitt, Tremble & Co. for three years and before that was in charge of the bond department of the Milwaukee Trust Company.

Important changes in the official staff of the National City Bank of Chicago were made at the regular quarterly meeting of the directors held on Tuesday of this week. The resignation of L. H. Grimme, cashier of the bank for several years, was accepted, Walker G. McLaury being made cashier to succeed him. Mr. Grimme resigned to enter the commercial paper business. He has taken the interest of Seymour Coman in the commercial paper firm of Coman, Lanquist & Co. Mr. Coman will retire from active management of the business.

R. U. Lansing, manager of the bond department of the National City, was elected a vice-president at the meeting on Tuesday. The directors also declared the regular quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent, payable April 1st to stockholders of record March 31st. The personnel of the official staff of the National City now is as follows: President, David R. Forgan; vice-presidents, Alfred L. Baker, H. E. Otte, F. A. Crandall and R. U. Lansing; cashier, Walker G. McLaury; assistant cashiers, W. T. Perkins, W. D. Dickey, Henry Meyer, A. W. Morton, and W. N. Jarnagin.

PREDICTS CONTINUED GOOD DEMAND FOR MONEY

Ernest A. Hamill, president of the Corn Exchange National, when interviewed this week concerning the money situation, said:

"The present demand for money is not local but exists all over the world. Germany has been hard pressed for funds; France is hoarding its money and England is experiencing great difficulty in keeping its gold reserve. There also is a very large amount of undigested securities in that country.

"The demand for money here is legitimate. The volume of business is large; the price for both labor and raw material is very high. I predict that, with possibly a short lull, there will be a good demand for money throughout the entire year. There is a possibility that there may be an easing off for thirty days or so, but outside of that I believe that there will be a strong, healthy demand during the rest of the year."

Secretary McFadden of Georgia announces a series of group dinners at the state convention at Macon, May 16th-17th. The group meetings will come the evening of the 16th.

New Continental and Commercial National Building

ABOVE are pocket size snap shots of the iron work for the monster new Continental and Commercial National building, covering an entire Chicago block. It is the largest in the world—block long, block wide and block high. In the center is the first "interior view" of a banking room into which the average big city bank building could be taken in, turned around and brought out without so much as marring the walls. No. 1 is the La Salle front, up nine floors, with the massive granite columns in place. No. 2 is north along La Salle Street, as it will be seen from President Reynolds' private window. No. 5 is down Adams toward the lake from the same point. No. 4 shows the full length of the Adams Street side, with the steel work at Fifth Avenue end up to the full height.

FORGAN ASKED TO APPEAR BEFORE CANADIAN COMMITTEE

James B. Forgan, president of the First National, has been asked to appear before the banking and commerce committee of the Canadian parliament, which now is considering proposed amendments to the Canadian bank act.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

FIRST NATIONAL, Boston, has had printed a brief booklet—"A History of American Currency." It tells of our small beginnings—our wampum days. It is interesting and instructive. Write for a copy.

MISSOURI bankers love to talk of the good qualities of H. D. Marshall, president of the Marshall National at Uniontown. He had been a pioneer gold hunter in '49 and tried storekeeping and farming.

THEN he bought a share in a bank, liked it and bought it all. He changed its name to Marshalls Bank and later incorporated as a national.

FERRIS E. MARSHALL of New York learned banking in Unionville, with his father. Neal B. Marshall, another son, has for years been cashier and active executive of the bank.

THE late Mr. Marshall studied law when past middle life and was admitted to the bar. For years he was its acknowledged leader, the foremost man in standing and influence in his county. William N. Marshall of Chicago is another son.

LOCKRIDGE, Iowa, not so long ago known as "Coop's Store," has grown amazingly. The local paper has gotten out a booster's edition showing everything of interest from the "Q" station to the meat market.

THE chief building shown naturally is the new Lockridge Savings Bank, which would be a credit to any town. A complete history of the place and pictures of the "prominents" are included.

"SPOKESMAN REVIEW" of Spokane has joined forces with W. D. Vincent and the bankers' committee in booming "stock raising." Keep it up!

FIRST NATIONAL of Boston claims all New England is maintaining her volume of business. Only drawbacks have been the labor strikes which have a habit of occurring in the busy season.

BEDFORD, Ind., has a new bank, the New Holle Savings and Loan. Capital is $200,000.

W. G. SOUDERS & CO. is a new investment firm to open in the New Westminster Building, Chicago. Mr. Souders was with Devitt, Tremble & Co. many years.

J. W. WHEELER of St. Paul spent a couple of days in Kenosha last week. He wasn't organizing a new bank, nor showing how American farmers are being misled into thinking they pay too much for their loans by the "uplifters."

ALL the Wheeler forebears lived in Kenosha and they were good church people, all of them. So J. W. came down to help celebrate the 75th anniversary of the First Methodist, and renew his knowledge of local history.

TIME was (Crookston hadn't been discovered then) when Mr. Wheeler's relatives all lived in Kenosha. Of the eleven first members of the First Methodist, eight were of the Wheeler family.

OF course J. W. had to run down to Chicago so as not to miss the Passing Show and other sights.

HE is pretty certain that the people who are preaching cheaper loans to the farmer and telling him how it is done in Europe are not careful to explain as George Woodruff did at Detroit that:

WHAT the farmer gets over there for his four per cent mortgage is a bond and not money. He must sell his bond for what it will bring in the market and that price and not the mortgage rate tells what the European farmer really pays for his loan.

TENNESSEE, so Secretary F. W. Mayfield notifies, will meet this year in Memphis, April 16th and 17th. Chicago bankers are going to see to it that the St. Louis boys do not monopolize things.

INSTRUCTIONS to the American diplomatic officers in Europe to secure courtesies from the foreign governments for the American commission which is to visit Europe this spring under the auspices of the Southern Commercial Congress to investigate rural credit systems have been issued by Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan.

AMONG the forces working for better things in Arkansas is the "Arkansas Democrat" at Little Rock. The new banking law only was a starter. The "Negotiable Instrument Act" is now the law of the state.

IT of course is, as R. D. Duncan of the State National at Little Rock says, "an important companion of the new banking law."

W. D. VINCENT as member of the executive council of the clearing house section, A. B. A., has induced W. D. Vincent, cashier of the Old National, Spokane, to do a little extra work.

HE has adopted a neat post-card calling attention of banks whose items come his way to their failure to use their number under the Numerical System. The card is polite but insistent and is bringing good results.

JOHN A. MILLS has been elected president of the Anchor Trust Company of Raleigh, N. C., succeeding John O. Ellington, who resigned. L. E. Covington has been elected active vice-president of the same institution. Mr. Covington resigned as assistant bank examiner for N. C. and has been succeeded by D. H. Bateman, late assistant cashier of the Bank of Greeneville.

THE eighteenth annual convention of the North Carolina Bankers Association will be held at the Battery Park Hotel, Asheville, on July 8th, 9th and 10th. The later part of the same week the South Carolina Bankers Association will hold its convention at the Toxoway Inn, Toxoway, which only is about forty miles from Asheville.

A BANK is reported to be organizing at Hoffman, N. C. Andrew J. Butler is interested.

THE spring meeting of the executive committee of the Country Bankers Association of North Carolina will be held in Maxton on April 10th, when the date and location of their convention will be decided. Lacy Williams, cashier of the Bank of Maxton, is the secretary.

"ADVERTISING TO THE MAN IN THE MIRROR," by E. St. Elmo Lewis, now is available in booklet form. This is a reprint of a startling and famous address before the Indiana Bankers Association in October, 1912, at Indianapolis.

SECRETARY E. G. McWILLIAM of the savings bank section is getting on fine with his lectures on Thrift in New York, chiefly at Cooper Union. Similar courses could be carried out in any city, large or small, with good results.

THE Clio (Mich.) State Bank is using "Brothers" as a folder. Editor Woodruff found it good reading for his Joliet "Banker."

S. W. STRAUS makes every number of his Investors Magazine a Thrift publication. On one page he has grouped the following:

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER:—How can one be ready for the glorious opportunities ahead of him unless he has cultivated the habit of economy and prudence? He must save all he can in season and out of season.

JOHN WANAMAKER:—The difference between the clerk who spends all his salary and the clerk who saves part of it is the difference—in ten years—between the owner of a business and the man out of a job.

MARSHALL FIELD:—If you would succeed in business, never spend a cent more than you earn. No matter how small your earnings, you should master this art. I use the word "art" advisedly, as so many young men appear to fritter away, without so much as a thought, all their earnings.

WOODROW WILSON enters the presidency better equipped, in one respect, than any other man who has held that high office. He is absolutely free. So far as is known, there is not a single obligation, either personal or political, which threatens to hamper or unduly influence his judgment.

TWO busy Boston bankers were in Chicago this week on their way home from a vacation well spent in lower California. They were anxious to get back to help fix up for the entertainment of the members of the American Bankers Association who will visit their city this fall. On that subject they were quite as enthusiastic as upon the wonderful improvements noted in and around Los Angeles and Pasadena since their last trip to the coast.

THEY had not expected to find quite so many bankers out there, but had the time of their lives mingling with the other visitors, all of them well-known figures in the financial world.

BOTH of the Boston bankers were much concerned about the new constitution prepared by Chairman James and his splendid committee on their recent visit to Chicago. They have had no definite information as yet and were not able to obtain any in this city. The next attack will be upon Colonel Farnsworth at New York to see what he knows about it.

BEFORE starting for home the Boston visitors were invited to attend a banquet of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce at which George Perkins spoke entertainingly, giving his ideas on the trust problem and suggesting publicity and supervision as the proper mode of corporate regulation. Among those present were George M. and Arthur Reynolds, Charles G. Dawes, Benjamin Strong of the Bankers Trust Company, New York and many other prominent bankers.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS was the orator of the evening at the annual banquet last year and spoke briefly at the meeting this year, complimenting Mr. Perkins on his frank admissions and statements bearing on the trust situation.

THE Pasadena Clearing House held its annual banquet only a few days before and nearly all of those above mentioned were present at that meeting, including W. T. Fenton of this city. The speakers at that occasion were Stoddard Jess of Los Angeles, George M. Reynolds of Chicago, Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines, and W. T. Fenton.

THE Pasadena clearing banks are agitating in favor of having the special examiner for the Los Angeles Clearing House examine all the banks in Pasadena and other suburban towns. It is a big, burning question out there at the present time and the bankers all were anxious to hear what the Chicago people had to say about it.

IT is well known in California that Mr. Fenton is the veritable "John the Baptist" in the situation, it having been upon his original motion that the Chicago Clearing House undertook the employment of a special examiner.

THEY had a week of grand opera in Los Angeles which interested all the financiers, especially that Mary Garden and Tetrazzini were present and that Charles G. Dawes, vice-president of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, was on the spot looking after the arrangements. It was so successful that the Boston gentlemen thought Mr. Dawes acquired a smile which he probably wouldn't lose for several months.

MR. FENTON liked the climate, the people and everything else he saw out there so well that he induced his daughter, Mrs. Burrage, and his son together with his wife and their two children all to "c'mon over." The Fenton people took long tours and it is recorded in some of the "blue books" out there that W. T. did not entirely enjoy some of the narrow roads with sharp curves which run up and down the sides of the mountains. Otherwise everything was all right. Mr. Fenton gives it out as his unbiased opinion now that the sky and the air are much finer and more enjoyable from the calm street level of Pasadena than they are from the tonneau seat of a touring car with one wheel hanging over a steep cliff.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS and family took in most of the short trips and some pretty long ones, going as far as San Diego and back, and devoting an entire week to the pastime. G. M. is like Mr. Fenton. He would rather do his automobiling on reasonably level ground. The Fentons left for Santa Barbara intending to motor all the way to Frisco over the beautiful coast route.

THE Boston bankers were much interested in J. F. Sartori, a past master at securing beneficial banking legislation and other things from a legislature. He has spent several weeks recently at Sacramento getting a revision of the state bank act.

MR. SARTORI was co-operating with the legislative committee of the California Bankers Association and with the able banking commissioner of the state. His opinion was that the legislators are willing to give California the best banking law that could be prepared and that the state will get what it wants this time.

OUR Boston friends attended the grand opening of the First National Bank building in Los Angeles where President Elliott and Vice-president Jess greeted thousands of people who came to see it.

THEIR opinion is that all of the eligible coast bankers will attend the May meeting of the council at Briarcliff and that they will send a large delegation to Boston in the fall. During their entire stay in the Southwest the weather was fine and in their opinion the hotels were fuller than they ever had seen them before.

JOHN PERRIN, formerly of Indianapolis, has opened an incorporated investment banking business in Los Angeles. The firm name is Perrin, Drake and Reilly.

MR. PERRIN is well remembered as president of the American National at Indianapolis and for his distinguished services on the currency commission. Daniel K. Drake formerly was manager of the Chicago office of Harvey Fiske & Sons and James S. Reilly was Los Angeles manager for E. H. Rollins & Sons. The new firm is located at 210 West 7th Street, Los Angeles.

KNAUTH, NACHOD & KÜHNE of New York say that the present outflow of gold to France, Germany and Argentina will rank among the most interesting operations of the kind undertaken in recent years. There already has been exported to those centers since the year opened nearly $40,000,000, that amount being in excess of any previous export movement arranged in the same week of the year.

THE gold goes out, naturally enough, to the markets which bid the highest price, and while no official statement has been made it is believed that nearly all of the metal sent to Europe has been in response to the offer of unusual inducements which in the case of certain exports probably have amounted to considerably more than the mere allowance of interest in transit."

WHEN the resolution for the permanent organization of "The National Federation of State Bankers Associations" got its quietus at the late Chicago conference of state secretaries, the real judgment of those present was fully expressed.

A RESOLUTION that such work as might be done by such conferences better could be done by the secretaries section, the conferences being so many groups of the parent organization, was adopted.

THIS view was expressed repeatedly by President W. C. Macfadden and by ex-President W. F. Keyser. Little wonder that the following resolution, expressive of their opinion, prevailed "almost" unanimously.

"BE it resolved that it is the sense of this conference that for the purpose of convenience and for greater efficiency in service that it would be advisable that the Organization of Secretaries be subdivided into several groups bearing the same relation to the Organization of Secretaries as the present state group system bears to the state associations, and that a committee of three be appointed by the chairman to present this recommendation to the Organization of Secretaries at its annual meeting in Boston."

PUT in this form the conference matter will solve itself. All of the big associations should not be in one group. Private ambitions will have to give way for the general good of all the states.

W. G. EDENS has been invited to speak on "good roads" at the Duluth convention and on "good roads and better farming," as the banker is interested, at Bellingham. In all he has four convention dates. Secretaries please take note.

BOSTON MAKING GRAND PREPARATIONS

Boston, March 20th.—For a month the executive committee of the Boston Bankers Association has been at work with the preliminary arrangements for the great American Bankers Association convention, October 6th to 10th inclusive. Though this convention is eight months away, delegates already have engaged 700 rooms in the leading hotels. A few hotels no longer have rooms available for the week of the convention.

As for entertainment, the tentative program suggests a grand ball on the opening night; an aquatic carnival on the Charles river basin, with the greatest display of fireworks ever seen in the East, for the second evening; impressive exercises and addresses commemorative of the early history of Boston in the ancient churches and in Faneuil hall for the third evening; an informal visit to Harvard with sports in the stadium for the third afternoon; an inspection of the water front and harbor and one of the largest shore dinners ever known for the fourth afternoon, and a special performance at the Opera House for the evening of the last day.

Supervising arrangements is the following executive committee: T. P. Beal, chairman, president Second National; A. L. Ripley, vice-president Merchants National; W. A. Gaston, president National Shawmut Bank; D. G. Wing, president First National; Philip Stockton, president Old Colony Trust; Allen Forbes president State Street Trust; W. R. Evans, president Boston Five Cent Savings Bank, and H. L. Ayer, secretary, with offices in the First National Bank building.

The History and Theory of Clearing Houses

Lecture delivered March 18th before Philadelphia Chapter, A. I. B., by O. Howard Wolfe, secretary of the Clearing House Section, American Bankers Association

The subject of clearing houses has been divided by your educational committee into two divisions; first, the theory and history of the clearing house, and second, the practical features, or what might be termed the modern functions of the clearing house. This is the natural division and it is based upon the thought that clearing house organization and operation revolve around the principle of settlement without money, known as the clearing principle. A more precise division or distinction therefore would be, first, the theory of clearing, and second, the actual methods employed. However, the function of clearing debit and credit balances is not by any means a modern invention, nor is it confined to what we term clearing houses. Every bank is a clearing agency and this best is illustrated by the example of a banking institution in a small town, where all the business is conducted in one bank. Such a thing would be possible, though not probable, even in so large a city as Philadelphia. In fact, so far as actual clearing is concerned the ease and economy with which it could be effected would be facilitated greatly if there were but a single bank in every city. But we shall speak of that later when we consider clearing as one of the functions of the modern clearing house. I will, therefore, undertake to divide our subject on somewhat broader grounds, namely:

1st. The history and theory of bank associations.

2nd. The functions performed by such associations.

You will see that with this division it will be necessary to treat of a part of both our first divisions in each of the two lectures.

Many of our best regulated clearing house associations in the United States specify in their articles of association the two principles that lie at the base of such organizations. For example, the following from Pittsburgh: Section 1. The name of this association shall be "The Pittsburgh Clearing House Association." Section 2. The objects of this association shall be: (a) The effecting, at one place and at one time, of the daily exchanges between the several associated banks, and the payment at the same place of the balances resulting from such exchanges. (b) To take such action in matters of common interest arising or affecting their relations with banks in this and other localities as will tend to the fostering of sound and conservative methods of banking.

If I may, I shall presume to object to the order in which you always will find these two "objects" set down. That is to say, I believe the fact that the banks have associated together is a more significant and fundamental fact than any of the functions which are performed through that association. I shall try to show you that the clearing of checks is only one of the functions and since, as I have stated, this function may be, and is, performed by a single bank or without clearing houses then there may be other functions of equal or even greater importance. In other words, when we speak of the Philadelphia Clearing House Association, the significance is not in the word "clearing," but in the word "association."

The germ that lies at the base of such organizations, whether it be of bankers or bricklayers, bank clerks or letter carriers, is found in the old proverb, "In union there is strength." In the middle ages we have the "guilds," which were the forerunners of more modern groups of men and industries. Not only must men combine for mutual protection from outside attack against a business concerning which they may be presumed to know most, but also they must seek to guard against the destroyer from within. For example, there was a great deal of confusion and waste when railroads began to be built in this country because each company displayed a tendency to adopt a guage of a width to suit its own ideas. Much of the tendency to combine great businesses into what we call "trusts" is due to this desire that has become a necessity to the modern economic structures, this disposition to unify and concentrate. I believe one of the greatest causes of international distrust, dispute, and finally war, is the fact that men do not read, think, and talk a single language.

I want to impress upon you the fact that such organizations are not due to an attempt to destroy or control competition. That is the purpose of the illegal combination only, and if the vast majority of associations, unions or other combinations were not for good, then they all must have been destroyed long since. The clearing house, or any bank association, whether of the city, the state or the nation—this chapter in fact, an association of men employed in a single industry—all are combinations whose object is the best kind of competition: co-operative competition. I can illustrate what we mean by co-operative competition by referring you to the terrible disaster of the Titanic a little less than a year ago. When the stricken ship sent out her wireless calls for help, a score of other vessels rushed toward her. It was something more than common humanity that impelled them to turn from their courses and go to the help of a vessel of another, a rival line. It was the thought that tomorrow they too might meet with an accident and would need help. It is so with you men who are competing with one another daily for better positions. You have joined together to get the common advantages of class study and yet each with the idea that he may improve himself to be better than his fellow. The work will help Jones get a higher position to-day, but he in turn will help Smith advance himself to-morrow. It is so with banks in the clearing house. Each helps the other, although in active competition; in fact that very competition often introduces the need for help. It is constructive and not destructive in its effect as is competition in which there is no co-operation. Without co-operation all business becomes a question of the survival of the fittest.

There is considerable discussion and controversy as to the original clearing house. Naples and other cities of Europe dispute with London and Edinburgh for the honor of having introduced the first clearing house as we know it. The clearing principle, however, must be very ancient. It is simply offsetting debits or what we owe with credits or what is owed us. This is done at a common meeting place of debtor and creditor. In a way, therefore, primitive man in the earliest tribal stages employed the device in the common store to which each contributed and from which each drew his supplies. In the more modern days of banking, a business or science that has flourished for at least two thousand years, accounts are settled on the books of the bank as between depositors. It only was when many banks began to spring up and checks and bills of exchange began to be used that the modern form of clearing house appeared. The first of which we have definite record is the London Clearing House, in operation since about 1773.

The exact time of the first exchanges is surrounded in some obscurity. One legend tells us that two of the "walk-clerks" of the London banks used to meet secretly in a coffee-house and after exchanging checks, they would settle the difference in money they had brought for that purpose. By this method each was able to save himself a long walk across the town. When the practice reached the ears of the London bankers, they adopted the attitude that is typical of the banker of all times and nations. They strongly opposed it because it was new and not according to invariable custom and hence something to be viewed with suspicion. This may sound rather severe, but it is not intended to be. The banker ought, in view of his position and obligation as trustee of other people's money, always to be cautious and make his mistakes on the conservative side. However, after the matter had been weighed carefully and the good points clearly shown, we find that the London banks provided a building where the clerks might meet and make their daily exchanges.

country for the exchange of checks was New York, the first exchange taking place October 13, 1853. Boston was next in 1856. Philadelphia Clearing House made its first exchange March 22, 1858, just about fifty-five years ago. The experience of each of these clearing houses has been in most instances the experience of them all, so let us take our own city as a typical illustration.

As I have stated, it seems to me that the mere association of banks is the more important event in the history of any clearing house, and I will refer briefly to a few of the various occasions on which the banks of this city got together. The first such conference of which I can find any record occurred in 1805. This was shortly after the United States had established itself as a nation, at the time when banking was not banking as we know it to-day. There was very little specie in circulation, almost none of the United States government, so that the people were using foreign coins, mostly silver—English, Spanish and French, Naturally, these coins found their way into the banks, and the first meeting of which I find record was one held for the purpose of determining the value at which foreign coins should be accepted. At that time there were but three banks in Philadelphia, besides the United State Bank: Bank of North America, Philadelphia Bank and Bank of Pennsylvania. Two of them still are in existence.

Up until about 1850 checks were not very extensively used in settlement and banking was on much different lines. If you will refer to an old bank statement of about 1820, you will note that the deposits are very small compared to the other items in the statement. The banks made much of their profit from their note issues, and very frequently you will find record of country banks of that day having a circulation greatly in excess of the amount of deposits. In 1810 the "general bank committee," as it was called, met and agreed to pay out over their own counters only their own notes and to hold and present for redemption the notes of the other Philadelphia banks. In 1814 the presidents of the six Philadelphia banks united in a public announcement to the effect that specie being scarce, and the trade balance being against us, thus drawing gold to Europe, in order to prevent a further drain they would suspend specie payments. This was the first of several such suspensions, other important ones being 1837, 1857, and the long suspension from 1861 to 1879.

The first bank convention was held in Philadelphia August 6, 7 and 8, 1817, being attended by bankers from Philadelphia, New York and Baltimore. The purpose of this meeting was to discuss and provide for a resumption of specie payments. In 1816 and 1817 there was a permanent committee in existence whose province it was to supervise all plans calling for concerted action, such as redemption of notes, payment of interest on balances due one another, etc. In 1842 there was a run on the Pennsylvania Bank and it appealed to other banks for aid. Money was loaned to the bank on the security of its assets and it finally recovered. There was in existence at this time a "bank league" formed to make a pool to protect note issues, and to try to conform to the demand of the state legislature to resume specie payments.

I mention these things because they have an important bearing on the present status of the clearing house, and they will serve to illustrate my contention that the clearing of checks which only came about after the volume of checks had directed attention to their collection, is only one of the reasons for the establishment of the clearing house. There are other things that may be cleared—ideas and mutual support for instance. The experiences of Philadelphia banks may be considered as typical, yet there were one or two events in other cities that are notable. Chief among these is the Suffolk system introduced in Boston. It took its name from the Suffolk Bank which introduced the plan later adopted by the combined Boston banks in 1824. This was a plan for the redemption of the notes of the New England banks which put them on a par basis with Boston bank notes. In principle it was almost identical with the present plan of clearing country checks in Boston, although there is no connection whatever between the adoption of the two plans.

Another important bank meeting was that of 1861 when the banks of New York, Boston and Philadelphia combined, and after consultation with the secretary of the treasury agreed to loan the government $150,000,000. It is interesting to note that Mr. Chase was so short-sighted as to refuse to allow the banks to credit him with the amount subject to his draft, thus making use of the clearing principle, but insisted that the banks produce the actual specie. The result was the suspension of specie payments in 1861. It was at this time that the Philadelphia Clearing House issued its first clearing house loan certificates, which will be discussed at our next meeting.

Trust Company Service in New York City

This company, with ample capital, large resources, and an efficient and well-systematized organization, has the ability and disposition to give good trust company service.

Our various departments, including banking, foreign exchange, bond, trust, transfer, reorganization and collection, are well equipped with modern facilities for transacting business promptly and economically.

For these reasons we feel justified in cordially inviting the New York accounts of banks and trust companies.

Like the Suffolk system in Boston, the first proposition to organize a clearing house in New York was based upon note redemption rather than clearing checks. Its strongest supporter was Albert Gallatin, who was a financial genius in his day. Mr. Gallatin urged the organization of a clearing house as far back as 1831, and he favored an extension of the plan throughout the United States. It almost is inconceivable to the present day banker how the New York banks were able to get along so long as they did without a clearing house. There were about sixty banks in New York and each kept an account with the other. They exchanged checks daily and made settlements once a week by draft, on Friday. It will interest you to hear something of the confusion that such methods produced. I quote from a description written by J. S. Gibbons in his book, "The Banks of New York and the Panic of 1857:"

"After all the draft-drawing was over came the settlement of the Wall Street porters among themselves. A Porters' Exchange was held on the steps of one of the Wall Street banks, at which they accounted to each other for what had been done during the day. Thomas had left a bag of specie at John's bank to settle a balance which was due from William's bank to Robert's; but Robert's bank owed twice as much to John's. What had become of that? Then Alexander owed Robert also, and William was indebted to Alexander. Peter then said that he had paid Robert by a draft from James, which he, James, had received from Alfred on Alexander's account. That, however, had settled only half the debt. A quarter of the remainder was canceled by a bag of coin which Samuel had handed over to Joseph, and he had transferred to David. It is entirely safe to say that the presidents and cashiers of the banks themselves could not have untangled this medley. Each porter had his talley, and by checking off and liberating first one, whose account was least complicated, and then another, they finally achieved a settlement."

In Philadelphia the subject of organizing a clearing house had been taken up several years before it finally was consummated. The president of the Pennsylvania Bank was its strongest opponent and the president of the Philadelphia Bank, Dr. Robins, was its most ardent supporter. A compromise was effected whereby the cashiers met daily and exchanged checks and settled once a week. The events following the panic of 1857 led up to the formal establishment of the clearing house. The Pennsylvania Bank, which had been in previous difficulties, finally failed, and with that bank out of the way the clearing house immediately was organized.

We need not discuss the events of history further so far as the clearing of checks is concerned, but we will devote the remaining time

Two Big Pittsburgh Banks Consolidate

The most important merger of banking institutions ever consumated in Pittsburgh was arranged on Saturday last, when directors of the First and Second National Banks of Pittsburgh, acting separately, approved recommendations of their committees, that the two institutions be consolidated under the name of the "First-Second National Bank of Pittsburgh." The capital of the enlarged bank will be $3,400,000, with surplus and undivided profits of $1,900,000, deposits in excess of $30,000,000 and assets of about $37,000,000. The new bank will be the second largest national bank in Pittsburgh, and as the immediate result of action taken, the Second National removed Saturday afternoon to the First National building, at Fifth Avenue and Wood Street. The consolidation, which was determined upon the Thursday evening before, was approved on March 14th by Lawrence O. Murray, comptroller of the currency. Special meetings of the directors of both banks were held on March 15th, following the return of William S. Kuhn from Washington in the morning. Action of the committees of the respective banks in recommending the merger was thereupon ratified and made operative. Removal of the Second National was begun after the close of business, at noon, and the two banks, under the title of the First-Second National, started operations last Monday morning.

Credit for the consummation of the project is given to William S. Kuhn, president of the Second National, who has been long a director of the First National. While there have been persistent rumors form time to time during the past several years that these banks would consolidate, it was only two weeks ago that negotiations were seriously considered. Careful examination of the condition of each bank was made and the merger was arranged on a decidedly conservative basis. The Second National's splendid banking quarters will be vacant only for a short period, as they will be occupied by the First-Second Savings & Trust Company as soon as the application for a charter is granted. William S. Kuhn becomes president of the First-Second National Bank and will devote his entire time and attention to directing the affairs of the institution.

Directors of the First National at the time of the merger were John P. Brennen, Wm. F. Benkiser, Francis H. Denny, J. Rogers Flannery, Charles H. Friend, Thomas C. Briggs, James S. Kuhn, William S. Kuhn, Frank B. Nimick, L. M. Plummer, Eugene S. Reilly, F. H. Richard, W. G. Rock, James R. Sterrett, J. J. Turner, Charles A. Wolfe, J. H. Purdy, and Oscar L. Telling. Directors of the Second National were: Thomas D. Chantler, W. Y. Humphries, Edward B. Taylor, William S. Kuhn, James M. Young, L. L. McClelland, W. C. Fownes, Jr., John A. Beck, Wm. L. Curry, Robert D. Ellwood, William McConway, Frank C. Osborn and Frank S. Willock.

William Speer Kuhn is a native Pittsburgher. His first position was as a clerk in the First National Bank. Subsequently, he and his brother engaged in the construction of water works plants, taking franchises in Uniontown Connellsville, and in one or two western towns, which kept him actively engaged for several years. This business grew so rapidly that it soon resulted in the organization and incorporation of the American Water Works and Guarantee Company, in 1885, which now has a capital of $20,000,000 and which owns properties valued at over $100,000,000.

Mr. Kuhn is an officer, or director, or both, of the First-Second National, The Colonial Trust, the Commonwealth Trust, the Commercial National, the Pittsburgh Bank for Savings, the First National of McKeesport and the American Water Works and Guarantee Company, and all of its subsidiaries. He has been from its inception president of the West Penn Traction and Lighting System and his energy has been responsible for its remarkable success.

James M. Young, vice-president and cashier of the Second National, will hold corresponding positions in the new institution. He was connected with the Second National for 30 years, rising from general clerk.

The stockholders of the Second National on Tuesday received a notice of a special meeting to be held on Friday, April 18th, and also a circular outlining the merger of the First and Second National Banks. At the meeting on April 18th, stockholders will be asked to vote on the proposed increase of the capital stock from $1,800,000 to $3,400,000; to change the name to "First-Second National Bank of Pittsburgh," and to increase the number of directors from fifteen to thirty-five. The circular states, in addition to announcing the increase in capital stock, that the plan of merger adopted includes a stock dividend of 33⅓ per cent, or $600,000, at par, to be declared out of the present surplus of the Second National and payable to its shareholders. The balance of the additional stock ($1,000,000) is to be issued at $150 a share and turned over to the First National as full consideration for the purchase of all its assets, goodwill, business, etc. Under the plan the First National will take immediate steps to liquidate. The result of this adjustment will mean a total capital of $3,400,000, with a surplus of $1,700,000 and undivided profits in excess of $200,000. Deposits will approximate $30,000,000.

TRIP TO PANAMA AT CLOSE OF CONVENTION

In all probability the bankers of Texas and their visitors from various sections of the United States will make a trip to Panama immediately following the close of the Texas Bankers' convention to be held in Galveston, May 13th, 14th and 15th. This announcement has been made by Secretary J. W. Hoopes, who has taken up the matter of securing transportation. Hotel reservations for the convention are being made daily and indications point to a record breaking attendance. Mr. Hoopes figures that with the Panama trip added, scores of bankers will be attracted from every section of the country. The program is being shaped up rapidly and those assigned places are showing the keenest interest and readily consenting to help make the convention one of the most interesting and beneficial ever held in Texas.

BANK OVER A CENTURY OLD

The Bank of New York on Saturday last completed the 129th year of its existence. Since 1797 the bank has occupied its property at 48 Wall street, and it is to-day one of the few institutions which owes no part of its growth to consolidation with other banks. Two hundred and fifty-eight semiannual dividends have been paid to its stockholders. The present dividend rate is 16 per cent per annum.

Missouri Bankers Deep in Agricultural Bulletins

Literature prepared by expert S. M. Jordan being used by hundreds of papers. Secretary Keyser has fine system of distribution and Chairman Gordon sees that he has plenty of sound ammunition

Kansas City, March 19. The bankers of Missouri under the splendid leadership of Chairman W. C. Gordon of the agricultural committee are doing seasonable, effective work among their farmer customers. On the committee with Gordon are W. S. Wells and S. E. Trimble, both enthusiasts on the subject. Secretary W. F. Keyser has attacked this subject just as he has all other problems, in his quiet, systematic but effective way. The agricultural committee has the faithful co-operation of S. M. Jordan, the expert who put Pettis county on the agricultural map with his bureau of agriculture. Jordan is to Missouri what Holden was to Iowa, what Hopkins is to Illinois. Expert Jordan has furnished the committee a series of bulletins, especially applicable to this state and Secretary Keyser is using the machinery of his well equipped office to get the county and state papers to use the matter liberally. The work, the system and the men are all splendid. No other state, Missouri bankers feel, can show a cleaner pair of heels. Mr. Keyser has agreements from one hundred papers which will use all the present and all the forthcoming bulletins free of charge. So much for a popular issue when intelligently handled. There will be lots of corn contests and boys corn clubs conducted by popular banks all over the state.

One authority has said: "The gospel of better farming in Missouri is spreading and taking firm hold. The activity of the bankers in this cause is being felt and duly appreciated. Let us not relax our efforts but take on new enthusiasm from the success of things already accomplished."

Following is from the S. M. Jordan bulletins, instructive and interesting to bankers and farmers in any state:

Corn Questions from Now Until Planting Time

While there is a great deal of seed corn in the country it is wise to take a good deal of time and exercise extreme care and "shop" early and get the best. Most of the seed corn is in good condition and most of it will grow, but all corn that was not pretty well dried out when the first heavy frost occurred last fall has been injured to such an extent that its vitality is poor. A preliminary test should be made that would give some adequate idea as to how its vitality is running. A grain with a weak germ is by no means likely to make a good ear of corn.

All live stock should be kept out of the fields from now on except at times when the ground may be frozen. Cattle and horses tramping across the fields when the mud may be several inches deep do an enormous amount of mischief to the soil, except in such places where the soil may be very sandy.

As a general rule I like to do the disking just as early as it is possible and if this is done and we shouldn't happen to get our plowing done until a little late the ground will then not break up cloddy. In soil that is not too heavy I like also to plow the ground just as early as possible as the earlier we can plow the more deeply we are safe to plow. The early plowing also allows the weeds to start and with one or two plowings before planting as many crops of weeds may be destroyed. I like to do a great deal of work on the ground before planting, and since the corn is a warm weather plant I like to wait until the ground has become fairly warm. This is usually the first few days in May, but it is not safe to plant sod ground so early as this, on account of the danger from cut worms. A very safe time for the sod would be from the 20th to the 25th of May.

Methods of Planting

Since no one method has either all the advantages or all the disadvantages it might be well to point out these things in the various methods and allow every man to draw his own conclusions.

We perhaps take fewest chances by surface planting. What we mean by surface planting is where no furrowing out is done. Unless the spring is very wet or the ground washes very badly I commonly like to furrow out the ground and perhaps the disk furrow opener that is attached to the shoe of the planter is as good as any for this work. The furrow out sometimes, however, brings a good deal of trouble in the event of a heavy rain shortly after planting. If this does not occur it seems to allow the corn to root a little more deeply and the furrow also helps wonderfully in the matter of cultivation. By this method we also have the advantage of cross plowing and this process enables us to get the weeds to a better advantage; also to keep the ground more level than if our plowing was done all in one furrow.

Catch Crops

Catch crops of cowpeas may be grown after an oat or wheat crop has been cut; sown as late as July 10th they often make a good hay crop or pasture or may be turned under for green manure. Where a stand of corn is not too thick they also may be sown between the rows when corn is "laid by." This is best done with a one-horse grain drill made for drilling grain between corn rows.

The outside drill holes may be stopped and three rows only drilled, as this is commonly enough to cover the ground well to prevent weed growth. Where the stand of corn is heavy it is not likely that the peas could do much. For these catch crops New Era cowpeas are best.

For planting in the hills with the corn many prefer the soy bean as it can be planted safely a little earlier than is safe to plant cowpeas. Soy beans do not vine hence do not interfere so much with the cultivator. They are best planted with an attachment to the planter, but some mix corn and beans in planter boxes, being sure to stir them up well at each end of rows or all beans and no corn would be coming from the plates.

The variety of soy bean to put in corn to be cut for fodder or silo would perhaps be the Medium Yellow, or the Mammoth, and where it is desired to run the pigs or sheep in the field the Mongol or Sable would be better. Try a small field of medium land, putting two grains of corn and three Mongol soy beans to each hill. When you "lay by" the corn drill three rows of New Era cowpeas between the rows. About corn cutting time turn lambs or shoats or both into the field, first feeding soy beans and cowpeas over the fence for a day or two till the stock learn to eat them. Fatten hogs and sheep or hogs only on the corn, or "hog down" the patch, then try the same field to corn or any other crop the next season and note results. You can by this process raise very few weeds, grow more feed and your stock can harvest the crop for you, and scatter their own manure.

The peas sown as indicated take about one-third bushel per acre, and of the soy beans about one gallon per acre. Such processes will build your soil much faster than we can do it with the clovers. A trial will convince. Why not also consider growing a few for seed? When we grow our own seed we will not so much notice the high price.

INCREASED EXAMINATIONS

The comptroller of the currency has instructed the examiners to make increased examinations of those banks not complying with the suggestions of the department with respect to the operation of said banks. It is said this applies chiefly to certain country institutions, the city banks as a rule not being classed among the offenders. Some of the things complained of by the comptroller are failure to maintain the legal reserve, making of excessive loans, not holding directors' meetings once a month and failure of directors to make examination of the affairs of their banks as contemplated in the instructions of the comptroller.

The present plan provides for two examinations a year. Hereafter four will be made of the affairs of those banks not complying with the regulations prescribed by the comptroller until such time as he is convinced that their affairs are up to the proper standard.

VALUATION OF PUBLIC SECURITIES

Samuel S. Wyer, a distinguished consulting engineer of Columbus, Ohio, is the author of a new work on "Regulation, Valuation and Depreciation of Public Utilities." Sears & Simpson, Columbus, are the publishers. The work contains 300 pages on thin paper, bound in limp leather, and practically is a pocket volume. The illustrations are very numerous and show vividly many causes of depreciation, such as the effect of electrolysis on piping and all forms of decay on wood work. It is a reference work in a way and will help any one, as well as engineers, to value, to operate or to regulate the operation of any form of utility corporation. The fundamental principles, the definitions, the index, all are arranged to be more convenient for ready use than any similar volume with which we are familiar. The price is $5.00 per volume.

Champaign, Ill., bankers have endorsed Irving Shuman, cashier of the First National of Sullivan, for comptroller of the currency.

By C. C. Burford

L. L. Bacchus, who until March 1st had held the position of head of the banking department of the state auditor's office, will assume a position as a vice-president of the La Salle Street Trust and Savings of Chicago. Mr. Bacchus will assume his new duties April 1st. He has been succeeded in the auditor's office by Frederick Porter of Chicago. Mr. Bacchus and family will remove from Springfield to Chicago. The state auditor will announce further changes in his office April 1st.

New State Banks in Illinois

A permit has been issued by Auditor Brady for the organization of the Citizens State Bank of Windsor, with capital of $25,000, the permit being issued to John W. Grissom, Frank T. Maloney, G. W. Rogers and others. Windsor is in Shelby county, west of Mattoon.

The First State Bank of Riverdale, Cook county, with capital of $25,000, will be organized by David Wiedman, William Plagge, William D. Rogers, Paul A. Dratz, Frederic R. DeYoung, Edwin Gamble and Frank G. Howland.

No Third Bank in Pittsfield

Various reports have been published about a new state bank being organized in Pittsfield, but the efforts which have been expended in that direction will be devoted toward making the Farmers State of Pittsfield a larger institution. The men who have been interested in organizing a third bank have agreed to take stock in the Farmers State and the capital of that institution will be increased to $100,000. The bank premises will be remodeled completely and when completed will be one of the best appointed bank buildings in the western part of the state. As the First National of Pittsfield is a very prosperous institution, that city will enjoy exceptionally strong banks.

New Bank Buildings in Decatur

Work has begun on the excavation of the new building of the National Bank of Decatur. Various items have appeared in THE CHICAGO BANKER about this new structure, which will be one of the best in the country.

The Farmers and Merchants Bank, a new state bank recently organized in Decatur, will occupy a room in a new building to be erected by Henry Bachrach, a prominent business man of that city. Decatur, one of the best business centers in Illinois, is enjoying steady growth, and there is continued improvement there, especially along industrial lines. The new Wabash shops and other new or enlarged industries indicate prosperity for that city.

Dedication of Commerce Building

The new Commerce Building of the University of Illinois, erected during the past year and occupied since February 1st, will be formally dedicated April 16th and 17th. The building will be used for the teaching of university courses in banking, accounting, insurance, journalism and railway administration, as well as general economic studies.

President Edmund J. James, who is a pioneer in commercial education in America, having organized the Wharton School of Finance and Political Economy in the University of Pennsylvania more than a quarter of a century ago, and Dean David Kinley, who is well known as a writer and speaker on business topics throughout the country, and an able corps of instructors are doing an exceptionally notable work at the University of Illinois, which will be reflected in training of business men of the next generation. A more extended account of this beautiful building will appear later in THE CHICAGO BANKER.

Among the prominent business men who will atttend and speak at the dedication will be Harry A. Wheeler, vice-president of the Union Trust Company of Chicago and president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Howard C. Elting, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce; Dr. F. A. Cleveland, chairman of the economy and efficiency commission, and Charles D. Norton, vice-president of the First National of New York, formerly assistant secretary of the treasury and at one time general agent of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company in Chicago.

Cairo Banks

The First Bank and Trust Company of Cairo is another Illinois bank which is doing some effective publicity work in the newspapers. J. S. Aisthorpe, chairman of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association, is the president of this bank, and H. R. Aisthorpe is the secretary. The bank has a most attractive location on Ohio Street, overlooking the Ohio river. The capital, surplus, and undivided profits are $342,000.

The Alexander County National Bank and the Alexander County Savings Bank (allied institutions) have combined capital and surplus of $300,000. E. A. Buder is the president and J. H. Galligan is the cashier. Among the directors are Napoleon B. Thistlewood, formerly congressman from the Cairo district, and former Mayor George Parsons, who ad-

THE LOGICAL REASONS FOR "SIX PER CENT AND SAFETY"

IN our opinion conservative investors are justly entitled to a rate of six per cent on their investments. We will be pleased to submit on application reasons why six per cent may be obtained on invested funds with perfect safety in the class of securities we offer.

¶ Investors for income, desirous of obtaining the highest interest rate consistent with safety, are advised to investigate these bonds which are issued in denominations of $100, $500, and $1,000.

¶ No investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us during the thirty-one years since this house was founded.

¶ We maintain a market for the securities we sell through our custom of repurchasing from clients, at par and accrued interest, less only the handling charge of one per cent, thus giving reasonable assurance of their convertibility.

dressed the Illinois Bankers Association in the Cairo convention in 1910.

The Cairo National is another strong institution in that city. It has capital and surplus of $131,000. E. A. Smith is the president and E. E. Cox is the cashier. All of these banks were visited by bankers who attended the Cairo convention in 1910.

Illinois Notes

George Woodruff, president of the First National of Joliet, has found a sure cure for the chronic grumbler and the man with that tired feeling, for he declares that "the difference between an optimist and a pessimist is an account at the First National Bank of Joliet."

George R. Chambers, vice-president and director of the First National of Charleston for many years, died recently. The four banks of Charleston closed during the funeral services.

Miss Kate Wilson, who recently resigned her position as assistant cashier of the Centennial National of Virginia to take a place with a brokerage firm in Cleveland, Ohio, has returned to her former work in Virginia.

The Ricker National of Quincy, with capital and surplus of $994,342 and deposits of $5,150,351, is one of the largest banks in the state outside of Chicago. The bank is doing some effective publicity work and says that it is prepared to take care of new business in the same careful and conservative manner which has marked its growth from humble beginnings to a business with more than six millions of dollars of assets.

Galesburg banks preach the doctrine of thrift when they encourage saving by the employees of the Burlington railroad. Each month the Burlington pours a large amount of money into the hands of citizens of busy Galesburg, and the banks, especially the Peoples Trust and Savings and the Galesburg National, advertise their savings departments widely on pay days.

A branch of the National Credit Men's Association has been organized at Sterling and the movement for better credit protection is meeting with favor.

E. E. Crabtree, vice-president of the bank of F. G. Farrell and Company, and Andrew Russel, vice-president of the Ayers National, both of Jacksonville, are on the dedication committee of the new Odd Fellows Temple in that city. The Jacksonville Odd Fellows have a temple which is one of the most complete in the Central West, and it will be dedicated early in April.

The First National of Springfield has been selected as the depository of the city's funds. The bank will pay the city 3 per cent on daily balances and will loan the city funds needed. The First National has served Springfield as a city depository for the past two years.

The new Ayers National bank building in Jacksonville is affording very desirable office rooms and as the most complete city office conveniences are provided the building will prove to be very popular with attorneys, insurance agents and other office room users.

George A. Turell, formerly cashier of the First National of Champaign, was injured severely by being struck by a street car. The accident happened about dusk and Mr. Turell, who has been partially paralyzed for some time, became confused. He was taken to the Burnham hospital in Champaign.

FARNSWORTH AFTER ILLINOIS A. B. A. MEMBERS

Col. Fred E. Farnsworth, general secretary of the A. B. A., is after the executive councilmen of Illinois again on the matter of increasing the A B. A. membership in this state, which at the present time is said to be 854. With another fifty members it is understood that the state would be allowed one additional member on the executive council. This makes it worth while for the A. B. A. members in Illinois to get busy and increase the membership before the date of the next annual convention at Boston, which occurs October 6th to 10th. At the present time, W. T. Fenton, National Bank of the Republic, E. E. Crabtree of F. G. Farrell & Co., Jacksonville; Nelson H. Greene, Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company, Moline, and W. G. Edens of the Central Trust, Chicago, are the Illinois members of the executive council. F. A. Crandall of the National City Bank of Chicago is a member of the council representing the American Institute of Banking, and J. Fletcher Farrell of the Fort Dearborn is national treasurer of the A. B. A.

Now is the time for the campaign to increase the A. B. A. membership.

M. W. BUSEY CONGRATULATED

M. W. Busey, whose election as treasurer of the University of Illinois was noted in last week's issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER, has been widely congratulated by his friends, both within and without banking circles, and many telegrams, telephone calls and letters have come to him for the past ten days from various cities. Mr. Busey's friends seem to regard his election as a fitting reward for almost forty years of honest and conservative banking experience and his long connection with Busey's Bank of Urbana has given him a wide circle of friends.

During the past few days his bond has been made up by personal friends in Urbana and he has not required the many offers of assistance which have come to him from various cities of the state. The bond required was two million dollars. The funds of the university will be transferred to Busey's Bank as soon as various technicalities are finished.

CHICAGO'S VISITORS

Miller Weir, formerly cashier of the Jacksonville (Ill.) National, was a Chicago caller Thursday. J. R. Pogue of Sullivan, Ill., who served in the 44th and 45th general assemblies from the Sullivan district, was in the financial district this week. Mr. Pogue said that matters relating to the organization of the Farmers State Bank and Trust Company of Decatur, in which he is interested, are progressing nicely. The bank is to have a capital of $100,000. They have secured an option on good banking quarters, well located on one of the principal streets of Decatur, and expect to open for business about May 1st. Mr. Pogue will be connected with the bank in an official capacity.

George W. Boyden, vice-president of the Farmers State at Sheffield, Ill., was a Chicago caller this week.

B. F. Harris, former president of the Illinois Bankers Association and vice-president of the First National of Champaign, recently addressed the students of the college of agriculture of the University of Illinois.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

The committee on municipalities of the state legislature is confronted with a bill authorizing Wisconsin cities of the first and second class to establish municipal banks in compliance with the federal statutes governing national banks. The Hinkel bill embraces ideas put forward by former Milwaukee Alderman, Henry Smith several years ago, and Mr. Smith spoke in favor of it at the first hearing last week, saying that a municipal national bank would have saved Milwaukee $7,000,000 in interest in the past twenty years. If the bill becomes a law, cities of the aforementioned classes, of which there are only five in the state, will be empowered to create city banks by ordinance, with three residents, the city comptroller and city treasurer as a board of directors, who will in turn elect officers. Whenever municipal bonds are issued, the directors will be empowered to exchange executed blanks with the comptroller of the currency for national bank currency, as provided by law. A maximum interest of 5 per cent is set on all such bonds. The currency received is to be credited by the city treasurer to the fund for which the bonds were issued. Redemption is made annually by transmitting to the comptroller of currency 5 per cent in currency for each issue. The activities of such banks are confined to those purely municipal.

A solution to the controversy occasioned by the bill restricting state depositories to state banks was offered by Assemblyman Fred W. Holmes at Madison this week in the shape of an amendment by which the old state board, controlling the deposits of state funds be increased by the addition of the state bank commissioner. Deposits can be made in both state and national banks by the provisions of this bill.

Predicts Money Stringency

Prof. Trumbower of the economics department of the University of Wisconsin, at Madison, predicts a money stringency in the fall, resulting from the Balkan war. The war, he asserts, has caused a hoarding of gold in Europe with a consequent drain on the banks, and the United States is shipping large quantities of gold to Europe. With the beginning of the crop movement in the early fall, he says, the shortage of money here will be felt greatly.

Allis-Chalmers

Gen. Otto H. Falk, new head of the Allis-Chalmers Company, has returned from New York in company with Fred Vogel, Jr., president of the First National Bank and a member of the reorganization committee of the company, who was elected director and chairman of the executive committee. Other directors, all from Milwaukee, who compose the executive committee, are Oliver Clyde Fuller, president of the Wisconsin Trust Campany; J. D. Mortimer, president of the Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light Company; Gustave Pabst, head of the Pabst Brewing Company, and Mr. Falk. According to Mr. Falk, the executive offices of the reorganized company will remain in Milwaukee.

Wisconsin Notes

The resignation of Charles H. Mueller as manager of the Ninth Ward branch of the Second Ward Savings Bank was accepted by the directors on Monday. Mr. Mueller's health has been failing for the past year and although his resignation was tendered some months ago it was not accepted. It goes into effect April 1st. Mr. Mueller entered the service of the bank thirty-one years ago, as office boy. Under his management of the branch for the last twenty-two years the deposits have increased enormously. About a year ago the branch was moved from Eleventh and Vliet streets to new quarters at Twelfth and Vliet. Four years ago Mr. Mueller sustained a broken hip and other injuries in a runaway accident, from which he has never fully recovered. He will be succeeded by Joseph U. Lademann, who started with the bank as office boy twenty-five years ago.

The work of razing the Appleton Opera House to make room for the new First National Bank building in that city was commenced this week. The bank hopes to enter its new quarters in September.

The new State Bank of Ripon has plans for a two-story building which will be commenced before the summer months.

Public Service Commissioner Makes Public Confession

John B. Olmstead, after five years at the head of the New York State Commission, admits his anti-corporation prejudices have been swept away. An illuminating and instructive pronouncement by an able and influential retiring official

I came into office with decided leanings towards the anti-corporation view of public utility questions. Some of my good friends among the corporation lawyers in Buffalo were kind enough to say that I was too much of an anarchist to be of much use as a commissioner. Want of knowledge as to the precise point involved I have found in many cases to be the principal cause of the prejudices I then entertained. Experience has taught me that there is another side to these questions, and one not lightly to be dismissed.

For instance, I held the view, as I imagine many another person holds the view, that the New York Central Railroad is grossly overcapitalized, and is paying dividends on a large amount of what popularly is known as water. When it came to my knowledge as a part of the evidence of a long investigation in the Buffalo, Rochester and Eastern case that the estimated cost of that company's 300 miles of railroad from Troy to Buffalo, planned without adequate allowances for terminal yards and facilities at either end, and touching but one or two large centers of population, was approximately one hundred millions of dollars, I came to the view that the New York Central, with its four tracks running through the heart of so many great cities of the state, with all the attendant advantages to freight and passenger business, and with approximately 500 miles more trackage, including the vast and valuable terminal facilities of New York City, might possibly on a valuation measure up to a capitalization of five times that of the B., R. & E.

Managers Conciliatory

I have changed my mind also as to the attitude of most corporation managers towards the public. I had expected to find it recalcitrant and objurgatory, which is a Latinized and "more tenderer" way of saying that it was made up of kicks and damns. I have found it almost uniformly, when expressed in the presence of the commission, conciliating and willing to abide by the results of a fair hearing. The difficulty with me has been not so much in getting the corporations to do what I thought was right as to determine in my own mind what under all the circumstances of certain cases was right.

I fully am aware that this is not the popular view of public service corporations, nor do I wish to be understood as having discovered wings on the shoulders of the managers thereof. I say that a better knowledge of the conditions under which their business is carried on brings one to a more just appreciation of some of the difficulties under which they labor. I know well that there are many—very many—particulars in which the service which they are rendering may be improved, as I know well that there are very many particulars in which the business of every man in this room might be improved if an inquiry into it were started by a commission armed with power. Such a commission would be at once met with the objection that its suggestions required too much of an outlay to carry them out, and would be asked how it proposed to provide the funds for the improvements recommended. Let us be reasonable as well as critical. Let us realize that the management of one thousand men on a street car line is no less difficult than the management of an equal number in a factory, and that there are times when you have to do the best you can with the material with which you have to work.

"Straight" Street More Popular

I believe that in the past ten years a great change has come over the minds of men who are in the management of public utilities. There still are some left who cling to the old "public-be-damned" idea, but they are fast being supplanted, and the up-to-date railway or electric light official stands ready to listen to any reasonable complaint that may be brought to his attention, and, what is more to the point, to turn a deaf ear to proposals which call for abhorrent and forbidden methods in their accomplishment. I am not innocent enough to believe that all the dark, devious and easy ways of "getting there" have been wholly abandoned; but I do hold the view that the street called "Straight" is a much more popular thoroughfare than it used to be, and that the directors and agents of the corporations over which we have control are walking it with much cleaner consciences and with great gain to their self-respect.

Risks of Investment

I have intimated that one great difficulty with certain corporations is the lack of means to carry out the improvements to service which their operating men admit would be advisable and desirable. On this point some figures from our last annual report may be illuminating. Out of 78 steam railroads reporting to the commission in this state, only 27 paid any divi-

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, March 19th.—The demand for money during the past week has been fair while rates were firm at 5 to 6 per cent on call and time loans. New York exchange was in fair offerings with the demand about equal to it. Commercial paper was freely offered and was discounted by brokers at 5½ to 6 per cent.

Increase in Taxes

A notable taxable assessment of St. Louis real estate and personal property at $568,769,065 was shown by the city assessor's books, which have been opened to the public. The total showing, on the face of the returns, is $604,537,640, but it is expected that this will be reduced by the state board of equalization, which will, as for several years past, fix bank stock assessments on a 50 per cent basis. Last year's total was $562,669,800, so that this year's net increase is $6,099,865.

Raises Dividend Rates

The Title Guaranty Trust Company at the monthly meeting of the board of directors last week increased the dividend rate of the company to 5 per cent per annum, and declared the first quarterly installment under the new rate, 1¼ per cent, payable April 1st to stockholders of record March 21st. The previous dividend rate was 4 per cent. January 1st last, an extra dividend of 1 per cent was paid. The capital stock is $2,500,000 and $31,250 will be disbursed in the April dividend. The surplus is $160,487 and there are about 400 stockholders.

Commonwealth Trust Skips Dividend

The Commonwealth Trust Company has sent letters to stockholders announcing that the board of directors has decided to pass its quarterly dividend of 1½ per cent due April 1st and, instead, add the amount to its surplus. The capital stock of the institution is $2,000,000 and its surplus and undivided profits are $84,325.32.

Will Address Credit Men

John E. Swanger, general representative of the Mercantile Trust Company, will be the guest of honor at a dinner to be given tomorrow night at the Mercantile Club by the St. Louis Association of Credit Men. He will speak on bank supervision as it relates to credits.

National Drainage Congress to Meet in St. Louis

St. Louis is making preparations to entertain one of the largest and most important conventions in its history when the Third National Drainage Congress is held at the Planters' hotel, April 10th, 11th, and 12th, under the auspices of the Conventions Bureau. Plans are being made for an attendence of from 3,000 to 5,000 delegates, and the meeting is expected to crystallize sentiment into a national demand, which the legislators at Washington cannot ignore, that the government take immediate steps to protect the lives and property of its citizens from disastrous floods, storms and tides. The accomplishment of the object of the National Drainage Congress probably means more for the development of the country along all lines of industry than any other question before the public to-day, and will be of inestimable direct benefit and profit to the Atlantic and Gulf states, as well as to those in the entire Mississippi Valley.

The purpose of the meeting at St. Louis is to have the congress of the United States take immediate action to create a national drainage commission, with ample powers and funds immediately available to evolve and put into effect a comprehensive national plan for—

1. The protection of the public welfare by the drainage and reclamation of the 75,000,000 acres of swamp and overflowed lands in the United States, and their utilization for agricultural purposes.

2. The protection, by drainage and reclamation, of the public health, which is constantly menaced by the existence of these swamps.

3. The protection, by levee construction and other means, of the people and their lives, homes and lands from floods, storms and tides.

4. The protection of the financial interests of the United States, the various states and the individual land owners by co-operation and an equable sharing of the expense of carrying out this plan in proportion to the benefits received.

David R. Francis, former governor of Missouri, is the president of the National Drainage Congress. Edmund T. Perkins, of Chicago, who was in charge of the Chicago office of the U. S. Reclamation Service for several years, is chairman of the national executive committee, of which Philip R. Kellar is the secretary.

Bankers whose customers have business at the St. Louis National Yards can realize full value of such business only through an account with this bank.

The personnel of the St. Louis Congress will comprise all its officers and members; the president of the United States and members of his cabinet; members of the United States congress; governors of states; members of federal, state, territorial and insular commissions on irrigation, water and conservation; state engineers; state commissioners of agriculture and horticulture; mayors of cities and towns with 1,000 population or their personal representatives, and delegates appointed as follows: Fifteen by the governor of each state, ten by the mayor of each city of more than 25,000, five by the mayor of each city of less than 25,000 and more than 1,000, five by the chairman of the governing board of each county, two by the mayor of each incorporated town of less than 1,000 population, two from each regularly organized association devoted to drainage, irrigation or other reclamation work, agriculture, horticulture, or engineering; two from each college or commercial body concerned with the public interest, duly organized not less than one year.

Certificates for appointment of delegates will be furnished upon application to the executive headquarters, 1110 First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, Ill., and a request is made that when delegates are appointed the name, address and occupation be forwarded immediately to the Chicago office.

Information relative to hotel rates, etc., will be furnished upon request to the secretary of the Conventions Bureau, Commercial building, St. Louis, Mo.

An attractive program is being prepared by Chairman Perkins, and will include addresses and papers by men prominent in national public life, state officials, scientists, industrial and financial leaders, drainage experts, a display by state officials of drainage plans and maps, and illustrated lectures. A photographer recently has taken moving pictures of flood scenes, break in the levee and the work of repairing the break, for use at the St. Louis meeting.

The sessions of the congress will be open to the public and their attendance is urged.

Calls for State Fund Bids

Bids will be received until noon April 14th by the state treasurer for the safekeeping of the surplus funds of the state under the new depository law. Meantime more than $3,800,000 of the money belonging to the state will remain in the custody of the Mississippi Valley Trust Company and the German-American Bank of St. Louis, under arrangements just made between Treasurer Deal and these institutions. After bids had been advertised for twice during February, the fund commissioners accepted bids representing but one-fourth of the surplus funds. All the bids from large financial institutions were rejected on the theory that not enough interest would be paid many of the bids running below 5 per cent on daily balances. February 15th the Mississippi Valley Trust Company and the German-American Bank notified the treasurer that March 15th they would surrender all the funds in their custody. After a trip to St. Louis by Attorney-general Barker and Treasurer Deal, arrangements have been completed under which these institutions will continue to hold the funds now in their custody until April 15th, but they will only pay 2 per cent interest on daily balances, or more than 1 per cent less than they had been paying for the past four years. The new law authorizes bids as low as one-eightieth of the total funds. The state officials are of the opinion that the changes in the law will result in many bids from the smaller banking institutions.

Convicted of Check "Kiting"

Raymond C. Hoss and C. M. Hoss, bankers of Fairfax, Okla., have been convicted in the federal court at Guthrie of "kiting" checks. Sentence has not yet been passed. It was charged that the two bankers, who are brothers, drew bills of exchange on national banks with intent to defraud and that they "kited" cashiers' checks for large amounts.

Banker Accepts Sentence

Jay Plumley, a young Checotah (Okla.) banker, was sentenced last Friday to five years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kan., by United States Judge Ralph E. Campbell. Plumley was cashier of a national bank when an examiner found something wrong with his books. He pleaded guilty nearly one year ago, and since that time his mother has been trying to get him pardoned by President Taft. Senators Owen and Gore were appealed to, but could do nothing for him until he was incarcerated and serving sentenee.

Continental Trust Will Take Over American Surety

The American Surety and Casualty Company of Houston, Tex., is to be consolidated with the Continental Trust of the same city, the consent of two-thirds of the stockholders of the former company having been secured and authority given to the president, Jonathan Lane, and other officers and directors, to take stock of the trust company in exchange for the casualty company's holdings. The president of the Continental Trust is S. F. Carter. The American Surety and Casualty Company has been managed by W. Strauss, and has been quite successful. It had some disagreement with the department of insurance and banking during the past few months, however, the commissioner of insurance contending that its charter did not give it the right to do business in Texas under the present laws of Texas. This the attorneys of the American Surety stoutly denied and were prepared to enjoin the insurance commissioner from any interference with their legal rights. The consolidation plans now under way, however, will prevent all litigation and will result in the Continental Trust taking over all the American's agreements and contracts. The Continental Trust has been on a regular dividend basis for the past year, paying 10 per cent annually.

NEW CURRENCY HEARINGS PLANNED

The new members of the senate committee on banking and currency expect to hold hearings in regard to currency legislation. Senator Owen of Oklahoma is chairman of the committee. Senator Bristow of Kansas, a member of the committee, expressed the belief that much care and caution should be used in the enactment of the proposed legislation.

A state bank with a capital stock of $30,000 and a paid in surplus of $6,000, soon will open for business as the First State Bank of Barrington.

SENATOR OWEN'S CURRENCY PLAN

It is a long time between Rhode Island and Oklahoma. Senator Owen has taken the place of Senator Aldrich as guardian of the senate position on banking and currency. His first care was to assure the country that he neither holds nor will he countenance any "wild theories" in framing our new currency law. In Oklahoma he was for guaranty of deposits but in the main he accepted the provisions of the defunct Aldrich bill, and in instances goes the Rhode Islander one or two better. Boiled down for easy digestion by our readers Chairman Owen stands for the following "provisions" in the new currency act, likely to be passed by the extra session of congress.

United States notes for emergency use. A method of instant issue when the emergency arises. A provision making the Aldrich provision against panic available to any national bank or to any state bank or to any trust company or savings bank which puts up the necessary security with the government. The use of the same form of bonds as the finance committee measure for collateral except railroad bonds, but providing for the use of United States bonds. Provision for the issuance of emergency notes in any quantity instead of limiting the issue, as in the Aldrich bill. A tax of 6 per cent for the first four months, 8 per cent for the succeeding months, and compulsory retirement within 12 months. Forbidding the use of bonds bearing interest in excess of 5 per cent. Restraining active officers of a bank from borrowing the funds of a bank except under special safeguards. Forbidding the use of deposits for speculative buying of stocks, bonds, agricultural or food products. Requiring interior banks to have 9 per cent cash reserves, reserve city banks to have 15 per cent cash reserves, central reserve banks to have 20 per cent cash reserves, and requiring banks to carry bonds available for emergency notes as the balance of the reserve required of them. The net favorable balance of accounts with reserve agents to be permitted as a part of the legal reserve. The insurance by national banks of their deposits by using the tax paid by the national banks on their normal and emergency circulation.

The time to take up these subjects is urgent. Fix in the mind the favorable and unfavorable "provisions" and be prepared for hearings or other developments. Every banker has a patriotic as well as a business or selfish interest in the outcome. Senator Aldrich in his palmiest day had no such power as Senator Owen has to fix wisely and firmly—or to injure—our future national finances.

KANSAS GUARANTY LAW WINS

The Kansas guaranty of deposits law has met all contenders and has won a decision finally in the United States Supreme Court—the court of last resort. First the state banks of Kansas took a whirl at it, about two years ago, but were bested in the Kansas courts. Then the national banks of the state carried it up to the federal district, then to the supreme court, only to lose in the end. The Kansas guaranty law now may be supposed to be absolutely fireproof so far as its constitutionality is concerned. In none of the courts did the question come up as to the value or effect of guaranty—just its legality under the Kansas statutes. It is to the credit of all concerned that this much mooted question has been decided. The bankers who objected to guaranty deserve well of their fellow bankers in all states for standing firm to the last ditch. The pro-guaranty advocates acted upon conscience and their rights and cannot be criticised. One live banking question is settled, if not in economics, in law.

THE "SHAVING" OF STREET FRONTS

Jackson Boulevard in Chicago is to be an example for all the rest of Chicago. The park commissioners ordered all protruding signs down and they came. The city did the same and they stayed up. Further the park authorities will erect 86 cluster lights in the short loop district stretch of Jackson making it the most brilliant lighted thoroughfare in the world. The city inevitably must follow suit as to the ugly, dangerous, protruding signs so objectionable on Clark, Dearborn, La Salle and State streets. Then must follow the protruding buildings. They will be "shaved" just as is being done in New York. The streets embraced in the latest shave-up in New York are: Broad, between Wall and Water; Beaver, between Whitehall and Pearl; Exchange Place, between Broadway and Hanover Place; Wall, between Pearl and Broadway; Pine, between Pearl and Broadway; Cedar, between West and Pearl.

This is one of the most important street widening projects yet undertaken. The streets in the financial district have become crowded. The encroachments on Nassau Street already have been removed, and the "shaving" of the buildings on the other narrow downtown thoroughfares follows naturally. A number of banks and large office building are affected by this newest resolution.

The Broad Street sidewalk has a uniform width of seventeen feet, while on other streets the widths vary, not only on each street but on the opposite sides of the same street, ranging from a minimum of 4½ feet on Exchange Place to 20 feet on a portion of Wall Street.

While the encroachments on the streets affected differ in character, Broad Street may be taken as a typical example. There the encroachments form almost a continuous occupancy of the sidewalk space, for a width of about six feet in front of 96 per cent of the buildings. They consist principally of steps, columns and pilasters, fences protecting areaways and platforms about a foot above the sidewalk level.

We favor the highway improvement work being done under Chairman Edens in Illinois, but commend for attention the sidewalks of the city of Chicago. The abuses are about the same as those enumerated for New York, and the space was "absorbed" in about the same way. What Chicago needs is a prompt, grand shave-up, including signs, railings, show cases, areaways, elevated stairways, basement stairways, and lights. This properly could be urged by the better roads enthusiasts at the forthcoming meeting.

WANTS MORE RESERVE CITIES

To the Editor:—I believe there are a few vital points in any future banking and currency legislation which should be given the fullest publicity.

As the law has stood for fifty years, New York, Chicago, and St. Louis are the three cities only designated as central reserve cities in which the national banks are compelled to keep on hand in their own vaults 25 per cent of their liabilities in cash. Under this system, the banks in the three cities have grown up until they now hold and have the use of the deposits of thousands of country banks to an amount exceeding $1,000,000,000 average daily balances. These three cities have aided monopoly by the aid of country money to the detriment of the towns and other cities of the country.

Is it not evident the law should be amended making every city of 50,000 population a central reserve city, compelling the banks to keep 25 per cent of their liabilities in cash in their own vaults? And also to prohibit banks from allowing interest to each other on their daily balances?

Such amendments to the banking laws are just, it is believed, because they would prevent congestion of money in the three favored cities.

They would so distribute the funds of the people in thousands of banks and produce conditions under which a panic hardly could exist. It is believed all panics have started in the money centers.— V. F. Newell.

Fifty Years' Chicago Bank Development

The wonderful growth of Chicago in the past half century is shown in no other way so emphatically and conclusively as by her increase in banking power. Being a natural center for commerce, manufacture and agricultural products, banking had an important part to play. For some years Chicago boosters have been pointing out the future financial center of the country for LaSalle street.

Nothing is more eloquent than the figures themselves, and the masterful Chicago Association of Commerce, through an able committee has prepared an illuminating and convincing bulletin. This was passed upon amid great enthusiasm in a full meeting at the LaSalle Hotel on Wednesday, and shows that in 1856 Chicago had five banks with aggregate capital of $397,000. To-day it has ninety-one, including those of Evanston and Oak Park, with $90,025,000 capital and about $1,000,000,000 deposits.

"This occurred in the third of a century just passed," says the bulletin. "Chicago jumped from $64,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 of deposits. This means a proportionate increase in aggregate tonnage, in manufacturing, in jobbing, retail merchandising, population, and pay rolls, and in local purchasing power. Can anyone in the face of these figures doubt the tendency toward the expansion of one of the leading markets of the world? What has happened has simply been astonishing; what may happen rests largely with us.

"There is a significance in the rapidly increasing number of out of town banks that have established connection here during recent years. This movement has proven the efficiency of the service rendered and the advantages of geographical location in collecting items in all parts of the country.

"Chicago banks employ expert transit men who specialize in this line of work, with the result that it has become recognized that drafts and checks routed through Chicago are handled with a minimum of delay and expense. Deposits carried here by these out of town correspondents have gained steadily. In 1892 they were only $57,800,000. When the last published statements were issued, February 4th this year, they had reached the magnificent sum of $315,200,000.

"Few have any conception of the heavy foreign exchange transactions of our financial institutions. This business can truly be said to be world wide. Foreign exchange purchased by Chicago banks originates all over the country and runs into hundreds of millions annually. The foreign connections of Chicago banks extend to every country where travel and commerce amount to much and where banking has been developed.

"The bankers of Chicago have been diligent in protecting its good name. They were first in engaging a clearing house examiner, and the efficiency and watchfulness displayed by him and his force of assistants have led to adoption of the Chicago system in more than twenty important cities, from New York to Los Angeles.

"Bank officers here have been active in civic affairs. They have not been lax in supporting public undertakings; on the contrary, they have been and are ready to devote a share of time and energy to such organizations as aim to promote the general welfare."

After the above comment, the report goes on to say that "The future of banking in this country is apparently more dependent upon a change in our banking and currency laws than is generally realized. We have attempted to point out that the condition of banking is only a composite of all other lines of endeavor. It has a deeper significance, however, as one of the fundamentals on which the business structure rests, because it furnishes the machinery by which the exchanges growing out of all other undertakings are perfected. If the machinery breaks down every man of affairs must call a halt and his employees face idleness. If hampered by lack of wise and effective currency regulations there come seasons when bankers cannot keep up the exchanges and grant loans to customers. It is imperative that in this essential there be remedial legislation and without much further delay."

Emery Lattanner, an examiner in the Ohio state banking department, has been appointed by Governor Cox assistant superintendent of the department, an office recently created by an act of the general assembly. Mr. Lattanner has assumed charge of the department, which has been without a head since the resignation of Superintendent F. E. Baxter. It is said that he may be elevated to the position of superintendent later. George Walters of Portsmouth, chief deputy, who has been acting as the department's head, will be retained for the present in his former position. Mr. Lattanner's home is in Hicksville. He has been an examiner in the department of banks and banking about a year, having been drafted from the state building and loan department. He formerly was vice-president of the Hicksville National.

Depositors Organize Association

A preliminary meeting of depositors of the defunct Columbus Savings and Trust company on Saturday last, resulted in the organization of the Depositors Probe and Protective Association. The depositors present voted to postpone the selection of a probe committee until a future meeting when all depositors will be invited to join with them. It was declared at the meeting that the purpose of organizing the depositors was to see that their interests are protected in liquidating the assets of the bank; and secondly, to bring criminal proceedings against any persons who should be found to have dissipated the bank's assets through criminal intent. A plan is being worked out by the standing committee, whereby depositors will not be asked for any assessment to push the probe.

Will Pay Depositors

Announcement that he will pay balances and interest due depositors in the Mechanics Savings, Toledo, Ohio, in process of liquidation, has been made by H. E. French, president of the closed bank. To date, 90 per cent of deposits have been paid depositors by Deputy State Superintendent of Banks J. A. Holmes, in charge of Mr. French's banks. According to reports of the deputy, 718 claims, aggregating $103,718.57 in bank liabilities, have been filed. The bank statement places the number of depositors, exclusive of about 800 who held deposits of from 1 to 80 cents, at about 1,040. The bank was closed on May 9, 1912, on the day Charles W. Laskey, cashier, was arrested on a charge of having taken a sum, the exact amount of which has not been announced, estimated at near $1,400, from the institution. Though Laskey is said to have repaid all or most of the amount, the bank was taken over by the state superintendent of banks on May 11th last. The first dividend of 70 per cent was paid on September 4th, and a second dividend of 20 per cent was paid December 2d. According to law, final dividend can not be paid by the superintendent of banks until the expiration of one year, which will be May 11, 1913. On that date, it is announced by the deputy, the remainder of deposits due with interest at 4 per cent to May 9, 1912, and of 6 per cent from that date until settlement date will be paid. In Mr. French's statement he announces that he will reimburse depositors directly that they may have what money is due them without waiting for final legal adjustment more than two months hence.

Trust Company Elects Officers

Directors of the new Commerce Trust company, Toledo, Ohio, have elected the first board of officers, including S. D. Carr, president; W. W. Edwards, R. B. Crane, vice-presidents; A. H. Peiter, secretary and treasurer; R. W. Kirkley, trust officer; M. V. Barbour, W. W. Edwards, E. J. Marshall, George W. Walbridge and R. B. Crane, executive committee. The new company will open for business on April 1st.

To Start Savings Department

A savings department is to be a new feature of the Second National of Toledo. It will be opened about May 1st and will be in charge of Harry E. Gall, who will resign his position with the Home Savings Bank.

Indictments in Bank Inquiry

Secret indictments have been returned against former officials of the Cincinnati Trust Company, of which George B. Cox was president. Affairs of the trust company have been under investigation most of the time since its absorption a year ago by the Provident Savings Bank and Trust Company. The indictments were returned after a conference between Attorney-General Hogan, Prosecutor Pogue and B. H. Kroger, president of the Provident Savings Bank and Trust Company, who was chairman of the liquidating committee of the Cincinnati Trust Company. The conference is reported to have related to a proposal of the directors of the trust company to pay $352,000 to the credit of the bank for the purpose of compensating stockholders. This amount is said to represent a note placed in the trust company's assets by its directors after a warning by the state banking department when it was found the trust company had loaned the Ford-Johnson Chair Company an amount in excess of that permitted by law.

To Head Security Company

Directors of the Maryland Title Guarantee Company, recently organized by interests identified with the Munsey Trust Company, have elected Eugene L. Norton, president; William M. Baker, secretary and Ellicott H. Worthington, treasurer. They occupy similar positions with the Munsey Trust. Vice-presidents have not yet been chosen.

Customs Receipts to Baltimore Banks

According to instructions from the treasury department at Washington received by Collector of the Port William F. Stone, four Baltimore national banks hereafter will receive local customs receipts. These funds always have been deposited with the subtreasurer heretofore. The banks selected by the department to receive the money are the National Marine, the National Bank of Commerce, the National Union and the First National. Under his instructions the collector is required to divide his receipts into four equal parts each day and give each of these designated banks its pro-rata. The banks are in turn expected to pay all government checks drawn on them and make daily returns to the department at Washington of all such transactions that they handle.

The customs receipts at this port aggregate between $4,500,000 and $5,000,000 annually. This makes a daily average of between $15,000 and $20,000 for the working days the Custom House is open for business. It practically means that this much money will be available not alone for government uses but also for such business purposes as the depository banks may elect. The result is that instead of these receipts being locked away in the treasury vaults at Washington or in those of the local subtreasury, they will be placed in general circulation.

The banks are required to deposit government bonds or some other security acceptable to the treasury officials before they can receive this government money. The security will cover the daily amounts they will receive and the balances they are likely to carry.

RETURNS FROM NEW YORK

Herman Waldeck, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National, returned from New York on Thursday of this week. Mr. Waldeck says that money is closer in New York than in Chicago, which situation he attributes to the unusual trade boom which the country has experienced, beginning last year. He expressed the opinion that the stringency is due to the demand for funds from business interests, and that the securities market or speculation is not responsible.

WILSON APPOINTS CREDIT COMMISSION

President Wilson has appointed a commission authorized in the last agricultural appropriation bill, to co-operate with the American commission assembled under the auspices of the Southern Commercial Congress to investigate and study in European countries co-operative rural credit unions and similar organizations devoted to the promotion of agriculture and the betterment of rural conditions. The commission will make a report of its findings to congress.

VOCATIONAL BILL TO HAVE HEARING

The conference vocational educational bill will have a hearing before the members of the Hamilton Club at a noonday luncheon to be given Tuesday, March 25th. Prof. David Felmley, president of the State Normal School at Normal, Ill., and B. F. Harris, chairman of the committee on agriculture and vocational education of the Illinois Bankers Association, will be the speakers. Afterwards a conference of the supporters of this proposed bill will be held in the club house to consider certain amendments to the bill.

HOPES FOR CURRENCY LEGISLATION

President Wilson is hopeful that at least a start on monetary reform, if not actual legislation along that line, may be made at the extra session of congress. The currency bill when presented will be a party measure and will not be made public until it has been studied closely by members of the cabinet, recognized authorities on currency questions, and some of the leading men of the country in whom the administration has confidence.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

The action of the supreme court of the United States in upholding the constitutionality of the Kansas bank deposit guaranty act of 1909 has brought to a close a long period of ligitation. This final decision will have direct bearing upon similar legislation in a number of states that have copied bank guaranty laws from the Kansas measure. The recent decision is the second one handed down by the supreme court. Two years ago the court acted favorably on the Kansas law but a rehearing was secured upon a new phase of the act.

Kansas was the pioneer state in the consideration of bank deposit insurance and the idea was before the people of that state for sixteen years before the system finally was established. In 1897 and 1898 the populists tried to pass a law embodying this principle and failed. Governor Hoch tried to force a measure with this end in view through both the regular and special sessions of the legislature of 1907. As a compromise measure a bill was passed authorizing a company to insure deposits but this was vetoed. The next year Governor Stubbs secured a deposit guaranty law which was declared unconstitutional by Federal Judge Pollock and the bank commissioner of Kansas was enjoined from putting it into operation. After several months' suspension, operation was resumed October 4, 1910, on an order from Judge Pollock when the injunction was dissolved by the United States court of appeals. The chief point involved in the objections of the banks to the act forced through by Stubbs was an attempt to limit the insurance to banks paying three per cent or less on deposits. The real father of the present bank deposit guaranty system is J. N. Dolley, former bank commissioner of Kansas, who also originated the "Blue Sky" system of laws which have been adopted in Kansas and several other states.

Nebraska Fails to Pass "Blue Sky" Bill

Although five "Blue Sky" bills have been introduced in the Nebraska house of representatives, not one has been passed and agreement seems still far off. The bills all were sent to the judiciary committee of the house with instructions to take all of them and redraft a bill combining the good features of all. The result of this work was a bill which appeared to combine all the bad features of all the bills. For several hours the house wrangled over this committee bill, after which it was sent back to the judiciary committee with instructions to try again. The chief argument against the composite bill was that there was very grave doubt as to whether or not it included real estate ventures and whether dealers would have to get the consent of the state banking department before advertising lands for sale. The committee said it was intended to exempt real estate but the instructions of the house were to make this clear. Representative Mockett led the fight on the committee report and said that it was too broad, that it would prevent all promotion enterprises from being advertised in the state. He defied the members to say promotion is not legitimate. The rejection of the report is an indication of a liberal policy on the part of the members of the Nebraska house toward business.

State Association Obtains Legal Recognition

The new Oklahoma banking law is unique in several respects but perhaps its most interesting feature is in giving legal recognition to the state bankers association in the administration of banking affairs. The bankers are required to maintain a state organization which periodically will name an executive committee of not more than fifteen nor less than nine members. Representatives of the 609 state banks have made their selections under the new law as follows: Group One, B. A. Hadson of Randlett, F. E. Herring of Elk City, W. E. Baker of Altus. Group Two, H. W. Reneau of Manchester, F. E. Hoyt of Cestus, R. M. Sours of Gage. Group Three, J. B. Charles of Stroud, George W. Pierson of Oklahoma City, F. B. Askew of Shawnee. Group Four, Morris Knight of Vinita, L. C. Rose of Tahlequah. Group Five, B. R. Brundage of Tishomingo, W. E. B. Leonard of Fort Towson and James Hudspeth of Atoka. The following nine bankers have been selected whose names were presented to Governor Cruce from which he will select three to form the state banking board, as provided for under the new law: John J. Gerlock of Woodward, Lee Patrick of Stroud, W. E. Ernest of Hammon, F. J. Wikoff of Oklahoma City, A. D. Kennedy of Okmulgee, L. C. Ross of Tahlequah, H. M. Spalding of North Enid, J. W. Chester of Hugo and W. F. Barker of Lawton. From this list Governor Cruce made these selections that now are before the senate for confirmation: John J. Gerlock, president of Gerlock's Bank of Woodward; A. D. Kennedy of the State Bank of Commerce, Okmulgee, and W. F. Barker of the Citizens State Bank, Lawton.

Missouri Passes "Blue Sky" Bill

The Missouri senate has passed a "Blue Sky" bill patterned after the Kansas law, giving the bank comissioner power to prohibit the sale of stock by concerns of questionable solvency and the bill also has passed the house with amendments that will necessitate its return to the upper body of the legislature. The bill provides that all except exempted companies shall submit a statement to the bank commissioner showing the amount of its assets, its location, names of principal officers and the character of business to be transacted. The bill exempts established brokerage and investment houses which in his judgment are dealing only with high-grade securities. The following concerns are exempted also: State and national banks, real estate and mortgage companies, building and loan associations, bond investment companies and insurance companies. To attempt the sale of stocks or bonds before obtaining the sanction of the commissioner is made a misdemeanor, punishable by a fine of $100 to $5,000, or imprisonment for ninety days in jail. The fee exacted is $25, which is to go into the general revenue fund.

K. C., M. & O. Ry. Situation

William T. Kemper, president of the Commerce Trust, has returned to Kansas City from New York where he attended a general meeting of officers and directors of the Kansas City, Mexico and Orient Railroad Company. Edward Dickinson, vice-president and one of the receivers, D. J. Haff, one of the attorneys of the company and Neal S. Doran, auditor, also returned to Kansas City with Mr. Kemper. The reorganization committee was in session in New York for a week and Lord Monson of London, Frederick K. Hurdie, P. D. Tuckett and J. Crosswhite Taylor, London financiers, also were in attendance. "The English members of the syndicate presented a well defined, feasible plan which met with favor among the American members of the committee," said Mr. Kemper. "After talking with New York bankers we still further were encouraged in the belief that the plan would be underwritten and money sufficient to complete the road would be raised." The first stretch of road to be built will be the 208 miles between Kansas City and Wichita, Kan., and after this is constructed the road will have 1,350 miles in operation not considering the disconnected links in parts of Mexico. From Topolobampo, the road's terminus on the west Mexico coast, to the mountains, a distance of about eighty miles, the road has been completed. About 165 miles remain to be built through the ranges of Mexico. When completed the road will be 300 miles shorter between Kansas City and the Pacific coast than any one existing. The road expects to profit largely through the opening of the Panama Canal.

Central West Notes

The Kansas City chapter of the American Institute of Banking met Tuesday night, March 18th, and heard two very interesting addresses on "Trust Companies." One of the speakers was Lapier Williams of the Kansas Trust Company, Kansas City, Kan., and the other was W. B. Planck, former deputy bank examiner for Missouri.

Sixty bank clerks, members of the Oklahoma City chapter of the American Institute of Banking, met last week in that city to organize for the study of banking methods. This chapter was only recently formed and its membership has doubled since the first meeting three weeks ago. Henry Elliot, assistant cashier of the State National of Oklahoma City, is in charge of the study work.

Ben L. Winchell, president of the Frisco railroad, has been making a tour of inspection in Oklahoma. He was given a banquet at Tulsa last week by the business men of that city. In the Winchell party were W. T. Tyler, vice-president; Col. Henry Exall of Dallas, Tex., and Asa E. Ramsey of Muskogee.

Acting Governor Oldham has signed the legislative act repealing the Arkansas anti-trust law. The law which has been repealed was very stringent and forbade any corporation doing business in the state unless it complied with almost impossible conditions.

A. S. Christy, 65 years old, former president of the First National of Scott City, Kan., died last week in a Kansas City hospital where he went for an operation. He had been in the banking business for more than thirty years and had been connected with many institutions in Kansas and Colorado. B. B. Christy, a son, now is president of the First National of Scott City.

Philip Carlson, of Smolan, Kan., and cashier of the State Bank of that place, has been appointed a state bank examiner of Kansas.

R. C. Ayres, vice-president of the Commonwealth National of Dallas, Tex., has resigned that position and will begin the work of organizing another bank for Dallas at once.

It has been announced that the new Kansas City bank to be located at Eighteenth Street and Grand Avenue will open May 1st, with a capital stock of $100,000 and surplus of $10,000. The organizers are John A. Long, formerly president of the Long Brothers Grocery Company; Robert E. Booth, formerly cashier of the Drovers National, and Fred S. Bullene, a newspaper man. In addition to a general banking business the new bank will have a savings department. Although the name has not been decided upon it is reported that it will be called the Central City Bank.

Raymond H. Hoss of Fairfax, Okla., and his uncle C. M. Hoss of Tulsa, Okla., were convicted by a federal jury at Guthrie last week of defrauding the First National of Fairfax. Raymond Hoss was sentenced to serve seven years in the Leavenworth prison and his uncle was given five years. Appeal bonds were given. Both men were indicted with Cashier Julius F. Rochau, charged with drawing bills of exchange without authority.

Among the out-of-town bankers in Kansas City last week were: J. E. Tucker, president of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Courtland, Kan.; William Macferran, president of the State Savings, Topeka, Kan.; J. W. Huddleson, president of the Citizens State of Pomona, Kan.; Chester Thomas, president of the Merchants State of Waterville, Kan.; H. E. Warren, cashier of the Bank of Grain Valley, Grain Valley, Kan., and H. Markey, cashier of the Gilman City Bank, Gilman City, Mo.

THE NEW SECRETARY

For the benefit of those who are interested in the work of the bankers' committees on agriculture and better farming the following article is reproduced from the current issue of the Farmers Review and relates to the new secretary of agriculture appointed by President Wilson:

"After weeks of waiting and guessing on the part of the agricultural public, the name of the new secretary of agriculture was made known on the day of the inauguration, Professor David F. Houston, of Missouri being the choice of the president for that important office. Since that day the question has been "Who is Houston?" It is safe to say that very few people know anything further about him than his name. Prognostics failed entirely in their industrious efforts to foretell where the appointment would go, the name of Houston failing to receive mention. As a "dark horse," Professor Houston qualifies in a most unique manner. He leaves the chancellorship of Washington University at St. Louis to become head of the federal department of agriculture. He is a native of North Carolina and was graduated from the universities of South Carolina and Harvard. He has devoted his entire life to educational work, mostly in schools and universities along purely academic lines. From 1902 to 1905 he was president of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College; since then he has been at Washington University. While in his educational preparation or experience agriculture never has occupied a very large or important place, he is understood to be a man capable of successfully coping with the situation confronting him in his new work. At least such a result is what is expected of him by agricultural interests generally. The federal department of agriculture needs a real head. It needs above all a secretary who can successfully manage his own department and one who possesses the executive ability to make it what it should and can be in efficiency of service to the country at large. If we are to have a secretary who never has been particularly identified with agriculture or agricultural work, it is to be hoped that he will make up in other qualifications whatever he may lack in this regard. In the selection of Professor Houston, President Wilson undoubtedly has picked a man whom he believes can measure up to just such a standard of requirement."

STRONG TEXAS BANK

City National of Wichita Falls, Texas, under the last call of the comptroller showed deposits of $1,271,154.74 and resources of $1,865,-901.37. Interests connected with this bank shortly will organize an affiliated trust company.

Officers are: J. A. Kemp, president; P. P. Langford and Wiley Blair, vice-presidents; C. W. Snider, cashier, and W. L. Robertson, assistant cashier.

Wichita Falls is a city of northwestern Texas with an abundance of natural gas for manufacturing purposes, and is a splendid location for manufacturing plants contemplating a change in that locality.

DEMAND FOR MONEY ACTIVE

Bradstreets, in commenting on the general situation, says:

"Trade, crop and industrial reports continue to present favorable aspects, and although some branches of textiles manifest more or less concern about the effects on future trade of tariff changes, the general situation throughout the most sections of the country is characterized by good consumptive demand.

"Open weather enables outdoor construction work to display activity, farmers are beginning to call for spring help, the railways continue to do well and operations in the steel and iron industry are active.

"Demand for money is active, rates are firmer and tension oversea, together with domestic wants incident to spring farm work and forthcoming heavy settlements, will make for continued high rates."

MAUSOLEUM

The above is one of our classic four column front mausoleums. We have erected many hundreds of mausoleums, ranging in price from $2,000 to $100,000. The private mausoleum is the least heartrending method of caring for the deceased.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

The livestock promotion meeting of bankers has been summarized as to results which are being sent out in the form of typewritten sheets to officials of the northwestern bankers associations. After these reports have been studied, plans to raise the number of farm animals will be formulated. Among the features in the report are the following:

Population is increasing and livestock production decreasing; western Canada, a big Liverpool competitor, is cutting in against the wheat producer in Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana; it is imperative that this trend of things be stopped; the farmer who raises livestock is a better credit risk; efforts should be made to stop the sale of immature stock and find a market, other than for slaughter, for farmers desiring to sell young stock; efforts should be made to increase the raising of hogs, sheep, chickens and turkeys; diversified farming would be helped by livestock raising; Silo building and the use of cornstalks for feed should be encouraged.

The report reads in part:

"Although the population of the United States increased from 1900 to 1910 from 75,000,000 to 91,000,000, the number of animals on the farms in the United States, according to government statistics, decreased during that period as follows:

	1900.	1910.
Cattle	69,335,882	61,225,791
Swine	64,686,155	58,000,632
Sheep	61,735,014	51,809,068
Total	195,757,051	171,035,491

"From 1901 to 1912 the production of spring wheat in the Northwest increased from 191,075,000 bushels to 263,043,000 bushels. It also is noted that western Canada, which now is one of our principal competitors at the Liverpool market, during these thirteen years increased its wheat production from 23,456,000 bushels in 1900 to 188,000,000 bushels in 1912.

"The consensus of opinion was that the bills now pending in the various legislatures appropriating money for agricultural education and for demonstration work along the lines of diversified farming and improved farming conditions, should be indorsed and their passage advocated.

"One of the reasons for the decrease in the number of cattle on farms is the great increase in the slaughter of calves at the various livestock markets, at South St. Paul the number having increased yearly from 34,447 in 1901 to 130,708 in 1912. It unanimously was agreed that special efforts should be made to find a market for this young livestock in sections of our own territory where they could be raised instead of allowing them to be killed."

The first signs that farmers are attempting to raise more stock than formerly was evidenced at the stockyards in South St. Paul, when large consignments of heifer calves, intended for slaughter, were sold instead to North Dakota and Minnesota farmers. E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, who started the campaign for more stock raising in the state, said that undoubtedly there will be a market for calves. Heretofore, according to the banker, farmers generally have slaughtered their calves or sold them to be slaughtered.

The idea is being carried out already in Montana where President R. J. Covert and Cashier L. V. Stryker of the Lovell State of Lovell and J. J. Rouse, former cashier of the State of Pullman, are offering to finance the farmers who want to go in for dairying.

A. I. B. Men Hold Contests

Two hundred members of the Twin City chapters of the American Institute of Banking, competed in the annual contest between the bank clerks, Minneapolis and St. Paul, last Saturday night, in the lobby of the Northwestern National. After an exciting three hours, a buffet luncheon was served in the main banking room, with the Minneapolis Chapter men as hosts. Bank officers and Owen T. Reeves of Chicago, national bank examiner for the district, were interested spectators, crowding with the clerks around the money cages and pressing against the ropes that separated the adding machine operators from the spectators. Six contests for valuable prizes were participated in by the representatives of the two cities, under the direction of a contest committee composed of Ed Wagenhals, Security National; J. C. Thomson, Northwestern National; A. E. Linhjem, Scandinavian American National.

The contest prizes were as follows: Burroughs Adding machine, speed in counting 250 checks, first prize, gold watch; second, Gladstone bag; third, gold watch fob. Wales adding machine, 250 checks, first prize, silver military hair brushes and comb; second, umbrella; third, safety razor. Customer statement machine, showing checks, credits, old and new balances on fifteen accounts with an average of ten items each, the first local contest of the kind; prize, traveling bag. Bank Assists Dairy Industry

One and one-half carloads milk cows have been ordered by farmers from the Iron River, Wis., bank, the Wisconsin State. The farmers have until April 1st to make application for cows, and Cashier Ripley expects the orders will reach a carload. The bank conceived the idea of assisting in developing the dairy industry in tributary territory. It offered to furnish the money to the farmers to buy the cows and to take payment by division of the cream checks until repayment is made. Orders for cows began to come in at once.

Chapman Replies to Letter From Agricultural Credit Commission

Replying to a letter from the American commission to study European co-operation, Joseph Chapman, vice-president of the Northwestern National, said in part: "Any plan to furnish cheap money for the farmer without taking into consideration his ability to use that cheap money intelligently would be an economic error, as the shiftless, ignorant farmer is no more deserving of cheap money than is the ignorant, shiftless manufacturer who does not conduct his business on business principles.

"I am favorably impressed with the amortization plan of the European farmers in paying their mortgages and interest. I think if some such plan could be introduced gradually in this country so that the farmer would have 10 or 15 years to pay off his loan with no uncertainty regarding a renewal or payment of renewal commissions and no expense in bringing his abstract down, it would be of great and decided benefit to our farmers."

Mr. Chapman said that recently he visited a rural district in Arkansas. A man was in a cornfield hacking away at cornstalks with a hoe.

"What are you doing?" asked Mr. Chapman.

"Cutting down the stalks so it will be easier for the boys to plough," answered the farmer.

Mr. Chapman walked down the field and found two little boys laboriously ploughing a furrow about an inch deep. They told him that they were going to plant potatoes. The farmer had said that his yield of corn had been 15 bushels to the acre and was gradually growing less.

"Now who would think of extending cheap credit to that farmer?" asked the banker. "The farmer must realize that his farm and its output must have as much integrity as the manufacturing plant of the successful business man if he wishes to secure loans at good rates."

Agricultural Department for Bank

The agricultural department of the First National, St. Paul, has been set under way by Chairman Louis W. Hill. Among other features, an illustrated poster, 3 by 5 feet, with the slogan, "Bigger Yield, Bigger Bank Account," and a list of prize winners at the recent Northwestern Land Show in Minneapolis has been sent out to every bank, country store and railroad station in the Dakotas, Montana, Washington and Minnesota. A booklet by F A. Crane, agricultural extension agent of the Great Northern Railroad, goes with the poster, and the following recommendations: Establishment of diversified farming and rotation of crops; at least twenty head of livestock for every quarter section; a silo on every farm, having more than ten head of cattle; the manufacture of as much farmyard manure as possible. Steady employment of farm help the year round.

Henry von der Weyer Back From Trip

Returned from a long, roundabout trip which included Havana, Washington and New York, Henry von der Weyer, vice-president of the Merchants National, reported that he found optimism in business. He said it was evident in Washington that President Wilson's appointments are reassuring and proving satisfactory to business in general, and he found an impression that the administration will not injure the general prosperity on which the country is entering. He said: "My inspection of bank buildings gave me several suggestions that may be of value when the Merchants National prepares to erect its new building. These principally concern interior decorations and comparatively small details, such as the use of beautiful marbles, and iron and steel for counters. The last is the carrying out of the fireproof idea to the logical end. Instead of being of wood, the shelves, too, are being made of metal. Buildings are not departing from the present standards materially, of course, but only in smaller details like those I cited. The Merchants National will not push plans for building until the Robert Street widening is definitely settled."

Northwest Notes

The First National of Stone Lake, Wis., has begun business with $25,000 capital. The town is having an influx of settlers and a boom is being experienced.

The First State of Ely, Minn., is under way. It has a connection with the Union Investment Company of Minneapolis and occupies a new building on Sheridan Street. Officers are: president, M. J. Murphy; vice-president, Theodore Albrecht; second vice-president, A. S. James; cashier, George L. Brozich; assistants Arthur Toms, Andrew Harri; directors, M. J. Murphy, A. S. James, James Moonan, G. L. Brozich, A. D. Ellefson, G. H. Good, Theodore Albrecht. Mr. Albrecht is a resident of Minneapolis, and the other officers of Ely.

Charles Chaffee, president of the First National, Rhinelander, Wis., pioneer business man, is dead at 73 years.

Minnesota Loan and Trust is putting in a new series of customers' bond clipping rooms in connection with its safety deposit vaults, in the Northwestern Bank building.

George F. Orde, vice-president of the First National, has been made treasurer of the Union City mission, which is about to erect a workingmen's hotel in Minneapolis to cost about $300,000.

W. V. O'Connor has become secretary of the Farmers and Mechanics Savings, Grand Forks, N. D. As a member of the house of representatives of the legislature at Bismarck, Mr. O'Connor has been delayed in taking up the duties of a position to which he was elected some time ago.

The First State of Barrows, Minn., has begun business with officers as follows: president, J. P. Ernster, Minneapolis; vice-president, John Wahl, Duluth; cashier, R. C. Klinkenberger; directors, G. H. Rydberg of Duluth, John Wahl, J. P. Ernster, R. G. Klinkenberger of Barrows, E. C. Bane of Brainerd.

The First National of Ironton, Minn., is being organized by Isaac Hazlett, Minneapolis; J. J. Meyer, F. B. Coon, W. E. Parker, Wadena; H. J. Ernster, Greenwood; A. J. Hayes, Crosby; Primus D. Kreitter, Ironton, and others. The bank has options on three sites for a building.

The First National of St. Paul, which celebrated its golden anniversary recently, began February 24, 1863, and now is hoary with dignity. The bank has grown from a modest institution to a position of strength equaling that of other Northwestern banks of the first rank. The capital and surplus are $5,000,000. Engraved anniversary greetings were sent out.

INDIANA "BLUE SKY" BILL VETOED

"Blue Sky" legislation, aimed at the fraudulent dealer in illegitimate securities but so drawn as to work hardship upon legitimate business, has received a setback by the action of Governor S. M. Ralston of Indiana, who has just reported his veto of Senate Bill No. 10, known as the Harlan bill. This was passed by the Indiana legislature last Wednesday. As the legislature has adjourned, Indiana is to wait at least two years before a "Blue Sky" law is enacted. As a result of the veto Governor Ralston has announced that a commission of three men will be appointed to make a more comprehensive survey of the security situation and report a bill for 1915. The bill was closely patterned after the original Kansas act and contained features alleged to be onerous to legitimate business, so that it called out a strong, concerted opposition on the part of the Indiana Manufacturers Association and Investment Bankers of Indiana.

GIVES ESSENTIALS OF VOCATIONAL LEGISLATION

National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education, in order to aid the campaign now being waged for education of the youth of the land along vocational lines, is sending out pamphlets containing what the society believes should be the underlying principles in legislation proposed to be enacted in the various states. State aid for the local communities is advocated.

It recognizes four fields of vocational training as the kind the state ought to furnish its boys and girls: Industrial education for workers in the trades and industries and in the household, agricultural education for the farmers, commercial education for clerks, salesmen, etc., and "household arts education" for non-wage-earning occupations connected with the home. In other words, the state ought to make it possible for children to receive in the public schools instruction that will fit them directly for productive employment in any of these useful occupations, instead of sending them out with little or no training for the real work they are going to do.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Spokane is the most important mortgage center in the Pacific Northwest, according to R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, who says:

"The volume of business in loans placed here adds materially to the financial strength of the city, and the never failing supply of funds for mortgage investments, which these companies make available for both city and farm loans, has been one of the most important factors in the rapid development of the Spokane country. In addition to the facilities of the trust companies, which have been leaders in the mortgage field, the insurance companies, including both those having their home offices here and those represented by financial agents, have been steady and consistent lenders. The two principal life insurance companies domiciled in Spokane—the Western Union and the New World—have mortgages in this territory aggregating $1,500,000. The Dutch Companies, including the old Hypotheek Bank, the Holland Bank, the Netherlands American Mortgage Company, the International Mortgage Bank and the North Pacific Loan and Trust Company, continue to be important sources of loans, particularly on farm properties. The Vermont Loan and Trust Company, which ranks as one of the most reliable farm mortgage houses in the country, places its loans on Washington farms largely in New England. As a result of Spokane's rapid development in the mortgage business, there has been a remarkable growth in the city's influence as a banking center. In the first place the mortgage companies necessarily carry large balances with their banks, which increase the deposits of the town and add materially to the capital available for general banking purposes here. In the second place the country banks over a constantly increasing territory are finding that when their customers require mortgage loans, Spokane is the place to do business. As a result, banks which heretofore had been doing their city business with Seattle, Portland or Butte, gradually are throwing their accounts to Spokane and are looking upon this city as their financial center."

Filing petitions for franchise rights within two hours of each other, a merry race has been started in Spokane by two groups of capitalists for the privilege of installing a central plant for heating buildings in the business district. The Trustee Company, made up of Spokane men, also asks for permission to supply electric light for its five office buildings, while Allen Van Rensselaer, of Victoria, B. C., would make and sell steam and electric light and power to the public. The situation is the second that has occurred in Spokane, for in 1905 two groups of capitalists fought a battle for a similar franchise, which was granted to one but has lapsed since. One of the companies now asking a franchise offers to pay the city two per cent of its gross earnings after 1925, and the other promises not more than one and one-half nor less than one per cent of gross earnings, beginning at once. Commissioner of Public Utilities C. M. Fassett is investigating the merits of the two propositions.

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Fidelity National Bank, J. J. Rouse, formerly cashier of the First National of Pullman, Wash., was made a director and was elected cashier. Mr. Rouse and E. S. Burgan, formerly president of the Pullman Bank, have purchased an interest in the Fidelity. Mr. Rouse will assume his duties as cashier May 1st. He now is at Tacoma taking a vacation after several years' strenuous work and will recuperate until his local appointment becomes effective. A. W. Lindsay, present cashier, who has been with the local bank since its organization, has been promoted to the vice-presidency. Orris Dorman continues as vice-president, giving the Fidelity now two vice-presidents. Mr. Rouse is one of the best known bankers in the Inland Empire. He has been cashier of the Pullman Bank for several years, making it one of the best known and largest banks in the Palouse country.

A seven per cent dividend on its $1,225,000 capitalization, aggregating $82,500, is announced in the annual statement of the Day and Hansen Security Company of Spokane. The company just has closed a successful year, according to the statement of Charles T. Hansen, its secretary. It is prosecuting energetically a campaign to induce farmers of the Spokane country to practice diversified farming, good results being noted in the additional acreage of corn for ensilage.

Adding and listing 100 strange checks correctly in one minute and 41 seconds, Thomas Rodgers, clerk at the Exchange National Bank, set a new adding machine record for Spokane chapter, American Institute of Banking, beating his own record of 1912 by several seconds. Fifteen clerks participated in the annual contest.

A rumor that the new 5-cent piece contains 40 cents worth of gold caused Spokane banks considerable annoyance. The banks received numerous telephone calls from persons wanting to know whether they could immediately get 45 cents each for the new coins.

On March 10th the Trustee Company, owner of five Spokane office buildings, disbursed its twenty-fourth dividend of $25,650 among its unit holders. This brings the total paid by the company to $486,294.47. The company reports the rental situation greatly improved since January 1st.

Daniel G. Wing, president of the First National of Boston, Mass., was a visitor in Spokane this week, in company with J. Cheever Cowdin of San Francisco, representing Bond and Goodwin, note brokers, of Boston and New York. Mr. Wing speaks optimistically of conditions and reports that the New England manufacturers are anticipating substantial tariff revision and have prepared for it, so that any changes in tariff under the Wilson administration, he believes, will not vitally affect business.

Ames Higgins, representing F. A. Vanderlip, president of the National City Bank of New York, called at a number of Spokane banks this week.

EDMONTON NEWS

Five million dollars of which $2,000,000 is for telephone extensions, principally in the rural districts, and the rest for good roads and bridges, is to be expended by the province of Alberta during 1913. Hon. Malcolm McKenzie, provincial treasurer, has submitted a plan to raise the amount on the credit of the province. The work, which, it is announced, will begin immediately after the bill passes the legislature, now in session in Edmonton, is to be under the direction of competent supervisors. Nine hundred thousand is for rural lines, $700,000 is for exchanges and $400,000 is for long distance lines. Sixty-six hundred and eighty-nine miles of toll lines, 9,671 miles of rural lines, connecting 7,120 rural subscribers and giving service to 14,692 exchange subscribers, were in operation at the close of 1912.

George M. Hall, industrial commissioner for the municipality, has received advices from Charles F. Roland, general manager of the Winnipeg Industrial Bureau, that the Winnipeg business men's party, traveling in a special train, will arrive in Edmonton at 4 o'clock the afternoon of May 22d, and remain until midnight on May 23d, going thence to Athabasca and returning at 6 o'clock the evening of May 24th and remaining until midnight. The excursionists will pass part of the following day at Edson, probably also going as far west as Fitzhugh and returning to Edmonton the morning of May 26th on the way home, reaching Winnipeg the afternoon of May 27th. The purpose of the excursion is to bring the business men closer together.

Messrs. Tees and Persse, wholesale agents, are rushing work on the foundation for a six-story brick and steel warehouse, 140 by 55 feet, at Seventh Street and Peace Avenue. The structure proper will cost $70,000. The basement will be eight and a half feet in depth, covering the entire site. Messrs. McNeil and

Fish and Trainor of Calgary, have the contract for the building and soon will have a force of men at work. Part of the building is to be ready in July.

A. B. Mann, head of the Northern Construction Company, announced in Edmonton recently that the main line of the Northern Pacific Railway company will be ready to turn over to the operating department no later than March, 1914. Contractors are now on every mile of the uncompleted sections of the road, he added, and the track-layers are on their heels from both ends, so that with the last scraper of earth and the last blast of rock the last spikes will be driven, thus making a new and unique record in transcontinental railway building.

Three hundred and fifteen instruments were installed in February by the telephone department of Edmonton, giving a total of 6,769 'phones in operation. The department is about four months behind with its orders. The system, which is owned and controlled by the municipality, is on a self-sustaining basis and has a large surplus to its credit. The cost of residence instruments is $20 a year, while business houses pay $30 a year. It is expected that these charges will be increased with the enlargement of the service.

Frederick W. Lyons, superintendent of the prison farm at Guelph, Ont., has been appointed to a similar position at the prison farm to be established by the municipality, 12 miles southwest of Edmonton, at a cost of $13,000. Fifty acres of the land have been under cultivation and can be utilized for mixed farming, dairying and gardening. There are gravel and sand deposits along the river bank. These will be developed. The farm will be worked by short-term prisoners. It will be financed by an issue of debentures of $5,000 and current revenue of $8,000.

Sydney V. Kendall, an architect and surveyor with offices in London, Eng., and Toronto, has sent a letter to Charles E. K. Cox, city clerk of Edmonton, in which he says among other things: "I understand that the city council of Edmonton have been looking carefully into the question of housing the working classes. I have some English clients who are anxious to start building operations in Canada, and would be prepared to come in financially on any sound scheme and work jointly with the city council. Please advise me what you would be prepared to do if English capitalists and contractors join you."

George O'Conner of the Dixon Bridge company of Campbellford, Ont., W. J. Webster, representing a woolen mill and an official of the Edmonton Shoe and Leather company, appeared before the city council of Edmonton, March 11, to urge the extension of public utilities, all of which are owned and operated by the municipality, to Manchester addition. Their plants are located 66 feet outside of the city limits. The industrial committee and the city commissioners will investigate the matter and report to the council.

Harry Stephens of Portage la Prairie, recently spent several days in the Edmonton district to investigate the clay deposits and studying prospects for the development of the brick business in this part of Alberta. It is understood he will establish a string of plants between Medicine Hat and Edmonton. The enterprise is backed by eastern capitalists.

Edmonton will be represented by the city plumbing inspector at the convention of plumbing inspectors and sanitary engineers, to meet at the Industrial Bureau building, Winnipeg, April 16 to 18.

The city council of Edmonton has granted a permit to the Canadian Pacific Railway company to maintain a temporary station at Hardisty Avenue and Ninth Street, Edmonton, until January 1, 1914, pending the completion of its terminal station. The new building, now in course of construction at Jasper Avenue and Ninth Street, will cost $225,000. It is to be completed in time for the opening of the high level bridge across the Saskatchewan river. The bridge will cost $1,500,000.

James O'Connor, a railway contractor, who is just completing a 40-mile contract for the Canadian Northern on the eastern slope of the Rockies, said in Edmonton that he is planning to have the grade ready for the track-layers by the time they reach his section.

George McLeod, a contractor of Winnipeg, is in Edmonton to figure on some proposed local buildings. Mr. McLeod is a pioneer of the Yukon. When a member of the Winnipeg police force he held the amateur boxing championship of western Canada.

Kent, vice-president of the Bankers Trust Company of New York, spoke on "Exports and Imports," illustrating his lecture with stereopticon views. George E. Des Moines is not the only Iowa city to show tremendous gains in clearings. One day recently Cedar Rapids clearings went up to $1,600,000 as against the previous high record for one day of $904,000. Sioux City went up one day to $1,042,000 and now Cedar Rapids is claiming superiority over the Woodbury county metropolis.

Des Moines, March 19th.—Arrangements for the state convention of the Iowa Bankers Association which meets in Des Moines, May 27th and 28th, will be made at the quarterly meeting of the council of administration, called by Secretary P. W. Hall for March 20th. It is expected that the meeting will be largely attended, although President Charles Shade, of Rock Rapids, is in California, and will not be present.

The Des Moines Clearing House Association, which is in charge of the convention, has turned down the suggestion that the convention devote an afternoon to visiting Ames for pointers and inspiration, in connection with the work of making Iowa more wealthy via the agricultural improvement route. The Des Moines bankers believe that it will be more satisfactory if the convention remains in Des Moines, inasmuch as it is but two days long. The association in addition to the entertainment committee of Messrs. Stevens, Richter and Blacburn, has named John Hogan of the German Savings as chairman of the committee on hotels and Grant McPherrin of the Central State as chairman of the committee for entertainment of the visiting ladies. This latter duty heretofore has been in the hands of the fair sex. But Mr. McPherrin is so chivalrous, and withal so courteous and attentive to the wishes of femininity that it was decided to place him in charge of this interesting feature of the convention. For the men there will be a baseball game, and probably a wrestling match, but outside of this entertainment no announcements have been made. Headquarters will be at the Savery.

Complete memberships on the committees are as follows: Entertainment: H. T. Blackburn, Leo H. Stevens, George W. Richter; hotels, John H. Hogan, Cyrus A. Barr; ladies' entertainment, Grant McPherrin, Edward A. Slininger, A. O. Hauge; reception, George E. Pearsall, C. H. Martin, Gilger E. MacKinnon, George A. Dissmore, W. B. Lutz, James A. McKinney, Blanchard B. Vorse, John A. Elliott and John H. Blair.

Secretary Hall is proceeding slowly in making up his program for the convention. Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and James J. Hill, the Great Northern railroad magnate, have been invited to take part on the program. President R. A. Pearson of Ames College is another probable speaker. The secretary has many lines out, but they are slow in returning answers.

Legislative Situation

The Iowa legislature is proceeding slowly with the measures of especial interest to the Iowa Bankers Association. It is not possible to get a line on the situation, inasmuch as one never can tell what will happen next. However, it appears that the bill providing for placing private banks under state control is done for this session. The private bankers have been on the job at all times. They have been represented at the state house continuously and in addition there are several influential private bankers in the legislature who have seen that bills providing for state regulation have been smothered. On the question of school treasurer, it reasonably is certain that this office will be retained but without the customary salary attached in some places. However, the school treasurers will have the disposition of the school funds even though they are compelled to put them on interest.

The law providing for taxing money and credits at a flat rate of five mills will not be repealed. There has been a movement to knock out this law but apparently it will not succeed. Various bills along the line have been introduced. One proposes to increase the flat rate to eight mills. The bills prohibiting the circulation of derogatory statements concerning banks and the bill prohibiting the making of false statements for the purpose of securing credit look like winners. The bill making more severe the penalty for bank burglary with the aid of explosives probably is a winner. The senate has passed the bill permitting savings banks to loan on real estate in other states but the bill has been amended so that the real estate must lie in the tiers of counties bordering upon Iowa. At this writing it seems safe to predict that the house likewise will adopt this measure.

Interest largely is centering in the report of the state tax commission. This provides for private bank inspection, for more equitable bases in bank assessment, for county assessors and a state tax commission. Opposition to the measure has been stirred up throughout the state and so many petitions of protest are coming in upon the legislators that the outcome of the measure is doubtful.

Group Meetings

The various groups of Iowa bankers would better watch out or the goblins will get them. With the state convention only two months away, there still are eight group meetings to be held and half of these have not as yet even selected their dates. Group Six will meet in Des Moines, April 10th. Group Four announced its meeting at McGregor, May 20th, but it is probable that this date will be advanced because it is too close to the state convention dates. Group One probably will meet at Holstein, April 24th. It is planned to run a special train from Sioux City to take the bankers up to Holstein in the morning and return them at night. Chairman Wohlenburg announces that there will be "plenty to eat and drink." He says it will be a gala day for Holstein.

Guaranty Bill up in Legislature

It was thought that the Iowa legislature would escape the annual law providing for guaranty of bank deposits. But it made its appearance the other day when Representative Downey put in a bill providing for protection of depositors against loss if a bank becomes insolvent. It will not get far. Other new bills provide for a limit of the liability of state and savings banks to one borrower instead of 20 per cent of its capital stock. Another provides that when a deposit has been made for another on the death of the depositor the bank may pay deposit to the person for whom the deposit was made or his legal representative. A bill providing for reorganization of the state banking department along lines heretofore suggested by Auditor Bleakly also is pending.

Girl Convicted as Forger

A ten-year-old girl was sent to the girls' industrial school from Des Moines the other day for forgery. It was charged that the little girl is the youngest forger ever convicted in Iowa. She told the court that she filled in the check upon orders from older persons. Another forger named Anderson was arrested in Des Moines by Detective Patek representing the Burns agency. This particular forger who gave the name of Anderson had been active in Salvation Army work.

Des Moines Visitors

Many Iowa bankers have been calling upon Des Moines financiers the past few days. Among them were Ellis D. Robb, national bank examiner, Eldora; Cashier R. H. Bell, Wiota Savings; Cashier L. H. Lexhold, Bank of Radcliffe; Cashier Scott Whitehead, First National, Sioux Rapids; President W. H. Arnold, Iowa Savings, Marshalltown; Cashier Hugh G. Little, First National, Prairie City; Cashier R. Iowa Notes

The Leavitt and Johnson National at Waterloo has decided to encourage savings accounts and at the same time encourage the increase of the human race. The bank has offered to start a bank account for every baby in Black Hawk county under the age of eight months. A dollar is placed to the credit of the youngster. The only condition is that it must remain in the bank until the depositor reaches the age of 21. Twenty babies were brought into the bank and accounts were started for them in one day after the plan finally was promulgated.

New nickels are proving decidedly popular in Des Moines. It was but a short time after they arrived until the most of the banks had passed out their supplies and were in the market for more.

The Des Moines Clearing House Association in its report for the month of February shows a total on deposit in the Des Moines banks of $34,436,065. This is a gain of $2,000,000 in deposits in a single month, as the total at the beginning of the month was $32,287,240. The deposits in the banks which are not members of the association, if added to the above, would send the total up to the $40,000,000 mark, in the opinion of bankers.

Much newspaper comment has been aroused in Iowa over the alleged discovery that J. C. Englebert, mayor of Marengo, is not a citizen of the United States. Englebert is president of the bank at Victor and a director in a bank at Marengo. When the rumor became too strong Mr. Englebert produced the papers showing that his father was naturalized and that therefore he as his son likewise is an American citizen.

Grant McPherrin, recently elected cashier of the Central State, Des Moines, has contracted with H. S. Chase for a new modern banking room for his private bank, the Drake Park. He announces also that A. H. Edwards of Clearfield becomes cashier of the Drake Park Bank to succeed E. A. Tyler, promoted to manager.

A bill to require bankers to file lists of their stockholders with the assessors or be fined not to exceed $500 is a contribution to the legislative grist. Bankers already are filing such lists in most counties of the state.

The Massena Savings announces a handsome new bank building. Work will start at once.

E. J. Curtin of Decorah, former president of the I. B. A., was in Des Moines last week, called as a witness in the investigation which the legislature has been making of state fair doings. Mr. Curtin has been on the state board of agriculture for many years.

Many school bonds were voted at the annual elections held in the cities and towns of Iowa last week.

South Dakota Notes

J. L. Wingfield, bank examiner, has been at Zell, supervising the reorganization of the First State. The institution has been taken over by W. J. Frad of Mitchell and W. J. Jacobs of Faulkton. Peter Lutz, former cashier, is doing time for defalcation.

Isaac Lincoln, well-known banker at Aberdeen, is going to modernize his big-Brown county ranch by erecting thereon an $8,000 house, complete with electric lights, running water, bath, etc.

The Moreau River State and the Dewey County Bank at Isabel have taken over the assets and liabilities in equal amount of the First State, which went into voluntary liquidation.

MEILICKE CALCULATOR COMPANY

With a pile of notes before him a bank cashier sat at his desk one morning figuring interest. It was apparent from his meditative manner, as he paused now and again with pencil poised in an attitude of abstraction, that his mind was occupied with something else beside the task of the moment. Presently he pushed back the papers and straightened up in his chair, alert with the thrill of a dawning idea. Looking over the room he saw a dozen or more clerks busy figuring over the day's business, and as he watched them a grim smile of determination played upon his lips.

The idea, hitherto vague and indefinite, was taking definite form. Here am I and every other employee in this bank, he reflected, fagging our brains and wasting our time in figuring problems that have been solved for the same answers a hundred times before. Possibly I myself have computed the interest on quantities of notes identical to these I have just been working on. If I only had those answers handy now, he thought, I wouldn't have to fag my brain and waste time doing this mental work over again. Deep thinking had removed the smile from his face. The situation, as he analyzed it, was this—mathematics is an exact science. The answer to a problem is either correct or incorrect. If it is correct and available it can be used whenever an answer to that problem is needed. This fact was evident. A problem once solved should not need to be solved again.

This thought filled his mind all day. When he left the bank that evening he was determined to create some means of having these correct answers when and wherever he needed them. More thinking followed and a deal of hard work. The result was a machine that furnished him the answers to all interest problems after he had calculated the time. But he wasn't satisfied; what he wanted was a machine to do all the work, not part of it. Perseverance and work accomplished the desired result—a machine that would compute interest, calculate time, detect holidays and give maturity date with a simple turn of a wheel.

The device was so practical that the Meilicke Calculator Company was organized with C. A. Meilicke—the cashier—at its head. It is now a $300,000 corporation, Mr. Meilicke still retaining control and the management.

To meet the requirements of the rapidly expanding business, the company recently has moved from its former quarters in the People's Gas Building into a much larger suite of rooms in the same building, and gradually is extending its sales organization to include this country and practically every civilized country in the world.

The Meilicke Calculator truly is a wonderful machine. It is not intended to displace the man with brains but to free him from mental drudgery, and to increase his brain productiveness three or four times over. The old, tedious, brain-racking, energy-consuming, time-wasting, error-producing, money-losing methods of calculating interest belong to the past. They are not of to-day. The Meilicke Calculator in taking precedence over the old methods puts the burden of the work, not on the human brain, but on the machine, where it belongs.

In every interest problem there are two elements: first, time; second, interest. By other methods than the Meilicke Calculator the time must be computed as a separate and preliminary operation before you can begin to compute interest. The new—the machine way—actually eliminates the element of time, but the answer in days is there if desired.

In a problem like the following: Note for $700,000—dated Nov. 11, 1911, due to-day—bearing interest at five per cent, a Meilicke operator, taking a single date—November 11, 1911—as his cue, gives the hand wheel a slight turn to bring up that particular date, and reads his answer. The answer in days is there if desired. The machine computes interest on the 365-day basis with as much ease and simplicity of the machine eliminates the possibility economy of time.

There are fifty-two Saturdays and fifty-two Sundays and about fourteen holidays in the year—a total of 118 days, or about one-third of a year, so that about one-third of the paper made out, regardless of holidays, will fall on a holiday, and interest should be figured from one to three days beyond maturity date. The Meilicke by automatically detecting the holidays insures the collection of interest for the extra days included on their account.

The chances for error in calculating interest by ordinary methods are greater and losses are frequent and inevitable.

Mental calculations are uncertain, unreliable, and require constant proving. The Meilicke Calculator is positive, infallible and saves the time and human energy otherwise employed in checking results. The utter simplicity of the machine eliminates the possibility of intricate mechanism getting out of order and giving erroneous results.

Just as men are fitted for certain lines of work and specialize along those lines, so it has worked out to remarkable advantage in the use of labor-saving devices that will do a certain work well. The Meilicke Calculator is proving no exception to the rule and it is only a question of time when every progressive institution with interest computations to make will recognize the value of its specialized services.

this evening to a consideration of the development of check clearing. We would naturally suppose that since the great benefits of the clearing principle have been so amply demonstrated, there would be no hesitancy to extend it to its full possibilities. Unfortunately, this is not the case. I have but to refer to the fact that anywhere from two to twenty "runners" from each bank are engaged all day in this otherwise modern city, in walking about the city collecting checks, just as they stopped doing in London more than a hundred years ago. You, who think there are no more opportunities for the young man, may think well and earnestly over this fact. Why do sixty runners walk the streets when one will do? Is it any wonder that out-of-town banks want to know why it takes two days to collect a check payable only two miles from the city hall? Is there no banker among us big enough to work out a plan that will do away with this needless work and risk? This is a question of local extension of the use of the clearing house, but the facilities which the clearing house affords for the collection of checks and the settlements of balances are by no means limited by the city boundaries.

Let us refer again to London. They found the clearing house so well adapted to the collection of city checks that they began to investigate its possibilities as to country checks. The result was that a plan was proposed whereby country as well as city checks could be cleared. There was opposition, as usual, on the part of some of the London bank presidents, but the course they took which resulted in the adoption of the plan is very full of food for thought; they proposed that the matter be submitted to their chief clerks. How seldom do we find that spirit present among us? We trust that through the good work being done by the American Institute of Banking the day is coming soon when the educated bank man will be counted worthy of the confidence of his superior officers and will be called in consultation in such matters.

Since 1854, the London Clearing House has been collecting country checks. A plan for the same purpose, but dissimilar in method, was introduced in Boston in 1899 where you will recall they had a like system for collecting bank notes in 1824. It has been eminently successful. It was next put into practice in Kansas City, then in Atlanta, Ga., Augusta, and more recently in Nashville, Tenn. A plan almost identical with that used in England was introduced even earlier in this country than 1899. Sedalia, Mo., began to collect country checks in 1895. In our own state we have the same system employed in York, Lancaster, Reading, and, I think, Beaver Falls.

A discussion of this important extension of the clearing house belongs perhaps to the subject of transits. I shall not, therefore, present all the arguments that usually are employed; in fact, there are no arguments necessary. It is an actual, proven fact and no longer a theory for debate. Anyone who states that the country department of the clearing house is not the best method of collecting checks for all concerned, makes the statement that we ought to go back to the days when every bank in Philadelphia kept an account with every other bank and paid interest on the balances.

PUBLIC SERVICE COMMISSIONER MAKES PUBLIC CONFESSION

dends for the current year. Out of 364 electric railroads, light, heat and power, and gas corporations, 237 paid no dividends. In 1909 it was 237 out of 310, so that conditions are improving some; but the figures are significant. They are contradictory to the general impression that dividends are the foundation upon which all public service corporations are erected, and they have a sobering effect upon an official who starts in with the idea of building Rome—or even Schenectady—in a day.

The consideration of them has not swayed the mind of the commission where conditions have become intolerable or even irritating; but at times they have prevented the attainment of ends which otherwise might have been ordered.

I know that these views are not wholly popular, and I know that in certain quarters the idea prevails that a public service commissioner should be pictured with a knot of thongs to lash the sides of all the hated corporations, irrespective of their merits or deserts. In my view that savors too much of "Donnybrook Fair." I like the expression of President Taft, who quietly reminded his hearers on one occasion, as I recollect it, that the phrase "all the people" means just what it says, and that "all the people" included also the corporations, which are made up of people just as much as a municipality is.

Even-handed Justice

The public service commission is organized to hand out justice as near as it can determine it, both to shippers and to carriers, to consumers and to producers, and if it has attained some success in its work of the last five years, it has done so by a strict adherence to that view, and not by spectacular brandishings of the "big stick." It has accomplished more good by getting both parties before it, pointing out the strength or weakness of opposing views, and then appealing to that sense of fair play which is inherent in every man, than it ever has by a display of the tremendous powers which the law undoubtedly confers upon it.

RAILROAD INTERESTED IN AGRICULTURE AND GOOD ROADS

J. B. Lamson, agriculturist in the real estate and industrial departments of the C. B. & Q. Ry., Chicago, is very much interested in the county organization movement which has been promoted by the Illinois Bankers Association's committees on agriculture and vocational education and good roads. Mr. Lamson has granted some aid to counties along the line of the Burlington and is working industriously to arouse interest of the right kind in this work among the farmers. The best results are expected from such counties as are able and willing to finance this movement themselves.

For Briarcliff

The reservation list on the "Briarcliff Special" is jumping along in fine style. The attendance will be larger than ever before. The ladies are showing their appreciation of the fine train, the finest of all resort hotels—Briarcliff Lodge—and of the chance to run down to New York at the close of the sessions to see a couple of good shows and to visit the "great white way" at its best. Here is a sample car right out of the middle of the train:

F. A. Crandall and wife, Chicago.
E. E. Crabtree and wife, Jacksonville, Ill.
Nelson H. Greene and wife, Moline, Ill.
H. M. Carpenter and wife, Monticello, Ia.
E. J. Curtin and wife, Decorah, Ia.
F. O. Watts and wife, St. Louis, Mo.
W. H. Bucholz and wife, Omaha, Neb.
J. F. Farrell and wife, Chicago.
R. C. Stephenson and wife, South Benid, Ind.
F. A. Stephenson and wife, South Bend, Ind.

A second car of "doubles" filled up on Thursday as follows:

George Rogers and daughter, Little Rock.
E. R. Fancher and wife, Cleveland.
C. H. McNider and wife, Mason City, Ia.
E. L. Johnson and wife, Waterloo, Ia.
D. H. McKey and wife, Des Moines, Ia.
Arthur Reynolds and wife, Des Moines, Ia.
H. P. Beckwith and wife, Fargo, N. D.
W. H. Toepel, wife and daughter, Detroit.

Then there's a whole raft of singles headed by Luther Drake and George Woodruff.

By the time this can be printed there will be other cars filled and the "singles" will be used as fillers. The ladies will have first call in every arrangement the bankers have the say in. There will be two diners and every convenience known to the Twentieth Century.

REPORTS PROSPERITY IN CALIFORNIA

W. T. Fenton, vice-president of the National Bank of the Republic, returned this week from California, where he spent the greater part of the winter. Mr. Fenton said business conditions are on a sound basis and a general feeling of optimism is prevalent. Benefits arising from operation of the Panama Canal are being looked forward to by the people of the state. Although the damage done to the orange groves the fore part of the year was a great calamity it has not had the detrimental effect which one ordinarily would expect, as the people of California are not the kind to be depressed easily.

There is a great deal of building being done in San Francisco. A year ago when Mr. Fenton visited California he felt that the city was overbuilt but has changed his opinion in the interim.

"The land boomers in the state have raised the prices of real estate so high that to an eastern man they seem all out of proportion," said Mr. Fenton. "However, the state is as big as France. It has about 2,500,000 people and France has 40,000,000. There is plenty of room, therefore, for growth and development."

Northwest State of Chicago has declared a quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent, payable April 1st to stockholders of record March 25th.

NEW BUILDING OF THE
GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY OF NEWYORK
140 BROADWAY, NEW YORK CITY.

FORGAN'S VIEWS OF THE GENERAL SITUATION

David R. Forgan, president National City Bank, Chicago, said he believes the present to be an advantageous time to buy high-grade bonds; that final adjustment of Balkan war complications will be of great importance to American markets; that the amount of money hoarded abroad during Balkan war is not less than $500,000,000; that Europe probably holds to-day smallest amount of American securities it has held at this season in any year since Boer war; that European banks will be able to finance, without difficulty, large loans required to repair war's waste and provide for development.

Stockholders of the Swedish-American State of Chicago, which will open for business about May 15th, have voted to change the name of the institution to the Capital State Savings Bank. The new bank will have a capital of $200,000.

Charles Schuck has been chosen a director in the First National of Springfield to succeed his father, the late John Henry Schuck.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

THE publishers of "Keeping Up With Lizzie" have just received a letter from a bank in a Western city, asking for the price on one hundred copies of this novel by Irving Bacheller. Perhaps the bank authorities, realizing that the more their depositors are "Keeping Up With Lizzie," the smaller their deposits will be, intend to present to each one of them a copy of the book. "Charge It," Mr. Bacheller's latest story, might be put to the same use in a campaign against latter-day extravagance.

SECRETARY HARTMAN of Oregon sends word that his convention will be held at Roseburg, June 16th and 17th. Roseburg is the rose capital and there will be a rose festival this year, June 9th and 10th.

THE Roseburg bankers already have thought out a very attractive program; and as this is the time of the year when those famous Douglas county strawberries, which we heard about last year, are in their prime, and as an additional new hotel is now practically completed—assuring ample hotel accommodations—it would appear that the annual meeting this year should be the best ever," writes the secretary.

OREGON expects to organize a group system this year to help spread the association benefits more effectively.

ILLINOIS has a good chance to improve her power on the Big Council. Secretary Farnsworth replies that "Illinois has 859 A. B. A." members and that she has "only 41 to go to get another member."

THAT ought to be easy and will place this state in the A class with New York and one notch ahead of Pennsylvania with which she ranks now in the second division.

IT would be fine if this state could elect two instead of one at the forthcoming convention in Chicago. A little concerted effort will turn the trick.

A NUMBER of the deputy state examiners under former Examiner Oliver Knudson, of North Dakota, have located themselves in good berths. L. J. Bleeker goes to the Citizens Bank of Lisbon, E. A. Schulenberg goes to the Farmers and Merchants of Mandan and F. L. Whitney goes to the First National of Lemmon, South Dakota, all as cashiers.

B. I. KEATING is the only one of the old examiners to stay with the department, he having charge of the Fargo district which is his home, and he also will do special work for the department.

AT the annual meeting of the Scandinavian American Bank of Minot, Eric R. Ramstad, E. Ellison, M. R. Porter, H. P. Beckwith, and George H. Hollister were elected directors for the ensuing year.

THE officers are: President, Mr. Ramstad, vice-president, Mr. Beckwith, cashier, Mr. Porter, assistant cashiers, E. Quam, and C. Englestad. The bank closed a very successful year. Resources now are close on to $300,000.

THE FIRST NATIONAL of Fargo is making some very extensive improvements in its banking room. An additional room to the east has been obtained and a new vault is being placed. A new system of savings deposit boxes will be installed in the basement vault which will be enlarged and well lighted. New cages will be put in on the first floor and, in fact, a general rearrangement of the interior of the bank will take place which will add much to its attractiveness and convenience for handling its large and increasing business.

THE MERCHANTS NATIONAL of Fargo also is planning considerable improvement. A new vault will be placed in an adjoining room and this will give them larger quarters and place for new cages and change of arrangement. The Merchants now has total assets of $1,500,000 and is one of the fast growing institutions of the state.

THE SECURITY BANK of Sheyenne, North Dakota, opened for business March 20th. Frank White (ex-governor) is president, E. C. Cooper of Fargo is vice-president, and J. E. Johnson of Sheyenne is cashier.

SECRETARY S. B. RANKIN says Ohio will "convention" in Cleveland this year, September 11th, 12th and 13th. Big program and large attendance expected.

CHAIRMAN J. W. WHEELER of the Minnesota committee is sending out a printed report of the live stock conference called by E. W. Decker.

SOME of the gentlemen present were experts of the highest order, and all were unanimous in the opinion that in certain sections more live stock not only was desirable, but absolutely essential, to insure the highest agricultural development.

THE fact was shown that the corn area of Minnesota has been very largely increased in recent years, and the matter of increased live stock on the farms is very closely connected with the corn area.

PRESIDENT EDMUND J. JAMES of the University of Illinois has invited Chicago bankers and others interested to go over to the West Side and view the new college of medicine.

FORMERLY the buildings were the College of Physicians and Surgeons and the West Side High School, now remodeled and equipped for service. Dr. James will answer any questions you may ask.

ROBT. I. WOODSIDE, president of the Farmers and Merchants Bank of Greenville, S. C., chairman of the committee on agricultural development and education of the South Carolina Bankers Association, has been appointed a member of the American Commission under the auspices of the Southern Commercial Congress which will visit Europe for the purpose of investigating the co-operative banking systems, rural co-operation, marketing societies, universities and colleges, legislation and laws, government departments, central banks, methods of farming, etc.

AMONG the countries to be visited are Italy, Hungary, Russia, Balkan States, Austria, Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Switzerland, Belgium, Holland, France, England and Ireland.

THE commission, which will sail April 26th, will have official power and influence given by authority of congress, the president of the United States, the governors of the various states and the ambassadors of the several countries visited. There will be two or more delegates selected from each state in the Union,

THE South Carolina Association has sent out a complete folder to all farmers on "Crop Rotation." How the gospel has spread!

WORD comes from Minneapolis that the "First National and the Soo line jointly are to erect a twenty story office building on site of bank. Will own and occupy jointly and lease extra space. Two story building to be erected adjoining bank building for Minneapolis Trust Company. Bank to have temporary quarters in adjoining New York Life Building which it owns. Bank to increase capital to two and one-half million and to exchange five hundred thousand stock with stockholders of trust company, one of bank stock to two of trust stock. Trust company stock to be held by trustees for benefit of all bank stockholders."

THIS appears to go the First of St. Paul one better. Really St. Paul could not be permitted, etc. Even the Northwestern National will be compelled to do something to keep in line. New buildings don't count in the Northwestern Metropolis, they must also be Woolworth's.

THE present First National building was built only six years ago and cost a quarter of a million.

R. U. LANSING is the new vice-president among the bond department heads in Chicago banks. He has had phenomenal success at the National City Bank and was fully eligible to the ranks of the aristocratic v. p's.

A BUDDING young banker from the new business department of one of Chicago's largest banks was headed for a string of southern group meetings one day last week, and was nearing a state metropolis.

HIS seatmate was a well fed, well dressed, unhappy person. Every now and then the seatmate heaved a sigh. The junior banker sympathized. He thought he'd start a cheery conversation. "How's business through the South?" he asked.

"MISTEH," said the sad man, passionately, "it's rotten. Honest, I don't know what to do. This las' yeah was the ve'y worst of my enti'e business career."

THE Chicago man told an optimistic tale of prosperity following a period of depression. It was lost.

"OUAH people are ve'y conservative," said the sad man. "They ratheh resent vigorous advertising. Yes, seh." "Well, said the hustler for accounts, "why don't you get a corps of lively solicitors? Let 'em go to it. Shake up the dead bones."

THE sad man said that didn't appeal to him, either. He was afraid cagerness on his part might be resented. "What kind of a business are you running, anyhow?" asked our traveler. "I'm a national banker, seh," said the sad man.

MONEY in Chicago, where they do advertise, was in strong demand at 6 per cent at the same dating.

CENTRAL TRUST, Chicago, is sending out, in neat leather binding, copies of small pocket bank directories by states. Nothing could be more convenient. W. G. Edens was brevetted a "colonel" by the Tribune the other morning, and if he forgets, you just use his new title on a postal card.

GARRARD COMLY was vice-president of the Eliot National, Boston, when his boom for treasurer of the A. B. A. took wings. He now is a New York banker, with the Citizens Central, and his friends think his chances are improved.

PRECEDENT in the A. B. A. is against candidates being elected from among the entertaining bankers. Several costly errors were thus committed in the past.

MR. COMLY doesn't have a free field, for A. D. Graham of Baltimore has been basking in the sun, "waiting," so his backers say, "for J. Fletcher Farrell to fling him the toga."

GRAHAM is one of those likable fellows that grow rapidly in a contest. Comly was an Indiana man, earlier in his career, and is no green hand at association tactics.

HARRIMAN NATIONAL, New York, is growing to beat the band. Stock sells at $315. Has gone up in short time from four to fourteen millions. Keeps open from 8 A. M. to 8 P. M.

IT has a magnificent home at 44th and 5th Avenue, in the retail and wholesale district. Lots of jewelers and diamond merchants, also art stores, near by.

THE Harriman has a past-master in charge of its vast vault system. He has fitted up rooms especially adapted for diamond brokers, equipped with the special furniture, scales and small tools required.

FOR the art dealers there are rooms for showing pictures to advantage with top lights, adjustable curtains and draperies. These things were master strokes in a business way and may help to good ideas in other lines for other banks.

THE legislature at Albany still is after the private banker. The latest bill requires private bankers to deposit $10,000 with the State comptroller in all cases, and to give a bond in amount to be fixed by the comptroller at not more than $100,000 nor less than $10,000.

THE bill also provides that the comptroller shall publish annually a list of such bonds and deposits, regulating the discharge and renewal of the bonds.

PROVISION also is made for the taking over by the state comptroller for examination of the affairs of delinquent bankers and those failing to comply with the provisions of the banking law.

LICHTENSTERN BROTHERS, a firm of foreign bankers conducting a private bank in Wilkes-Barre, Pa., have been arrested at the instance of the state banking commissioner, charged with violations of the state banking laws.

An Example of Increasing Business in "A.B.A." Cheques

A large Western Bank writes: "We have advertised Travelers' Cheques in our office by putting up placards, by putting on our desks postal cards, by sending out American Bankers folders, by advertising in programs, and by calling our customers' attention to the convenience of these cheques.

In 1910 we sold $27,890
In 1911 $61,970
In 1912 $85,800

and our January sales (1913) were double those of January, 1912."

Champaign County Bankers at a Feast

Champaign, March 27th.—The second annual banquet and good fellowship meeting of the Champaign County Federation of the Illinois Bankers Association was held last Thursday evening in the private dining room of the Beardsley hotel, with an attendance of about seventy-five bankers from this and adjoining counties.

The principal speaker of the evening was Frederick W. Thompson, manager of the real estate and loan department of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company of Chicago.

Mr. Thompson, who has made a most exhaustive study of the question of farm mortgages in this and European countries for the past twenty years, discussed the general topic of "Farm Mortgages." He compared the system used in European countries, especially Germany and France, with the methods employed in the United States. In Europe farm mortgages are made an easy and quick asset for banks especially organized for such purposes, and are made for the farmers at a lower rate than in this country. In Europe there are many land credit banks whose business it is to make farm mortgages and Mr. Thompson advised that such banks, suited of course to American conditions, be organized in the United States. He advised also that the organization of these companies be stable and not hastily done, as the question of making farm mortgages liquid and mobile as well as cheap is a large and difficult matter and must be cautiously managed.

Chairman J. D. Morse of Gifford, who presided in an able manner, read a telegram from William A. Heath, president of the Live Stock Exchange National of Chicago, formerly cashier of the Champaign National, regretting his inability to be present. Mr. Morse called upon a number of bankers from Champaign and other counties for brief remarks, among these being William Dighton of Monticello and W. T. McConnell of DeLand, representing the Piatt County Bankers Association; G. R. Helm of Tuscola, A. M. Kenney of Broadlands, John R. Trevett of Champaign, W. H. Scott of Bondville, W. T. Osborne of Mattoon, W. A. Cooley, of Broadlands, and others. P. L. McPheeters, cashier of the Champaign National, gave his report as secretary and treasurer.

Officers were chosen as follows: W. P. Spalding, cashier of Trevett-Mattis Banking Company of Champaign, chairman; W. E. Oliver, assistant cashier Farmers Exchange bank of Fisher, vice-chairman, and John H. Thornburn, cashier of the Urbana Banking Company, secretary and treasurer, and U. G. Swearingen of St. Joseph and A. B. Campbell of Tolono as fourth and fifth members of the executive committee to act with the above three officers.

E. R. Gurney, Fremont, Neb., is so busy with the completion of his new bank building that he doubts his chances of getting to the Briarcliff meeting. Luther Drake of Omaha is deeply engrossed in that city's reconstruction plans and may not be able to go.

George Woodruff Explains His New Farm Loan Plan

The Woodruff Trust Company says the Illinois farmer likes the idea and the bonds find ready sale. An advertising program in preparation which will make state-wide appeal. A very instructive interview

Joliet, March 26th.—Frequent inquiries as to how the new farm financing Woodruff Trust Company is getting along led to a special trip to this thriving city. The purpose was to get first-handed from George Woodruff the new story of European amortization as adapted to American requirements and conditions. Mr. Woodruff visited the chief countries—Germany, France and Belgium—makng a specialty of financing the farmer. He dug up first-handed the information only hinted at by most investigators.

He went over "on business"—not part pleasure, part glory and part uplift—and the result showed in his talk at Detroit last year, and at Boston more recently. When asked about his new farmers' bank, he replied: "We are just commencing our advertising campaign and are beginning to sell the bonds to investors. You understand of course that we obtain the money to loan to the farmers by selling the bonds of the company. Our experience so far with the farmers has been very good indeed and in various sections of the state where we have offered amortization mortgages they have been received enthusiastically." He then agreed to "answer any questions THE CHICAGO BANKER may suggest" with the following, resulting interview:

What are the Benefits that the Woodruff Trust Company Offers to the Farmer?

"The Woodruff Trust Company offers the farmer amortization loans. An amortization loan is illustrated by the following table:

"By paying $70 per year, the farmer's debt of $1,000 is entirely canceled at the end of thirty years. The chief advantage to the farmer lies in the fact that he never is called upon to make a large payment in order to clear the farm of debt and that he never is compelled to renew the loan, thereby saving all renewal commissions, expense of bringing down his abstract and legal fees for abstract examination at each renewal period. Furthermore, the farmer and his family are forever relieved of any anxiety lest they fail to meet the mortgage when due and consequently lose the farm. Under this plan, it practically is impossible for an honest, industrious farmer to lose his farm. As loans are not made for more than 50 per cent of the valuation, the amount of the semi-annual payment is equal to only 1¾ per cent of the value of the land, and consequently the farmer always should be able to meet the payments out of the proceeds of the land itself. This is the feature of the plan that has enabled poor, debt-ridden farmers in Europe to work out their own salvation and become prosperous. On any interest paying date, the farmer is allowed to make partial payments or pay off the entire amount of the debt.

How Will Mortgage Banks Affect Interest Rates?

"The advantage of mortgage banks to farmers is not so much in the interest rate as in the items above set forth. It will be noted in the above amortization table that the rate of interest is 5 per cent and that an additional allowance amounting to a little more than ½ per cent is provided for the expenses and profit of the company. In sections where the farmer already enjoys a rate of interest around 5 per cent, he is getting just as good a rate as practically any other industry in the country and he cannot expect that the mere establishment of mortgage banks will cut this rate. In those sections of the country where the farmer is paying as high as 8 per cent, it is possible for mortgage banks to cut into the rate. Under the old plan of operation a farmer in a high rate territory usually is compelled to sell his mortgage in that territory and as the farmer in that territory usually does not pay a higher rate of interest than other lines of business in the same territory, there is not much chance for a reduction in rate. However, the organization of a mortgage bank makes it possible to sell the bonds in lower rate territories and if a western mortgage bank can sell its bonds in a 5 or 5½ per cent eastern investment territory, it can afford to loan money to the farmers in its own high rate territory at a concession in rate.

"The mere establishment of mortgage banks will not tend materially to cut rates in sections where the rates already are low but the operation of these banks over a term of years doubtless will have some such effect for the mortgages all will contain soil conservation clauses which will make the farmer's land more valuable and consequently make the risk more desirable, and furthermore after the mortgage banks are well known they will be able to command a better rate for their bonds and consequently can make some concession to the farmer, and then after they have been operating for a long enough period to acquire a large volume of business, they will be able to do business on a somewhat closer margin of profit than at the start and this also should help to reduce the rate somewhat. In Europe the farmer looks upon the other advantages of an amortization loan as paramount to the concession in rate because as I have several times stated in my talks on the subject of mortgage banks the rates in Europe are not actually as low as has been represented. In France where the Credit Foncier has been in business for over half a century and has amassed assets of around $1,000,000,000 and where the farm values are stable and the soil properly conserved and the market for investments makes possible a low rate, the farmer pays to-day 4.3 per cent in interest. Compared to this an American farmer who can borrow money at 5 per cent surely is getting a very favorable interest rate.

How Does the Mortgage Bank Make Profits?

"The profits of a mortgage bank depend upon low expenses and a large volume of business. It is possible to run a properly organized mortgage bank at a very small cost, its chief expense being in connection with the sale of its bonds. This expense is of course large at the start and later on becomes constantly less. The profits of the business come from the amount which the farmer pays each six months toward the expenses and profits of the company and which is illustrated in the above amortization table. In Europe, mortgage banks having a large volume of business operate on a margin of three-tenths of 1 per cent on their gross business but in this country a mortgage bank should receive a margin of one-half of 1 per cent to 1 per cent in order to make a fair profit showing. This is a business that in a low rate section of the country must be conducted on a small margin of profit and consequently extravagant, lavishly inclined individuals should keep strictly out of it. It is a business built strictly upon the principle of efficiency all the way from its office methods down to the cultivation of the grain on the farms against which it holds mortgages.

What is the Difference Between the Woodruff Trust Company and Other Similar Companies that have been Operated in the United States?

"Many other companies have operated in the United States on lines similar to the great mortgage banks of Europe but the Woodruff Trust Company is the first company that I know of to adopt all of the principles developed by these great foreign banks. Many companies have adopted the principle of restrictions around the bonds similar to European usage but have not at the same time loaned the money on the amortization form of mortgage. On the other hand, some companies have made amortization loans but have not issued their bonds subject to the usual European restrictions. The Woodruff Trust Company is the first mortgage bank that I know of, being under the supervision and examination of an American state, that has bound itself to loan exclusively within its own state, to lend exclusively on amortization mortgages, to confine itself exclusively to mortgages on farms and homes and that also has bound itself in its trust agreement to issue its bonds only in accordance with the restrictions that are provided for under the French and German mortgage bank acts." (Copies of these restrictions will be sent to anyone interested.)

IMPORTANT BANK CHANGES IN PITTSBURGH

Pittsburgh, March 25th.—On Monday next Alexander Dunbar will begin as cashier of the old Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., a position de luxe in the banking world. He has been cashier of the Exchange National, which position he resigned, and will be succeeded by J. P. McKelvey, formerly first assistant at the Exchange.

Mr. Dunbar goes to the Bank of Pittsburgh to take the place of W. F. Bickel, who with J. M. Russell, first assistant cashier of that institution, has been elected vice-president. George F. Wright, auditor, will become an assistant cashier and Mr. Wright's place will be filled by Frank D. Young. This will complete the organization of the Bank of Pittsburgh, with Harrison Nesbit as president, Wilson A. Shaw, vice-president and chairman of the board of directors, James J. Donnell and J. D. Ayres, vice-presidents, and E. M. Siebert, first assistant to Mr. Dunbar.

Mr. Dunbar is one of the most popular of the younger generation of bankers. Although quite young in years he has achieved an enviable reputation as a shrewd financier. His progress since entering the banking business has been little short of remarkable. He began his career in the National Exchange Bank of Steubenville in 1893, remaining there until December, 1901, when he came to Pittsburgh. He was one of the organizers of the Moreland Trust Company of this city. This institution was later merged with the Guarantee Title and Trust Company, of which Mr. Dunbar became secretary and treasurer. June 25, 1909, he accepted the position of cashier of the Exchange National and has since remained there.

In accepting the resignation of Mr. Dunbar the board of directors of the Exchange National took occasion to pass a resolution complimenting him for his accomplishments in that institution, and expressing deep regret at his leaving.

CALL RATES MARKED UP

Call rates were marked up to 6 per cent this week by some of the local banks, an advance of ½ per cent. Loans that had been running at 5 per cent were raised to 5½. The demand for money is very strong. Very few objections to paying the 6 per cent rate were encountered. It is said that some of the larger commercial banks are almost down to their reserve limit and funds available for loaning purposes are very scarce.

As a result of the tight money which prevails the necessity of some contraction in business has suggested itself, and it is believed that a continuance of the present volume of business till next fall with money as tight as it is now will create a precarious situation at that time.

The situation is a strong factor to be taken into consideration and a settlement of the difficulties on the other side of the Atlantic undoubtedly would have a tendency greatly to relieve the strain here. There is a possibility that some relaxation will result after April 1st.

CHICAGO MEN TO DEBATE WITH PITTSBURGH

April 26th, a team representing Chicago chapter, A. I. B., will debate with representatives of Pittsburgh chapter in that city on the following question: "Resolved that National Banks Should be Given the Powers of Trust Companies," the Chicago boys taking the negative. The local team will consist of A. Floreen, Central Trust, H. C. Roer, Fort Dearborn, and John W. Gorby, Peoples Trust and Savings.

LEAVES FOR EUROPE

Byron L. Smith, president of the Northern Trust of Chicago, left this week for a two months' stay in Europe. Before leaving, Mr. Smith said that business was on a sound basis and that he would not be surprised to see a good demand for money throughout the entire year.

THE NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL BANK
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

THE FOUNDERS of this bank, in 1872, looked far afield and called the new institution The Northwestern. ¶ This wide vision has been steadfastly maintained and the resulting public responsibilities have been fully met. ¶ That its responsibilities to stockholders have been abundantly discharged is shown by the fact that its dividends have averaged over eight per cent since its organization. Its deposits have nearly quadrupled in ten years.

NATIONAL CITY CHANGES

R. U. Lansing, recently elected vice-president of the National City Bank of Chicago, has been identified with the banking business for many years. His business career started with the Union National Bank of Chicago, where he served as clerk and teller. About fourteen years ago he left that institution to become identified with the investment branch of the banking business and spent about nine years in the employ of an investment banking house and one of the large Chicago trust companies, where he gained a thorough knowledge of the fundamentals of the bond business. In February, 1908 he entered the organization of the National City, then only one year old, to become the manager of the bond department. Mr. Lansing organized the department and has built up its business until it occupies a prominent place in the investment circles of Chicago. As vice-president, he will remain in charge of the bond department.

R. U. LANSING

Walker G. McLaury, elected cashier of the National City to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of L. H. Grimme, is a graduate of the University of Chicago. Later he did post-graduate work in electrical engineering at Cornell and then returned to Chicago, associating himself with the Western Electric Company. He had experience in many departments of the corporation, finally obtaining the position of credit man in charge of sales in Cook county, and later was made general cashier, a position that chiefly was concerned with the elaborate branch house organization of that corporation. He severed his connections to take charge of the credit department of The National City Bank of Chicago, and subsequently was elected one of its assistant cashiers.

COOK COUNTY GOOD ROADS MEN MEET

An enthusiastic conference of Cook county good roads enthusiasts was held last Saturday evening at the Sherman House under the auspices of the good roads committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce. Cook county members of the legislature, members of the county board, Speaker McKinley and other public officials were among those in attendance.

August Geweke, who, in addition to being president of the Cook County Farmers and Truck Gardeners Association, also is president of the recently organized Morton Grove Trust and Savings, made quite a hit. He said the present high cost of living is due in a great measure to our wretched roads and strongly advocated immediate improvement. Mrs. Fred W. Blocki, head of the conservation committee of the Illinois Federation of Womens Clubs, pleaded for better roads on behalf of the women of the state; President Edwin R. Wright of the State Federation of Labor advocated the use of convict labor in road building; E. L. Lobdell, president of the Sheridan Road Improvement Association, told of the aims of that body to perfect an interstate roadway to Milwaukee. Other speakers were E. D. Landwehr, president of the Illinois Rural Letter Carriers Association, who declared the efficiency of mail delivery in the rural districts would be increased 50 per cent by good roads, R. J. Finnegan, secretary of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association, who said much money was being wasted under the present system of road building in Illinois, and John D. Shoop, first assistant superintendent of schools, who pleaded for better roads for the benefit of the boys and girls.

W. G. Edens, chairman of the commerce committee, acted as toastmaster.

GOVERNMENT REVENUES TO BE DEPOSITED IN NATIONAL BANKS

Assistant Secretary Williams of the treasury department, has issued instructions to deposit all government revenues in national bank depositories. Heretofore government funds were deposited principally in subtreasuries, but as depository banks now are construed to be in fact a part of the treasury system, the practice has been broadened. Government funds also are construed to mean certified checks in payment of customs and internal revenue taxes.

STARTING THRIFT CAMPAIGN IN CHICAGO

will be held in the German room of the Grand Pacific hotel, Friday, April 4, 1913, where dinner at $1.50 per plate will be served at 6:00 o'clock. All incorporated Chicago banks are cordially invited to send one or more representatives to this meeting, and are urged to mail an acceptance not later than Monday, March 31st.

Mr. McWilliam will be accompanied by J. J. Reynolds, of Brooklyn, who will explain in detail the school savings bank which is in operation in the school of which he is principal, and which is referred to (showing the forms used) on pages pages 575-577 of the current number of the Journal of the A. B. A.

It earnestly is hoped that the attendance at this meeting will be so large that it will reflect not only a keen interest in this subject, but also appreciation of the courtesy these gentlemen are showing Chicago by coming all the way from New York City.

Joseph R. Noel, president of the Northwest State, is chairman of the "Thrift" forces of the A. B. A. in Illinois.

William Jennings Bryan at His Very Best

The new Secretary of State tells the Union League Club banqueters his interpretation of the "Signs of the Times." Clever orator and statesman sets a new high mark in social diplomacy

Secretary of State William Jennings Bryan was the orator at the annual banquet of the great Union League Club, Chicago, this week. Twenty years ago the club and the secretary held widely different views on almost every essential. Tuesday evening's cordial relationship was not the least favoring "sign of the times." The attendance was the full capacity of the dining room, one hundred feet square. The enthusiasm was beyond all precedent.

Judge W. H. McSurely, the new president, introduced the speaker and added a new masterpiece to the club literature equal in style and manner to that delivered by the then president, Judge Charles S. Cutting, when introducing ex-President Grover Cleveland on a similar occasion. Said President McSurely:

"I am about to introduce to you the best introduced man in America. Of course, I am not referring to this particular occasion, but he is the best introduced man in America because he introduced himself to every state, county and township, to every hamlet, village and plain, mountainside, valley, river, cross-roads—"

Colonel Bryan: "Swamp."

"And swamp," continued Judge McSurely. "Sometimes he has taken to the woods also. I believe within the last twelve months our distinguished guest took it upon himself to introduce to the people of America a new president, and when he undertook to do that he succeeded.

"And, gentlemen, I speak only what you all know, that in introducing the man that now sits in the White House, he introduced one of the most winning, attractive and scholarly personalities that has ever sat in that high and honored position. Our honored guest has not only introduced men, but perhaps of more importance, he has introduced ideas.

"I have the honor to introduce the distinguished secretary of state, William Jennings Bryan."

Mr. Bryan Speaks

"Mr. President and gentlemen of the club," said Mr. Bryan, "I appreciate both the invitation and the persistence of those who extended the invitation. I could not come at the time I first was invited, but I am glad circumstances were such that I could be here to-night.

"I appreciate the kind words that have been spoken in presenting me, but I am not willing to admit as much credit as has been given to me. When I am introduced as one who introduced a president to this country I think I owe it to history to say that the republican party by dividing exerted more influence than I did. I did what I could to obtain a change of the administration, but I confess myself of very little importance compared with the other.

Praise For President

"In so far as I have had any part in the election of a democratic president, I am very proud of that part, and I am pleased with the manner in which that president has commenced his administration. I can say that with one exception his cabinet is made up of splendid men.

"In making that one exception I do it without any feeling that I am reflecting upon the cabinet, because even the sacred gold dollar has 10 per cent of alloy—why should they expect a cabinet to be pure gold?

"Sometimes I have had oversanguine friends express regret that I did not reach the presidency. I have had them say that they were sorry that after being connected with these reforms I should not have been given the highest place in the nation. But I have had an answer ready for them. I have told them that they need not weep for me; that I am not an object of sympathy; that two or three hundred years ago they hung men like me. Now they just defeat them for office.

"And looking back over the past, I am not prepared to say that my defeats were not good for the country. Not that I want to take back anything I have said, but the people were not ready then for the reforms that now are accomplished, and had I been elected at any of the numerous times I gave the people the opportunity to elect me I would have had a very difficult task.

"I would have had people who were sincerely afraid of the things I stood for. Especially would that have been true in '96. Had I been elected in '96 I could not have hoped to have had both the senate and the house with me, and if I had been elected in 1900, I hardly could have hoped to have had the senate and house with me, and even if I had been elected in 1908, many people who to-day are heartily in favor of reforms the people are obtaining were then timid and timorous about these questions.

Now Ripe for Reform

"To-day we have the people ripe for reform, and I am not sure that our president may not be able to do what I might not have been able to do had I been elected instead of him. But it is not a question that we need discuss and one that does not concern me, for I have been so much more interested in obtaining the reforms for which we have been fighting than I have been in the name of the man who held the office that I am happy in the thought that this government, through these reforms, will be made so good that a citizen will not miss a little thing like the president.

"Of this I am sure: We could not have in the White House a man more consecrated to the people's cause than the one now our chief executive. And I have been at his side long enough to feel sure that if I had been allowed to select I could not have selected a man with whom I could work with more real enjoyment, with more sympathy or more hearty co-operation.

"In taking up my subject to-night, 'The Signs of the Times,' I thought I might bring to your attention the general progress of the world, and not only point out the things that have been accomplished, but the direction in which the people are going. And I feel that if I do attempt to speak of the future, I will have more willing hearers now than I had some two decades ago, for the things accomplished have enabled us to measure the tendencies of the times.

Gives Definition of Reform

"This subject has been selected and the line of thought adopted for a double purpose. It is to encourage those who have been laboring in behalf of reforms, and to excite to activity those who have not been active.

"When I say reforms, let no one think I have any thought of confining my remarks to political reforms. Some people are prejudiced against the word 'reform.' I would define reform as change for the better; and I would define a reformer as one who is trying to improve conditions. When I thus define the terms reform and reformer, I think I can assume you are all reformers.

"The reformer has many difficulties to encounter, but I shall mention only two. The first is the difference in the degree of enthusiasm. Reformers vary all the way from just above freezing up to boiling point.

Raising the Temperature

"If a reformer is just above freezing, you have to handle him tenderly, for a little drop in the temperature and he is out of the class. But when he is at boiling point he is at work, and one of the chief objects in discussing reform is to raise the temperature. It is much easier to increase the zeal of one who favors reform than it is to convert to a reform one who is really against it.

"But the second difficulty is even greater. It is the difficulty in getting reformers to act together. Because a reformer is honest, he is apt to be obstinate. No one who ever has tried to get reformers together and keep them together will fail to appreciate a story I heard in an illustration given by a Kansas congressman some twenty years ago.

"He said that upon the plains of Brazil there were some little burros that ran wild, and when they were attacked by ferocious animals they would put their heads together and their heels out in a circle and all kick the enemy. He said unfortunate reformers did not always act with that intelligence; that sometimes in the presence of danger they would put their heads to the enemy and kick each other. It is a very apt illustration.

Points to Reform Obstinacy

"I have known honest men who were so interested in some one reform that they would help to bring about no other reform. And I have known some who, when they thought they had found a panacea and others would not accept it, not only refused to participate in what they called minor reforms, but even would desire that conditions might get worse and worse; even help them to get worse in the hope that the people would at last in desperation be driven to accept something they now rejected.

"I am not willing to indorse this philosophy. I am not willing to help make any condition worse, no matter how sure I feel that out of that worse condition good finally may come.

Reformers Need Pushing

"I believe it is the part of wisdom for those to join together who believe that a proposed thing is good. Join together and get it to-day, and commence to-morrow to obtain the next best thing in sight.

"I believe that God has so made this world that no good thing obtained to-day will prevent the securing of some other good thing to-morrow.

"I am not here to argue in favor of any particular reform. I am here to encourage reformers and to arouse those who have not been interested in reforms—and reformers need encouragement.

"And now I am ready to advance to the third proposition—namely, that the progress of the world in government is as remarkable as the world's progress in intelligence and morals.

Direct Vote for Senators

"Before I stop I want to speak of the growth of popular government in my own country. It will be my official duty within a very short time to announce to the country the adoption of an amendment to the constitution which will change the method of election and provide for the election of United States senators by direct vote of the people. I believe thirty-three states already have ratified it, and there is no doubt of the remaining three. We do not know just what states they will be, but the sentiment is so overwhelming that no one can doubt that within a short time this change will be made.

"In fact, you people of Illinois will have the proud distinction of having had the last contested senatorial election that any legislative body ever will have a chance to bring about. This, I believe, is the only state in which the

By C. C. Burford

Business and banking conditions practically were suspended or proceeded on much slower lines during the storm period from Monday to Thursday. The farmers found it practically impossible to drive through the mud, and town people also were inclined to stir as little as possible so that in most lines business was very quiet. The railroads were tied up in large measure or else greatly delayed, and all-in-all the past week or ten days have been days of comparative quiet.

With the passing of unseasonable weather, the farmers eagerly will get to work in the fields, and the country towns in general will have several weeks of comparative quiet business. There is a strong demand for money, but little desire for speculative purposes. Farmers are holding a large amount of corn and oats from last year, but little of this will be moved soon to market, owing to poor roads and plenty of work on the farms, until after corn-planting is over. Towns and cities over the state will enjoy extensive building and general improvement development this year, and there is a very hopeful tone among business men generally.

O. H. Cheney—Born in Bloomington

Bloomington citizens are proud of the many able men who have gone forth from the "Evergreen City" to take responsible positions in the world. The career of O. H. Cheney, president of the Pacific Bank of New York City, began in Bloomington, where he was born in 1869. After attending the city schools of Bloomington, Mr. Cheney studied at Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa, at the University of Michigan and at New York University. He took an active part in college fraternity life, being a member of the Phi Gamma Delta and the Phi Delta Phi (legal) fraternities. He has served as member of the governing board and as national president of the Phi Gamma Delta and now is the president of Phi Delta Phi clubs of New York City. Mr. Cheney holds membership in many social and educational clubs in New York.

He has served as third deputy superintendent of banks in New York, and in 1909 was appointed superintendent of banks by Governor Hughes. He recently was elected president of the Pacific Bank of New York.

Death of J. Lee Crowder

The death of J. Lee Crowder of Silvis, recalls the robbery of his bank, December 7th. Mr. Crowder was beaten by the robbers and never recovered fully from the shock. He closed out his bank, one of the banks in East Moline taking over the business. One of the bandits, lodged in the Rock Island county jail, who bears the historic name of Thomas Jefferson, now faces a charge of murder as well as one of bank robbery.

The organization of the State Bank of Silvis is being pushed rapidly and practically all of the stock has been subscribed. Part of the stock was taken by Moline parties, and Silvis business men also have subscribed heavily to the new movement.

James McKinney Honored

The career of James McKinney, formerly president of the Illinois Bankers Association and for several years congressman from the fourteenth Illinois district, is given a high tribute by the Aledo Times-Record, published in the home town of Mr. McKinney. The Aledo banker, or as he was known until he retired from active banking business a few years ago, has served very acceptably in the lower house of congress, and announced two years ago that he would retire from legislative work at the close of this session. With this announcement came many offers of financial responsibilities in Chicago and other cities, but it is not known yet whether Mr. McKinney will re-enter active bank work or will travel. Few men in congress have been better known or more cordially regarded than has been Mr. McKinney. He was charged with heavy responsibilities as the Rock Island arsenal, and many miles of the Mississippi River were in his district. Mr. McKinney is an excellent type of the honest and capable business man in public service, "whose word is as good as a bond," and he has a host of friends throughout the country.

"Decatur—Sixty Thousand in Nineteen-Twenty"

Secretary J. M. Allen of the Decatur Chamber of Commerce, has announced that E. F. Trefz of Chicago, field secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, will be present at a "Get-together Banquet" to be given soon by the Decatur body. Mr. Allen, who until recently was assistant cashier of the National Bank of Decatur, has entered enthusiastically upon his new work, and the Decatur Chamber of Commerce has adopted a most enthusiastic motto, as it has announced as its slogan "Decatur—60,000 in 1920." Mr. Allen is very glad of the opportunity of bringing Mr. Trefz to Decatur, for the Chicago commerce worker has a national reputation in arousing civic pride and business activity and is said "to be able to deliver anything which may be asked for." THE LOGICAL REASONS FOR "SIX PER CENT AND SAFETY"

IN our opinion conservative investors are justly entitled to a rate of six per cent on their investments. We will be pleased to submit on application reasons why six per cent may be obtained on invested funds with perfect safety in the class of securities we offer.

¶ Investors for income, desirous of obtaining the highest interest rate consistent with safety, are advised to investigate these bonds which are issued in denominations of $100, $500, and $1,000.

¶ No investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us during the thirty-one years since this house was founded.

¶ We maintain a market for the securities we sell through our custom of repurchasing from clients, at par and accrued interest, less only the handling charge of one per cent, thus giving reasonable assurance of their convertibility.

The new building of the State and Savings Bank of Gilman will be ready for occupancy about April 1st and will be one of the best appointed banking rooms in the smaller cities of the state.

L. L. Emmerson, president of the Third National of Mount Vernon, attended the inspection of Cairo Commandery, No. 13 of the Illinois Knights Templar and the banquet given by the Cairo Knights. Mr. Emmerson is prominent in Masonic circles, being Eminent Grand Warden of the Illinois Knights Templar. A number of other grand officers attended the Cairo inspection.

Tazewell county has joined the ranks of the counties which employ a crop expert to work among the farmers of the county. Champaign county is another county to have become actively interested in crop improvement and a recent special edition of the Champaign Daily Gazette was given over to the important topic of soil conservation.

The new building of the Witt National soon will be ready for occupancy. Witt is a good town in Montgomery county near Litchfield.

The First National of Hoopeston is planning some extensive repairs to the bank building during the coming building season.

Moline will vote Saturday, March 29th, on a bond issue of $200,000 to build a new high school building.

Bloomington clearings for a recent week totaled $826,526 as compared to $823,409 for the corresponding week a year ago. Rockford clearings for about the same week amounted to $1,236,550 as compared to the same week of 1912 with $924,811. Rockford is having a large and substantial growth and vacant dwellings in all portions of the city are very scarce. Bloomington also is enjoying prosperous times and the best of conditions are reported there.

Cairo has been selected as the general agency location of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company for portions of Illinois, Missouri and Kentucky. L. E. Hooker will be the district sales manager, and a number of men will travel out of Cairo in the interests of the Burroughs people.

The Will County National of Joliet is doing some good publicity work and commends to its patrons the doctrine of thrift in business life. "The Will County National has assisted in building up many modest fortunes for its patrons and its services can be of just as much value to you if you will give it the opportunity of working for you." C. E. Wilson is the president and H. J. Weber is the cashier.

The First National of Galesburg is pushing its Christmas Savings Fund for 1913 with energy and good publicity matter.

The Elgin City Banking Company and the First National of Elgin are offering $200 cash prize for the four best ears of corn grown in Kane, DuPage and Cook counties during 1913. A silver cup also will be given to the boy growing the best ear of corn. This action by these Elgin banks is another expression of the growth of the idea of better crops in Illinois.

The good roads movement in Will and Kankakee counties has developed to such an extent that taxicab service between Joliet and Manhattan soon will be inaugurated. Express matter and baggage also will be carried, and the town of New Lenox will share in the service. This service is only a vision of what the transportation facilities of Illinois roads will be with better highways.

Danville has tried the brick rural pavement with so much success that there is wide sentiment there for extensions of the pavement and a desire to connect the towns of Vermilion county with Danville. Danville merchants are very anxious to connect their city with the gravel road system of Indiana as the city is but six or eight miles from the state line.

J. S. McFerren, president of the First National of Hoopeston, with Mrs. McFerren and two sons, has returned from a thirty-day trip to Panama, Venezuela, Trinidad, Martinique, Porto Rico, the Bermudas and many other points of interest.

BEHIND THE CURTAIN

The Seemore Company has issued a beautifully printed little book by L'Abbe De Lacroix. In the introduction the able author says: "This book is not for mummies. Neither is it for scandal seeking fools. It is meant for people able to go by their own judgment and for those willing to acquire this most important habit. 'Behind the Curtain' is going to give you an inside view of religion; how it is being handled. And in the meantime I shall endeavor to set forth how it ought to be handled."

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

Legislation to provide federal guaranty of national bank deposits, said to be advocated by Secretary of State Bryan and members of the democratic administration, would be a forerunner of disaster to the entire banking system of the United States, according to L. J. Petit, president of the Wisconsin National, while Fred Vogel, Jr., president fo the First National, asserts that the bankers of the country would voice such a strenuous opposition to the bank guaranty bill, if such ever is drawn, that congress would not dare to pass it. Milwaukee bankers, without exception, have taken a determined stand against both state and federal guaranty of bank deposits, and predicted the failure of the Oklahoma guaranty law before it was put in force.

Speaking of the national phase of bank guaranty, Mr. Petit said:

"The guaranty of the $6,000,000,000 deposits in the 7,500 national banks of the country would bring dishonest men into the banking business, whose unscrupulous actions would bring disgrace on the administration which gave birth to such a condition of affairs. It seems to me that those who are considering the federal guaranty for national bank deposits do not understand that they are favoring an unwise plan. I do not believe for a minute that any such legislation would pass, for it would give any unprincipled, unscrupulous person an opportunity to engage in the banking business. The passage of such a bill would change the entire banking system and would bring disaster on the banking business of the entire nation. The guaranty of deposits was not a success in Oklahoma, where it was first introduced. The result was that banks failed because they did not have the incentive to guard their deposits as they would have done if there had been no state guardian. This continued until the state was unable to meet the guaranties. The result of the passage of the law in Oklahoma was that the national banks, which were not a party to it as it covered state institutions only, got all the business in the state. The banks under the federal guaranty would be less safe than they are to-day. The standing of a bank is gauged by its depositors, by the character of the men connected with it. The public as a rule, before it deposits money with a bank, inquires who and what are behind it. With deposits guaranteed it would be a matter of indifference with whom money was deposited. It would be regarded as safe with one bank as with another and any rascal in the business would have a chance to exercise free scope and bring disaster to the entire banking system."

Fred Vogel, Jr., on the Pujo Report

"There are big things in this country and it takes big men to handle them," was the statement of President Fred Vogel, Jr., of the First National, anent the majority report of the Pujo money trust investigating committee. Mr. Vogel was one of the few Milwaukee bankers who consented to comment publicly on the report, even to this extent.

Wisconsin Notes

G. N. Fratt, cashier of the First National of Racine; W. M. Post, cashier of the National Exchange Bank of Milwaukee; and Secretary George W. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association have been appointed by President E. A. Dow of the association on a committee to make arrangements for the transportation of Wisconsin bankers to the American Bankers Association convention in Boston next fall. So far two members of the committee have evinced a disposition to "let George do it," but then, there is plenty of time.

While nonchalant steel workers rapped the frame of the eighth floor of the new First National bank building (just half its height, by the way) into shape this week, interior decorators were busy putting the finishing touches on the Marshall & Ilsley building, two doors south. Corresponding touches on the First National building, scheduled for early in 1914, will see the completion of the last and largest of Milwaukee's group of new bank buildings.

The combined deposits of the three Marshfield banks are $1,947,079, according to reports from that city.

By means of a small boat robbers made a quiet entrance to the town of Tamaha, Okla., recently and blew open the safe of the Bank of Tamaha, securing $4,300 in currency, gold and silver. The men then went back to the river and glided away down stream.

Railing Charges Against Clearing Houses

Columbus, Ohio, March 27th.—Bankers may know the falsity of it all but the general public does not. Political talk here is that certain powerful Cleveland and Pittsburgh banking interests are using facts concerning loans and credits secured through clearing house examinations to crush rivals or business concerns controlling them, and it has determined Governor Cox to seek relief by drastic legislation.

The governor has announced that the bill introduced by Senator William Weigandt, of Portage county, prohibiting clearing house associations from making examinations of banks enjoying clearing house privileges, is an administration measure and will be advanced for speedy passage.

To hasten action on the measure, the governor said that a duplicate of the Weigandt bill will be introduced during the coming week in the house by Representative Smith, of Butler county.

Attacked Rival's Charge

The governor said he recently received reports of the manner in which a powerful Pennsylvania corporation which controls banks in Pittsburgh and Cleveland attempted to destroy a competitor through information secured by clearing house examinations. Learning the source of loans to these competitors from the banks they control in the Cleveland and Pittsburgh association, this corporation exerted its influence to have their credit impaired, he said.

The Weigandt bill makes it a felony, punishable by a two-year penitentiary term and a fine of $5,000, for the officer or director of any bank to permit an examination of its affairs by any clearing house association or officer or agent of such an organization. It also stipulates that no bank shall be denied the privileges of a clearing house association for refusal to permit an examination.

Governor Cox has learned that clearing house organizations in Cleveland, Cincinnati, Columbus, and other cities of the state employ high salaried accountants to make and report detailed examinations of each bank in the association, the obvious purpose, of course, being to protect sound banks against unsound or insolvent banks.

Governor Cox believes that these reports give opportunity for big business interests securing intimate knowledge of the banking transactions of their rivals.

Order State Examination

To safeguard banks in a clearing house association against weak members, the Weigandt bill authorizes the state bank superintendent, at the request and expense of any association, to direct a special examination of any bank in the association. The state examiner, however, only may advise the association as to the solvency and management of the bank examined.

The "Blue Sky" bill is about the usual thing and is going along rapidly. A member talking upon guaranty said: "All talk of guaranteeing the deposits of national banks under a national law would die out very quickly if one point involved were generally understood. That is that business men, not the bankers, would pay the cost of this system, and that the tax imposed on business certainly would fall in the end upon the masses of the people."

NEW HOME FOR GUARANTY TRUST

The new building of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York at the corner of Broadway and Liberty Street, from an architectural standpoint, is one of the most striking buildings in New York City. It is monumental in design, and ultimately is intended for the exclusive use of the Guaranty Trust—now the largest trust company in the world. The first floor contains the main banking room, which is as high as an ordinary four-story business block. The basement and sub-basement contain an immense vault, the strongest ever constructed, the doors of which weigh forty tons each and are not surpassed in size and strength by any vault doors in the world. The Guaranty Trust expects to occupy the new building early in April.

GROUP SEVEN, NEW YORK

The annual dinner of Group No. 7 of the New York Bankers Association, to be held this year on April 19th at the Hotel Astor in Manhattan, is expected to be one of the most successful functions yet held by the group, which comprises the officials of banks located in Brooklyn and Long Island.

It is expected that several well-known men will be included in the speakers' list, which will be announced later.

The officers of the group are: Chairman, C. O. Ireland; secretary, Henry Billman; and members of the executive committee, P. R. Smith, D. Irving Mead, C. Foster Smith, G. Edwin Bartow and W. A. Fisher. Mr. Fisher is superintending the arrangements for the dinner.

Thomas Sudduth, vice-president of the Farmers National of Springfield, Ill., is back from a trip to Panama and Cuba. One of these—the road to Puerto Boniato—is an excellently built and maintained modern stone highway.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, March 26th.—During the past week the demand for money has continued fair and came from all classes of customers. All the financial institutions are well supplied with loanable funds, but are very firm in their rates, and most of the loans are made at 6 per cent. This is the popular figure just at present so far as money is concerned. Commercial paper was in fair offerings and was discounted at 6 per cent, and no loss. New York exchange was in fair offerings and demand and sold between banks at 20 cents per $1,000. Business at the financial institutions was active.

Commerce Cuts Dividend

A dividend of $2.50 a share will be paid April 1st by the National Bank of Commerce, which is at the rate of 10 per cent a year, the same as the previous dividend. Thereafter, however, the dividend rate will be cut to 8 per cent a year, or 2 per cent quarterly, in order to build up the surplus. This action was decided on at the weekly meeting of the board of directors, which took place yesterday afternoon. Following the meeting the directors issued a formal statement to the stockholders reciting the dividend of $2.50 a share was declared out of the earnings of the first quarter of the year, and that thereafter the rate would be reduced to 8 per cent per annum in order that they might have a considerable amount with which to build up an increased reserve of undivided profits to the amount of at least $1,000,000 more than those of January 1, 1913. This statement was signed by B. F. Edwards, president; J. A. Lewis, cashier; E. C. Simmons, chairman of the discount committee, and James Campbell, acting chairman of the executive committee. The surplus and undivided profits of the National Bank of Commerce on February 4th were $2,200,212.

May Clear Rural Checks

Clearing through the clearing house of checks on country banks received by St. Louis banks is being considered by a special committee of the clearing house, which recently was appointed as follows: J. A. Lewis, Bank of Commerce; J. S. Calfee, Mechanics-American; R. S. Hawes, Third National; J. A. Berninghaus, Central National; A. O. Wilson, State National, and W. W. Hoxton, manager of the clearing house. Mr. Hoxton is out of the city investigating the operation of the system in cities where it is in practice. Among these cities are Boston, Kansas City, Atlanta, Ga., and Nashville, Tenn. The present practice is for each financial institution in St. Louis to collect its own checks from out-of-town banks. Each institution each day makes up its package of checks for each out-of-town bank and sends them by mail to be paid. Under the operation of the new system each institution will send all its out-of-town items to the clearing house, the same as it now sends the checks it holds against other St. Louis institutions. The committee has not yet made up its report, but it is considered likely the adoption of the new system will be recommended as being in the interest of economy. One or two clerks at the clearing house will supersede the staff which each institution is forced to maintain, and a saving in postage also will result. The new plan, if adopted, will materially swell the clearings of St. Louis, which for last year passed the $4,000,000,000 mark. Bankers estimate one-third of the business done by St. Louis banks is with out-of-town banks.

Reserve Agents

The Third National of St. Louis has been approved as reserve agent for the Germania National, Little Rock, Ark., the Koeta (Okla.) and the Springfield (Tenn.) Nationals; Mechanics-American National for the First National, Lewisville, Ark., and Drovers National, Kansas City, Mo.; and German American National, St. Joseph, Mo., and Tootle-Lemon National, St. Joseph, Mo., for the First National, Fairbury, Neb.

New Division into Groups

The division of the banks of Missouri into nine groups instead of twelve, as at present, will be recommended at the meeting of the Missouri Bankers Association at St. Joseph in May by a special committee of the organization which met in St. Louis on Wednesday of last week and decided on the change. Larger attendance at the group meetings is the purpose of the proposed change. Missouri is the only state in which all of the banks belong to the state organization. J. S. Calfee, cashier of the Mechanics-American National, is chairman of the committee. Other members are George B. Harrison, vice-president of the New England National, Kansas City; J. P. Huston, president of the Wood and Huston Bank, Marshall; and J. M. Allen, cashier of the Farmers and Merchants Bank, Humansville.

Bankers whose customers have business at the St. Louis National Yards can realize full value of such business only through an account with this bank.

Wheat in Oklahoma

The biggest wheat crop that Oklahoma ever had is the prediction for 1913. The conditions are the best in several years and far better than they were at any time last spring, although the yield for 1912 was 20,096,000 bushels, worth $15,072,000. The wheat fields throughout the state are green and the grain is growing rapidly. The crop bulletin of the state board of agriculture, issued March 1st, showed the growing condition of wheat to be 84.8 per cent, or 106.6 per cent compared to the growing condition of the 1912 crop at the same season. In the best wheat producing counties of the state the condition is shown to be exceptionally good.

Preparations for Texas Convention

Preparations rapidly are going forward for the meeting of the Texas Bankers Association convention at Galveston, May 13th, 14th and 15th. Among the speakers who so far have been secured are Benjamin F. Berkley, president of the Alpine State Bank, who will respond to the address of welcome; Charles B. Metcalfe of San Antonio; Virgil M. Harris of the Mercantile Bank and Trust Company, St. Louis; C. A. Sanford, vice-president of the Commercial State Bank of Sherman; T. J. Freeman, vice-president of the Texas and Pacific and International and Great Northern railroads, New Orleans; John Clausen of the Crocker National of San Antonio; A. M. McFaddin, president of the Texas Cattle Raisers Association, Victoria; George H. Dunscomb of the First National, Chicago; and W. F. Ramsey, former associate justice of the supreme court of Texas.

MONTANA CONVENTION

The date for the 1913 convention of the Montana bankers has not been fixed upon as yet, but the executive council is considering a date in August which will not conflict with the Washington convention to be held at Bellingham August 7th, 8th, and 9th.

"BLUE SKY" LAW IN MISSOURI

The Missouri legislature recently passed a "Blue Sky" law to regulate the sale of stocks and bonds. The measure is said to provide that all except exempted companies shall submit a statement to the bank commissioner showing the amount of assets, location, names of principal officers and the character of business to be transacted. If the commissioner finds its assets insufficient he must issue a notice prohibiting the company from attempting the sale of stock. The bill exempts established brokerage and investment houses which in the judgment of the bank commissioner are dealing only in high grade securities. The following concerns are exempted also: State and national banks, real estate and mortgage companies, building and loan associations, bond investment companies, and insurance companies. The bill is applicable also to copartnerships. The statements showing assets and liabilities filed must be sworn to; any officer swearing falsely is held to be guilty of a felony. The punishment fixed is from six months in jail to to ten years in the penitentiary, or by fine of $200 to $1,000.

TO CONTINUE TRUST INVESTIGATION

Attorney-general McReynolds proposes to continue investigation of alleged illegal trusts which was commenced by the Taft administration.

Inquiry also is to be made as to whether the Standard Oil decree of dissolution is being violated. Investigations now are pending against the American Can Company, American Smelting and Refining and the United Fruit Company.

WALTER B. KRAMER FOR SECRETARY, A. I. B.

Scranton (Pa.) chapter has nominated its popular president, Walter B. Kramer, for secretary of the American Institute of Banking, the eleventh annual convention of which will be held in Richmond, September 17th-18th-19th. Support is asked on a basis of fitness and services rendered the Institute. Mr. Kramer is a graduate of the Institute and has been president of Scranton chapter the past year. Previously he has held every office in his local chapter, has served on various committees and as delegate to A. I. B. conventions, as well as to conventions of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association. He holds an important position with the Lackawanna Trust and Safe Deposit Company, and has many friends throughout the country.

Mr. Kramer possesses energy, administrative ability and tact, and is considered a typical Institute product. He has been active in this work for about eight years and has been an important factor in the development of Scranton chapter, which has a larger percentage of Institute graduates in proportion to membership than perhaps any other chapter. One-third of its members are certificate holders, and a class of twenty-five is expected to finish this year. Mr. Kramer has served Scranton chapter faithfully and well and would fit the office of secretary of the American Institute of Banking perfectly. He possesses unique and extraordinary fitness for this office of honor and responsibility, and his term would be a continuation of the mission for which the Institute was designed—a genuine and lasting educational benefit and help to the young bankers of the United States.

EFFECTIVE ADMINISTRATION OF BANKING LAWS

While a bank is not technically classed as a "public utility," nevertheless it performs functions of a nature and bearing a relation to the public similar to those which one ordinarily associates with that term. A banking institution is a necessary adjunct to every community, which generally is conceded to be axiomatic and requiring no evidence in support thereof. A banker is impressed with a grave trust; he acts as the depositary of large sums of money belonging to others and on him the various business enterprises of the nation must depend for funds with which to finance their ventures. The banker, therefore, is in business primarily to serve the public, so that a bank properly should be classed as a "public utility."

This extraordinary relation existing between the banker and the public requires the enactment of laws governing the organization and operation of a bank which shall be sufficiently comprehensive and of such a character as adequately to safeguard the interests of the public.

Probably the most important feature of any banking law is the right which the state or national government reserves to itself to examine the affairs of the bank and to determine whether or not it is on a solvent basis. The effectiveness of any examination, of course, depends entirely upon the character and ability of the examiner and the conditions under which he is obliged to work. It is highly important, therefore, that high class men be chosen for this work. Much of the efficiency of bank supervision depends upon the administration of the law by the head of the banking department. The men occupying these places as a rule are men of ability and thoroughly competent to discharge the duties of their positions. No matter how competent a bank superintendent or a comptroller may be, however, there always will be banks which will violate the law. The success, therefore, of supervisory administration depends upon the zeal with which these infractions are discovered and stopped. Frequently, too, the head of a banking department is handicapped by antiquated laws.

Many things have been contended with in the past in the administration of banking law. There seems to have been a disposition manifested by some banks not to maintain the legal reserve. Much, however, has been done to remedy this, so that at present the percentage of violators is comparatively small.

"Directors who do not direct" have proved to be a prolific source of evil and it has been said that a considerable portion of the bank failures of this country can be traced to the existence of just such a state of affairs. On the board of directors rests responsibility for the management of the bank. To have directors who are such only in name, who attend few of the meetings and are not at all conversant with the affairs of the bank, sounds like a paradox.

Excessive loans often prove to be potential influences in effecting bank failures, as well as inordinate concentration of funds in business enterprises in which officers or directors of the bank are interested. Fortunately, the national bank act and the banking laws of the various states contain provisions respecting the largest amount which may be loaned to one individual or concern so that a comptroller or bank superintendent ought not to be hampered in an endeavor to eliminate this undesirable feature.

The subject of overdrafts is one which has been provocative of much discussion and argument. It has been said that any cashier who countenances an overdraft is guilty of a "misapplication" of the funds of the bank; and no less an authority than the supreme court of the United States has said that an officer permitting an overdraft is doing anything but "well and truly" administering the duties of his position as he has sworn to do.

A very desirable feature in the administration of banking law is the vesting of the right in the head of the department of authority to reject applications for organization, when, in his opinion, the community in which it is sought to locate already is well supplied with banking facilities. It also is important to determine the character and financial standing of the men interested in the organization of the bank and to ascertain whether or not the stockholders would be able to bear the "double liability" if called upon to do so.

Many pernicious practices which have been indulged in in the past have been eliminated as a result of the persistent efforts of those charged with the administration of the banking laws. The public has a right to expect that all of the provisions of the banking laws will be complied with and that such suggestions as shall be made from time to time by the comptroller or the state superintendent of banks shall be followed out. They are such as are designed to safeguard the interests of the public and as such the public has the right to demand their observance.

REMOVING BAD SIDEWALK OBSTRUCTIONS

After years of almost intolerable abuses the city of Chicago is going to clean up the loop sidewalks. New York set the fashion in the East and the South Park Commissioners showed what could be done on Jackson Boulevard. The open areaways are not the worst offenders. Nor are the protruding signs and steps. The offenders who stuck out bay windows, including some of the largest commercial houses, are the king bees. Aldermen are said to have done a thriving trade in such privileges, an "order" from council being necessary for such an egregious violation.

Even the largest of State street concerns, as well as the cafes and pawnshops, profited by this illicit use of public property. The fruit stands were innocents compared with the property owner who sought deviously to build out into the street to his own gain and to the permanent inconvenience of the public. Now that it has started let every good citizen begin to help by complying with the law, if he be an offender, and by supporting the hands of L. E. McGann, public works commissioner, in his trying position of compelling good citizens to obey the law. There are many flagrant offenders and they may save publicity and expense by beginning to clean up at once, by restoring unimpeded sidewalk space to the public use.

The park authorities did their part of the work expeditiously and we will be interested in the efforts about to begin by the city.

WALL STREET INTEREST RATES

Knauth, Nachod and Kühne of New York, in discussing Wall Street money rates in their March circular, said:

"Because of the active bidding for money by foreign borrowers and the unusual withdrawals of gold for export to Europe and to South America, there has been a definite hardening of money rates in Wall Street. This inquiry has been so broad as to lead some banks to withdraw temporarily from the time loan market. One reason for this has been, of course, the attractive rates obtainable on call and the inclination of many banks to keep their assets as liquid as possible during the period when the heavy April 1st payments are being financed. In spite of this attitude on the part of the banks, it may be said that there has been no disposition whatever on the part of the great lending institutions of New York to restrict accommodation to commercial borrowers or to those who have legitimate demands to finance. At the moment we are in the midst of a world-wide demand for money with acute tension in some markets and more or less well defined stringency in others. As compared with the other great markets it may be said, however, that the situation in New York is much more satisfactory as there is absolutely no sign of inherent weakness here and in fact nothing more than such a hardening of discount rates as result from a steadily increasing demand for gold from abroad."

Touches upon proposed banking and financial legislation by congress

WASHINGTON LETTER

By R. A. ALBERTSEN

Relates to administrative and department matters interesting to our readers

Washington, D. C., March 28th.—The gradually tightening money market is attracting the attention of democratic members passing their "open season" in Washington. The emergency currency act expires July 1, 1914, and it is predicted that if banking legislation is not taken up immediately it may be found necessary to extend that law. Up to the present date bankers have not availed themselves of the law, and whether it would prove adequate to meet the situation should we come face to face with a tight money market is problematical. Representative Glass, it is understood, does not favor extending that law, because to do so would be but a temporary expedient and might be construed to mean that the democrats have not decided on an adequate money reform bill. Conferences between Mr. Glass and Senator Owen, chairman of the new senate banking and currency committee, are under way with the object of outlining a policy on currency to be pursued by the democrats. President Wilson already is familiar with the investigation recently conducted by Glass and now Owen is acquainting himself with that work.

Await Expression from Wilson

It is acknowledged on all sides that the senate and house only are waiting instruction from President Wilson. Glass is prepared to introduce a bill which he carefully has prepared. Just so soon as this is introduced in the house the senate committee will begin its investigations and very likely hold hearings on the house bill.

Senator Owen states it is his opinion that there will be currency legislation at the extra session. He said that his committee will be prepared to begin hearings about the time congress convenes on April 7th. Owen stands willing to desert his advocacy of a bank guaranty of deposits law in view of the hostility of other members of his party toward it. He said that although he advocated the law in 1908, he is not one of those who refuse to change their minds.

"The purpose of those members of the new administration with whom I have talked," said Senator Owen, "has been to study carefully the question of the needs of the banking system and proceed cautiously and carefully to make such changes as obviously are necessary to promote the stability and welfare of our financial system.

Provides Immediate Payment Fund

"If the government had guaranteed the bank deposits of national banks during the last twenty years, it practically would have cost nothing, for the reason that the capital and surplus of the banks that have failed have been sufficient, as a rule, quite thoroughly to safeguard depositors from ultimate loss. The advantage of a guaranty fund is to make an immediate payment to depositors instead of keeping them waiting for three, four, or five years on account of the failure of the bank.

"The members of the committee on banking and currency have had no meetings. They have not discussed this matter, and what the opinion of the committee of the senate or the members of the house will be, I am not informed, and certainly feel not at all prepared to make any announcement as to what an administration composed of the senate and the house and the executive branch of the government will find judicious after they thoroughly have considered this question.

"I have been an advocate of a guaranty fund contributed by the banks to protect depositors, and incidentally for the purpose of protecting the banks against the fear of their depositors and as a means of avoiding financial panic. There is nothing about the proposal of a mutual insurance which should excite any fear of producing unstable conditions, for the very purpose of mutual insurance is to give stability to the banking system and to the commercial life of the nation.

Might Include State Banks

"Any system of mutual insurance, in my judgment, might well be made available not only to national banks, but to state banks or other companies which are under proper government scrutiny and adequate supervision. I do not know whether or not the committee will care to consider this in the immediate future in connection with possible financial legislation."

Representative Palmer, one of the house leaders, declared that he did not think the democrats would support any plan to guarantee bank deposits. Glass already has repudiated the policy and has publicly acknowledged that his banking bill will make no provision for it.

Secretary McAdoo of the treasury is expected to have something to say relative to calling for currency legislation at the extra session. Mr. McAdoo, up to the present time, has been tied up with office seekers, and has not had a good opportunity to study the subject.

No Plans in the Senate

The senate leaders confess that they are as much at a loss as to what will be done regarding banking legislation at the extra session as is the general public, although it is their impression that a thorough investigation of the needs for legislation will be undertaken immediately. It is said that the call for this legislation at the extra session will depend entirely upon the attitude of the administration, and this means whether President Wilson desires it now or at the regular session next winter.

The impression has been permitted to gain headway that the new committee of the senate will be very radical regarding currency reform, but those close to the leaders are positive in their contradictions of this. It has been pointed out that Senator Owen was an advocate of guaranty of bank deposits, but those close to the senator declare that he has altered his views on this proposition.

The LaFollette Banking Bill

The house currency bill known as the "Nelson bill" is being credited to Senator LaFollette, and here is the tale of woe.

The effect upon local securities of the law making municipal bonds taxable will be noted when bids will be received upon $855,000 worth of refunder bonds this week. The proposed sale is the first in Cleveland since the constitutional amendment taxing bonds became effective January 1st. An increase in the rate of interest has been made and the bonds will pay at the rate of 4½ per cent. City officials concede it will be impossible to dispose of any more of the 4 per cent bonds, which were the most common issue in the past. No bids were received in Toledo or Cincinnati when attempts were made recently to dispose of 4 per cent bonds. Columbus city officials declare the constitutional amendment has eliminated Ohio from the bond market. The refunder bonds which are advertised for sale are to be used in renewing sewer district and waterworks bonds which fall due April 1st. In case no bids are received the sinking fund commission will have to pledge other securities to renew the old issues. The city council is pledged to create a sinking fund and interest for the refunder bonds, under another new law governing the sale of securities. The suggestion has been made to city officials that short-time bonds be issued in the future with the expectation that the taxation law will be repealed and the city again will be able to sell 4's.

Bids on State Funds

Bids ranging from 3.65 to 4.25 per cent on the $7,500,000 in the state treasury have been received by State Treasurer Brennan from 338 banks in Ohio. The average rate of interest bid is close to 3.75 per cent, which will bring the unprecedented revenues into the state treasury approximating $280,000 a year on inactive funds. All previous records are smashed. The average interest bid is higher and the number of banks participating exceeds previous figures. Banks in Cleveland, Cincinnati, and Columbus will get little of the state funds, as they offer smallest interest rates. This is considered a healthful sign, showing plenty of money in the larger cities of the state. Cleveland gets a small amount of state funds, while Cincinnati gets none. Columbus banks under the state depository law get all active deposits, of which the greater part will remain with the New First National, although the Fifth Avenue Savings and the Produce Exchange will get all they can take.

Will Sue Bankers for Interest Graft

The state of Ohio will try to recover interest from every bank known to have paid state interest to treasurers on state deposits. Two defunct banks, the Union National of Columbus which was closed nearly two years ago, and the Cincinnati Trust of which George B. Cox was president, will be called upon to turn money over to the state. It is understood that banks in Cleveland and Ashtabula county which carried secret deposits of state money will be invited to step up and settle with the state. Steps to collect this interest will be taken as soon as the case of the state against the insolvent Columbus Savings and Trust is disposed of. Attorney-general Hogan intends to get after the bondsmen of the former treasurers to realize on the claims of the state. He says it is no part of the state's program to recover at the expense of depositors.

No Bids for Park Bonds

An unprecedented condition in Cincinnati's public finances developed in the city auditor's office last week when not one bid was received for a park bond issue amounting to $675,000. He attributes the condition to the constitutional amendment which provides for taxation of municipal bonds and to the money market, which he described as being very tight. Mr. Washburn probably will try to dispose of the bonds at private sale, although local banks tentatively had agreed to take $250,000 of the issue at par with the expectation of disposing of them in the East.

New Bank at Vandalia

The new Vandalia State Bank formally was opened in Vandalia recently. Hundreds of persons from Vandalia and vicinity visited the institution and the first day's business indicated a prosperous career for the new bank. The cashier is F. W. Rosnagle.

Detroit Bank Changes Name

An event of importance in Detroit banking circles was the action taken at a special meeting of the stockholders of the Fairview Savings when it was voted to change the name of the institution to the American State Bank of Detroit, a name which better represents the scope of this thriving bank, which has three branches in the northeastern section and one in the northwest section of the city. In the six years the bank has been doing business it has acquired assets of $1,400,000 and boasts a capital of $250,000 and surplus of $43,000. When the bank opened for business in February, 1907, its capital was only $20,000. This was increased to $100,000 in August, 1911, and five months later, in January, 1912, it was found necessary to bring it up to a quarter of a million dollars properly to care for the rapid growth of its business. The main bank building at Jefferson and Hillger avenues recently was remodeled and enlarged. The American State will have the same directors and officers as the old bank. The officers are W. E. Moss, president; Paul H. Deming and Franz Kuhn, vice-presidents; Walter J. Hayes, cashier; Gordon Fearnley, assistant cashier, and P. G. Vernier, auditor. Cashier Hayes has been the active manager of the bank since its organization.

To Build Three Branch Offices

Within the next few months three new branch banking offices are to be established by the Peoples State Bank of Detroit, each in a building to be erected by the bank on a site bought by it. Completion of the three new buildings will make eleven branch offices under supervision of H. P. Bergman, cashier of the savings department of the Peoples State.

Dime Savings Bank Building Near Completion

The twenty-four story Dime Savings Bank building, Detroit's largest skyscraper, soon will be ready for occupancy in its entirety—already seven or eight offices are being used by the lessees—and with the completion of this massive structure on April 1st several feats remarkable in construction work will have been accomplished. The most notable of these are: Not one life has been lost during the erection of the building; it will be turned over to the owners April 1st, the exact date set in the contract; not once since the first operations were commenced has there been a serious tie-up in the work because of labor troubles, and the complete building from the ground up was erected in less than one year.

Bank to Take New Offices

The Metropolitan State Bank of Detroit has decided to move from the Union Trust building to the ground floor space in the McGraw building adjacent to the new Dime Savings Bank building. The Metropolitan State maintains three branch banks. The officers are H. C. Wiedeman, president; H. J. Guthard and J. F. Leahy, vice-presidents; Charles J. Higgins, vice-president and cashier; and E. W. Guenther, assistant cashier.

CONDEMNS FAKE PROMOTERS

An effort has been made in this city recently to sell stock in a certain mortgage and trust company located in Ohio. As an inducement to prospective purchasers a list of a dozen trust companies in various cities, all showing large earnings and paying dividends of not less than 20 per cent, was furnished.

In commenting upon this method of advertising, a prominent local investor said:

"I believe a man who sells stock in a new trust company or any other kind of enterprise on that sort of advertising is getting money under false pretenses. While this circular does not promise that the new company will pay 20 per cent dividends or will advance into the rank of the twelve institutions named, the inference the promoters would like to have drawn is that it will. It is a false method of advertising and it is hardly to be expected that promoters forced to rely upon that method to sell their stock can hope to make a business success.

"Frequently investors who have been induced to buy stock in a new concern on the record of success of an old-established company in the same line of business have lost virtually all of the amount invested. One very conspicuous example is furnished by the collapsed McCrum-Howell Company, which was touted by its promoters as 'a second American Radiator.' A concern that has nothing to advertise but the success of its rivals in business is hardly entitled to much consideration from the investing public. However, bad as the method is, it catches a lot of unthinking people, and generally those who can least afford to stand a loss."

NEW VICE-PRESIDENT FOR NEW YORK BANK

H. H. Pond, now secretary of the Plainfield (N. J.) Trust Company and formerly president of the New Jersey Bankers Association, has been elected a vice-president of the Mechanics and Metals National of New York. He will assume his duties about the time of the removal of the bank to its new quarters at 50 Wall Street.

TWO NEW BANKS FOR CHICAGO

Permits have been issued by the state auditor for the organization of two new Chicago banks—the Cook County State of Chicago, capitalization $500,000, charter tenure ninety-nine years, and the Morgan Park State of Cook County, capitalization $25,000 and charter tenure 100 years.

If a state bank contribute to the state bank guaranty fund all that is required as its share in keeping the fund intact and ready for emergencies, what becomes of this particular contribution in case the bank wants to liquidate? Is the whole contribution lost to the bank or only a part of it, and how much? These questions arose in the contention over the bank guaranty amendments before the Nebraska legislature last week. Under the present Nebraska law the state levies the assessments, which are set aside by the banks and kept in separate funds, but still remaining in their possession. No provision was made in the law for the disposition of this fund in case any bank having paid should decide to liquidate or to change to a national bank. The supreme court has decided that the bank thus liquidating can claim all of the fund not used to pay losses at the time of quitting business. Under the amendment recently adopted, the status of the fund is established. In the case of liquidation by a state bank, one-half of the guaranty fund drafted from its deposits shall be kept by the bank and one-half go to the state banking board, to be kept as a special fund out of which first losses shall be paid before drawing on the funds in the hands of any other banks. The most interesting phase of the argument was whether those assignments belong to the state or to the banks, and whether the state is doing the guaranteeing or the banks themselves in a sort of mutual organization compelled by law to exist. There is no decision on this point.

The Nebraska legislature did not come to any conclusion regarding the "Blue Sky" bills that were introduced in both houses, and neither was passed. Most of the bills were modeled after the Kansas law but the Nebraska solons confessed that this law is too complicated for them to understand. The main point of contention is as to whether this Kansas law extends to dealings in lands and if so what lands and in what sized parcels. After worrying over the "Blue Sky" complications all winter, the Nebraska men decided to draw up an entirely new bill of their own make if they have time before the day of adjournment.

Fernando P. Neal Back

After a three-weeks' trip to California and a return by way of El Paso so as to attend the Texas cattlemen's convention, Fernando P. Neal, chairman of the board of directors of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce, Kansas City, is back at his desk. Mr. Neal was accompanied by Mrs. Neal. The Kansas City financier took a deep interest in the cattle situation of the Southwest and predicts that the present situation of high beef will not be changed for some time to come, if at all. "At the cattle convention," said Mr. Neal, "sellers were asking fancy prices for their steers and buyers were few. The prices asked were the highest ever known, and cattlemen said that prospects were that they would go higher. They saw no immediate chance for a decrease in the high cost of living in so far as beef is concerned. The cattlemen seemed to want to see a change for the better. One plan, much talked of lately, was discussed there. This was that heifer calves should not be marketed, and that cows should be kept for breeding purposes. If this conservation plan should obtain throughout all the cattle country, it is believed the price may be brought down, but it will require some time to make a showing.

"The convention also discussed the reduction of the tariff on dressed beef and cattle. Dressed beef might be shipped in from South America and cattle could be shipped from there and also from South Africa. The cattlemen said this would not make much difference. The larger flood of cattle would come from across the border in Mexico. I was told, however, that contracts now are being made with Mexican cattle dealers for a certain price, with a clause written in providing that if the tariff should be taken off or reduced, a higher price will be paid. In fact, so I understood it, the average price agreed upon in case of tariff reduction will about equal the present tariff per head on cattle. If that be true I do not see how the consumer would benefit much by a reduction in the tariff. And that seemed to be the consensus of opinion at the convention."

Kansas Amends "Blue Sky" Law

Before final adjournment last week the Kansas legislature adopted two amendments to the state's "Blue Sky" law which are designed to make it more effective. The law was extended so as to include land salesmen who have gone about among the people of Kansas selling all kinds of land in other states on the installment plan. The old law applied only to corporations which desired to sell stocks or bonds. The lines were drawn tight on all sorts of business investment except land selling. Of late much complaint has been made that the land salesmen are disposing of property in distant states that is either swamp, sand or desert. Now the sellers of land will have to show that this land is in condition for farming or at least that it will be possible to farm it after certain definite expenditures have been made upon it. The other amendment provides that the Kansas charter board instead of the bank commissioner alone shall pass upon applications to sell securities in the state.

Additional Examiners for Missouri

The fight of the Missouri state bankers to have additional examiners was won last week when a bill was passed in both houses providing for three additional examiners. There now are eight state bank examiners and 1,270 banks in Missouri. Under the new law eleven men will do the work. The legislature also passed a stringent "Blue Sky" law which is almost a duplicate of the Kansas model used by so many of the states of the Union. Perhaps the most radical measures adopted by the Missouri legislature, however, were those relating to corporations. One law requires all railways doing business in the state to have a Missouri charter and the general corporation act calls for annual reports from all corporations, with inspection by clerks from the secretary of state's office when deemed necessary. The reports must be accompanied by $5 "registration" fee. This law has aroused very unfavorable comment all over the state and it is pretty sure to be the basis of legal contests that will be taken to the United States supreme court.

Oklahoma Guaranty Law Goes into Effect

The new Oklahoma bank law went into effect last Saturday when all of the state banks were assessed one-fifth of one per cent of the daily deposits for the guaranty fund. According to the provisions of the law this is all that is required for any year, although for the first three years, or until the new law is thoroughly operative, an additional one-fifth of one per cent may be assessed if the necessity for it arises. R. C. Stuart, assistant bank commissioner, has been retained under the provisions of the new law which requires the assistant commissioner to act as secretary of the banking board. These assistants to the board were named last week: M. R. Garnett, W. H. Samuels, Claude Tuttle, H. M. Foster, George S. Meade, L. H. Patton, H. W. Wells, J. G. Hill and W. C. Earnest.

Central West Notes

On Sunday night, March 16th, the safe in the office of the Garden theater of Kansas City was blown by robbers and nearly $3,000 was secured. In working on the case the local police arrested Richard F. Dunn and Brent Glascock, who were under suspicion for several days when it was learned that they were wanted in Triplett, Mo., for robbing a bank in that place last January, when $350 was stolen. It is said, also, that these men are old-time yeggs and that they have belonged to various bands of bank and postoffice robbers operating over the Central West. They were taken to Triplett where they will answer to the bank robbery charge.

Joseph P. Burns, assistant cashier of the Farmers National of Salina, Kan., has been summoned to Washington, where he will take an examination for national bank examiner. His appointment was among the first plums of the new administration so far as Kansas is concerned.

National banks in Oklahoma increased in individual deposits nearly five million dollars from November 26th to February 4th, as shown in the consolidated statement showing the condition of the banks Feb. 4th. The banks increased from 306 to 310 and in resources from $106,739,048 to $107,951,738. Individual deposits increased about five million dollars.

The Oklahoma State of Hugo, Okla., has suspended and its affairs are being straightened out by the First State of Hugo. The deposits were protected by the Oklahoma state guaranty fund.

The Farmers Guarantee State Bank is the name of a new institution that will be opened at Midlothian, Tex., soon with a capital stock of $20,000. Most of the stockholders are neighborhood farmers.

The organizers of the Commercial State of Emporia, Kan., announce that that institution will be ready for business May 1st. It will start with a capitalization of $100,000 and surplus of $10,000. The directors are F. M. Arnold, Lot Ravenscroft, R. C. Mayes, J. D. Biorkam and Mrs. F. M. Arnold of Ashland, Kan., and W. E. Stillwell of Kansas City, Kan. It will be the fifth bank for Emporia, the Lyon County State having been granted a charter recently.

Harold D. Copeland, son of E. L. Copeland, treasurer of the Santa Fe railroad and prominent in Kansas City banking circles for many years, has purchased an interest in the Central National at Junction City, Kan., and will become its vice-president April 1st. Mr. Copeland was with the Southwest National Bank of Kansas City when it was first organized and remained with it after it became consolidated with the National Bank of Commerce into the Southwest National Bank of Commerce. James T. Bradley, cashier of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce, went to Junction City with Mr. Copeland to see that he got a good start in his new position.

The following new banks have been incorporated in Texas: Guaranty State of Groveton, capital $25,000; First Guaranty State of Aubrey, capital $30,000; Farmers and Merchants State of Aubrey, capital $20,000; Citizens State of Petty, Lamar county, capital $50,000; Crosby State of Crosby, Harris county, capital $20,000 and Thrall State of Thrall, Williamson county, capital $10,000. The following reserve agents for Texas banks have been approved: For the Merchants and Farmers State of Elgin, the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas; for the First State Bank and Trust Company of Mineral Wells, the Merchants National of Dallas; for the Exchange State of Winnsboro, the Merchants National of Dallas and the Merchants Laclede National of St. Louis; for the Guaranty State of Lone Oak, the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company of Dallas.

Among the visitors in Kansas City, financial district last week were W. L. McKee, traveling representative of the Fort Dearborn National of Chicago; A. M. Young, western representative of the Mechanics and Metals National of New York; F. C. Whire, president of the Park National, Sulphur, Okla.; E. H. THE WORLD'S GOLD

Every time a new bank is organized—and the number rapidly is increasing—a certain amount of money must be withdrawn from circulation and put into that bank's reserve. This represents an increasing demand upon the world's money supply. What is going on in the United States is but typical of development in other countries. Canada and South America rapidly are enlarging their banking reserves. Immense amounts of gold will be sent to China to assist in the industrial development of that country. The final settlement of the Turkish problem will open the immense resources of the Balkan peninsula to exploitation, and it will require large amounts of money to carry on this new business.

In every part of the world, in immense regions which until recent years were untouched by civilization, railroads are being constructed, mines opened, farms developed and money—that is, gold—required.

In view of the small increases in the annual production of gold, and in view also of the certainty that the next decade will see large increases in the production of commodities and also in the demand for money, it is unreasonable to expect that prices will much longer continue to increase. The investor who has been discouraged by a decline in the prices of his fixed interest securities, and who has been tempted to sell them out at a sacrifice or to exchange them for bonds of less merit will do well to remember that economic history always repeats itself; that there have been periods of rising prices in the past, and that these always have been followed by other periods when prices were declining and bonds increasing in value.—Edward Sherwood Meade in Lippincotts.

GROWING INDIANA BANKS

Peoples National Bank and Peoples Loan and Trust Company of Rushville, Indiana, are affiliated institutions which have experienced a steady, consistent growth since their organization. Capital stock of each is $50,000; surplus and undivided profits of the former were $76,029 at the time of the last call and of the latter, $10,978. Deposits of the National were $397,954 and of the Trust Company, $350,043.

TO COUNT TREASURY CASH

When the new treasurer of the United States takes the oath of office, succeeding Carmi A. Thompson, the greatest count of money and securities in the history of the world will begin. When Mr. Thompson succeeded Lee McClung, $1,400,000 were turned over to him, for which he must account, and in addition, the millions which he has received since, less the disbursements.

NEW BANK EXAMINERS

Two new bank examiners have been appointed by the comptroller. They are James H. Kelleher of Montpelier, Vt., and Floyd Seybolt of Lincoln, Neb. Both of these gentlemen have had a long and valuable banking experience.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

The Minneapolis bankers plan a train to Duluth for the state convention, July 10-11, to go up by daylight the day before. The Duluthians are planning pleasant revenge on the bankers of cities which have entertained the members of the association at previous conventions.

The Tonka Bay hotel, Lake Minnetonka, scene of two state bankers' conventions in Minnesota, has fallen before the razer; but the pavilion which was the convention hall remains. The hotel was more than three decades old and was well known to tourists as well as bankers.

Better Farming Association to Conduct Corn Contest

A second statewide corn-growing contest will be conducted by the North Dakota Better Farming association during the coming summer. The contest will be similar to the one in which more than 500 farmers participated last summer, but this year will be confined to farm boys between the ages of 10 and 18 years. Prizes aggregating $700 will be awarded to the winners.

The contest held last year was so successful in stimulating the planting of corn that the new contest on a bigger scale has been planned by Secretary Thomas Cooper. The Roger Lumber Company of Minneapolis, President E. J. Weiser of the First National of Fargo, ex-Governor E. Y. Sarles of Hillsboro and Wesley C. McDowell of Marion have contributed the prize money.

The state will be divided into northern and southern sections and prizes aggregating $300 will be awarded in each district. A sweepstakes prize of $100 in gold will be awarded to the boy who makes the best showing, regardless of his location in the state. All awards will be made on the basis of mature corn.

James S. Porteous Dead

James S. Porteous, one of the interests in the organization of the Commercial National Bank in Minneapolis, and a director, died Sunday morning of purpura hemorrhagica, source and cure unknown, after a brief, sturdy fight against odds. Few men in business circles have been as well and kindly known as Mr. Porteous. When the Flour City National went into liquidation a few years ago after being absorbed by the Security National, as liquidating officer Mr. Porteous was president of the bank. He disposed of the assets over and above the amount transferred to the Security to cover the deposits at a large percentage over par. He was president of the Federal Security Company, one of the founders of the National Association of Building Managers, and an active member of the National Association of Real Estate Exchanges.

Tells Wonders of Burroughs

Shakopee, Minn., is on the map. For a kind deed to a local newspaper man he heralds to the world as follows:

"The First National bank has installed one of the new electric power Burroughs adding machines, and a technical exposition of its wonderful work recently was given by C. T. Weiland, the bank's popular assistant cashier. We are frank to say that we cannot put into type all the things that it will do; but it was made clear to us that two separate sets of figures, debit and credit, or page 1 and page 2, may be added at the same time, a date may be inserted for each item in a different color of ink, additions and subtractions may be made, as well as multiplications, with lightning rapidity, and without the possibility of an error in the computations, and a wire from an electric light socket furnishes the power to make the machine hump itself faster than a section crew coming down the Milwaukee track from the east at quitting time. Wonderful as the old machines are, this new one is amazing in its superhuman skill, and it would pay anyone to visit the bank to see it making light of the big business of the First National from day to day. A gas company making light of its patrons' complaints is not more clever than this Burroughs machine making light of the business of the bank by electricity. The machine has been placed in the bank on trial, but it is safe to say it will not be permitted to get away again."

New Minneapolis Bank

Lake Harriet district of Minneapolis is to have a $25,000 bank. They have clubs, churches, schools, parks and everything but a bank and a fire station and an undertaking shop, which they do not need.

F. A. Samuels, president of the new Citizens State, is to be president. Dr. A. H. Parks, alderman, former president of the Lake Harriet Commercial club, and Secretary Gordon V. Morse, familiarly known as "Remorse," have been instrumental in arousing interest in the banking preparations. F. J. Vinie, president of the State of Reeseville, Wis., is an interested factor. A bank building will be erected, and as the newspapers say, "it will be modern in every respect."

solvency of surety companies, the state board of deposits has asked reports from the state insurance company every three months on the conditions of each company doing business in the state. The loss which started the trouble is due to the cessation of business, Dec. 22d, by the Empire State Surety Company of New York. This company bonded the Standard Drainage Company, insolvent, which failed to complete a state ditch.

From the evidence presented to the board, the Empire Company sold all its good risks to the National Surety Company on August 22d. Owing to the failure of the New York insurance officials to notify the Minnesota department of the deal, the bond was allowed to stand, and when the Standard Drainage Company failed to complete the job the surety people were asked to do the work. They also failed and the state was compelled to complete the ditch at a cost of $4,000 more than the contract price.

The board found that two small banks in the northern part of the state had given bonds in the Empire Company to protect state deposits and they were notified to furnish new securities. There is no immediate danger of loss from this source as there is no state money on deposit in any banks outside the Twin Cities at present.

This is not the first time the state has lost on similar transactions. The United Surety Company of Baltimore, which went into the hands of a receiver, March 1, 1910, and the Bankers Surety Company of Cleveland, which quit business, November 30, 1911, also had furnished bonds for ditch contractors who failed to do their work.

Mankato Bank to Have New Building

First National of Mankato, Minn., after thirty-seven years has vacated its old bank building which is to be torn down and replaced with a fine, new building. The bank temporarily will occupy a new building in the rear of its present structure. The corner is the original banking site of the city, occupied by the private bank of J. J. Thornton and Company. The first deed in the county covered the corner, on which was erected a one-story frame building. The First National was organized in 1868 and on September 10th, same year, it took over the Thornton Bank. George M. Palmer was elected president in 1904 and W. D. Willard, cashier in 1901.

Railroads to Spend Huge Sum

Four railroads centering in the Twin Cities will spend $65,000,000 in 1913 to facilitate the movement of the general crop on next fall, which is expected to surpass in volume the 1912 results of soil culture in the district. These roads are the Great Northern, Northern Pacific, Omaha and Milwaukee roads. The Great Northern will buy 14,000 units of rolling stock to cost about $10,000.

Northwest Notes

County Auditor R. V. Bice of Devils Lake, N. D., has resigned to become cashier of the First National Bank. He was just re-elected for the third time. R. J. Drake, cashier, is going to return to his old home in Becker county, Minn.

The Milnor State (N. D.), gutted by fire as to its building, sustained a loss of about $4,000. The bank is using its old building until the burned structure is remodeled.

Bank rumors are flying about Williston, N. D. One is that Twin City men will start a $50,000 bank. Another is that the Citizens National and the First National are to get together.

George A. Lyon, assistant cashier of the First National, is one of the incorporators of the Minneapolis Athletic club, which proposes to erect a $300,000 building.

Rochester, Minn., has fallen into line and will have a school savings system to teach the pupils saving and first principles of banking. Between the present and the opening of the new year the school directors will investigate similar systems. A banker will take charge of the fund and the children will get pass books. Certain days will be set aside for depositing.

James C. Caldwell, president of the First National of Lakefield, Minn., has been named a member of the commission to the international institute of agriculture next May in Rome. Mr. Caldwell will attend a southern conference on agricultural educatoin April 15-18 at Richmond. Then he will go to New York to sail.

Partial change of ownership is under way with the Peoples State of Humboldt, Iowa. Frank Carey of Fort Dodge and F. A. Ayers of Lytton will take over stock held by non-residents. G. L. Tremain, president since the bank began in 1881, retains his interest and position.

Pierre Wibaux, president of the First State National of Miles City, Mont., once the largest individual owner of cattle in the United States, for whom Wibaux, Mont., was named, is dead. He arrived in 1880 from Roubaix, France, and located on Beaver Creek, Dawson county. He established Mingusville, and the people changed it to Wibaux. Wibaux was one of the wealthy men of the state.

Plans have been revised for the Farmers National at Hutchinson, Minn. because of new details, including polished gray St. Cloud granite for the front and white enamel terra cotta trim. Bids are called for April 9th.

Dakota bankers in the vicinity of Watertown held their group bank meeting, Wednesday, at that city. E. L. Mattson, cashier for the Scandinavian American National, was on the program. Several Twin City bankers attended the meeting.

C. L. Mosher, secretary of the Citizens League of Minnesota, talked currency and banking reform to the Minneapolis Association of Office Men, much to their illumination, at their March meeting.

currency board in connection with the treasury department of the United States and for the incorporation of associations of reserve and discount." The currency board referred to is to consist of five persons beside the secretary of the treasury and the comptroller of the currency, these five to be appointed by the president. The board as thus constituted is to establish in cities which it may select from time to time, "associations of reserve and discount" organized with shares of stock of $100 each, held by the several banks and trust companies in the districts within which such associations are organized in sums not to exceed 20 per cent of their capitals. The "associations of reserve and discount" are then to begin doing a rediscount business with the member banks along the same lines that were mapped out in the Aldrich currency bill. The currency board is to supervise the operations of the banks or "associations of reserve and discount" and in this work it is to be aided by a board of advisory appointees who are to be named after a manner prescribed in the bill.

Issue of Notes

Bank notes are to be issued by the currency board upon the deposit with it of selected paper left by the associations of reserve and discount which thus practically are able to get gold redeemable notes when they desire from the board, the latter, however, being charged with the duty of maintaining the gold stock behind them, notwithstanding that it has no banking powers as such and consequently would be obliged to resort to bond sales or something of the kind in order to get the funds it needed in this connection. The bill contains several long and unintelligible sections with regard to, and terms and conditions of, issue of such notes, and it is provided that the notes are to be practically legal tender. Altogether the note issue sections of the bill seem to be a kind of modernized inflation scheme, designed for the purpose of providing abundance of currency as a "need" for it arises or is expressed. The government bonds now held by the banks are to be converted into three per cent bonds, and a plan for "indemnifying" the government through the payment of certain sums out of the earnings of the "associations of reserve and discount" is introduced. Altogether the plan copies some of the less satisfactory features of the Aldrich plan, groups a few new ones which are about equally unsatisfactory, and jumbles together an additional job lot of ideas drawn from other currency propositions. This makes up the tentative progressive programme.

ADDRESSES BOND MEN'S CLUB

John E. Blunt, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust, addressed the Bond Men's Club of Chicago on Thursday of this week at its regular weekly luncheon.

He spoke of the large growth of the bond business in Chicago during the last few years and commented on the "Blue Sky" law of Kansas and the copies of it that have been introduced in the legislatures of various states.

COMMISSION TO REVISE BANKING LAW

A bill has been introduced in the New York legislature authorizing the superintendent of banks to appoint a commission of five persons having a technical knowledge of banking, to prepare a revision of the banking law of the state so as to make it adaptable to present conditions; said report to be submitted to the legislature on or before February 1, 1914.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Although the recent Washington legislature dabbled somewhat in bank legislation, no bill radically and vitally affecting the banking situation was passed.

"Probably the most important of all those introduced and passed," said R. Lewis Rutter, vice-president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, "was senate bill No. 369, relating to private banks, and requiring all private banks to come under state supervision on and after January 1, 1915. The effect of this is to eliminate the private institution altogether, which is necessary as a measure of protection to the public." This bill has, in an amended form which releases building and loan associations from its operation, passed both houses and awaits the signature of Governor Lister.

Three banking bills already have the gubernatorial signature. These are house bill No. 18, which permits a member of the staff of a bank to act as a notary public, not heretofore lawful; senate bill No. 14, permitting banks to carry real estate five years instead of three; and house bill No. 27, which makes it a punishable offense to libel a banking institution. Other banking bills awaiting the governor's signature are: One permitting unlimited joint accounts to be withdrawn before or after death; a municipal deposit bill for cities of the first class; a uniform warehouse receipt bill. Among bills killed perhaps the most interesting was one which sought to establish the mutual savings bank. This passed the senate, but failed in the house.

With Christmas still a long distance in the future the Fidelity National of Spokane has started a novel Christmas savings club fund. The club opened March 17th and consists of three classes. In class 5, each member pays 5 cents the first week, 10 cents the second week, 15 cents the third week, and so on with an added 5 cents for each payment, and at the end of 38 weeks the bank will pay each depositor $37.05 and 4 per cent interest. In class 2, each member pays 2 cents the first week, adding 2 cents for successive weeks, and will get $14.82 and 4 per cent interest. Members of class 1 pay 50 cents a week for 38 weeks and are to receive $19 and 4 per cent interest.

Through the efforts of the Spokane Ad Club and similar organizations in Seattle and Tacoma a law has been enacted in the state of Washington designed to eliminate fraudulent and untruthful advertising. President R. E. Bigelow of the Spokane club has appointed a vigilance committee to peruse all advertising issued in Spokane, and to prosecute offenders. The law puts the ban on "bankrupt," "wrecked," or "damaged" stock sales that are not exactly what they are said to be. If goods are represented to possess a certain quality, if they are offered at "wholesale prices," or if other extravagant assertions are made, the dealer must be able to substantiate his statements.

Due to failure to locate the holder of ten $1,000 city water bonds, the city of Spokane is $10,000 richer. The bonds were issued in 1891 and were due for redemption October 1, 1911, since which time the city has tried unsuccessfully to locate the holder of 10 of the bonds. The city has kept $10,000 on deposit in New York, and the Spokane commissioners recently voted to authorize withdrawal of the money and placing it in the city sinking fund, where it will draw 4½ per cent interest and await the possibility of the lost bonds appearing for redemption.

By putting on double shifts and working to full capacity, the company in charge of excavating and building piers and area walls for the $2,000,000 Davenport hotel expects to have things ready for steel construction April 1st. Practically all cement for the area walls has been poured, and excavation is about completed. Below the surface of the basement 150 cement piers have been poured. On these will rest the entire weight of the 13-story hotel building. In some instances the piers were sunk 20 feet; in others bedrock was struck in less than a foot.

Articles of incorporation have been filed by the Realty Mortgage Company, A. E. Gallagher and C. J. Winters being named as incorporators. Capitalization is stated to be $50,000. The company is formed by R. R. Rogers and F. J. Holman of the Vermont Loan and Trust Company, of Spokane, and John W. Smead of Greenfield, Mass., together with other parties, mostly of Lewistown, Mont., for the purpose of handling a general farm mortgage and loan business, chiefly throughout the state of Montana. Western headquarters have been established at Lewistown, Mont. John W. Smead is president and will be in active charge, with eastern offices at Greenfield, Mass. F. J. Holman was chosen vice-president, and R. R. Rogers, secretary-treasurer. A. E. Gallagher, who has been counsel for the Vermont Loan and Trust Company, is attorney for the new company.

The Northern Pacific will move into its new shops at Yardley, on the eastern outskirts of Spokane, about May 1st. One hundred men are employed putting the shops in readiness.

EDMONTON NEWS

Edmonton, Alta., March 25th.—One hundred and nineteen thousand four hundred and twenty-six homesteads, of which 40,000, each of 160 acres, are in the Edmonton country, taking in the Peace River and Athabasca districts, will be opened to settlement this year through the completion of the branch lines under construction for the Canadian Northern Railway Company in the provinces of Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba. The total acreage is 19,008,160. The homesteads in the eight districts are all within 10 miles of the railroad, in parcels of 160 acres, as follows:

Peace River and Athabasca, 8,000; west of Edmonton, 32,000; North Battleford, Sask., 20,000; Brazeau, Alta., 2,000; Prince Albert, Sask., 20,000; Moose Jaw, Sask., 5,000; Dauphin, Man., 7,426; Lake Winnipeg, Man., 18,000 and Oak Point, Man., 7,000.

Osborne Scott, assistant general passenger agent of the Canadian Northern Railway Company, said in Edmonton that the land is admirably adapted to mixed farming, while the acreage in the Moose Jaw district probably is fitted best for grain, being rich prairie loam.

Most of the available land in Edmonton district and the hinterland was not accessible on account of the lack of adequate transportation facilities, but now that the Canadian Northern and the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway Companies have pushed their highways of steel to the fringe of the 55th parallel there has been opened a veritable empire in the north country. Large areas also have been opened in western Alberta and in the provinces of Saskatchewan and Manitoba by the completion of branch lines.

More than 4,500 homesteads, each of 160 acres, were filed on in the Edmonton district during 1912, when a score or more rural settlements also were established. It is predicted by officials of the land departments that fully 10,000 homesteads will be entered this year. The settlers this season are principally from the British Isles, eastern Canada and various parts of the United States. It is expected that between 30 and 40 villages will be organized before the close of 1913.

"The increase in the population of Alberta during 1912 was not less than 90,000 in round numbers, according to the most reliable information that has come to this department," said the Hon. Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture, at the parliament buildings in Edmonton. "The population of the province was 500,000 at the beginning of 1913; we confidently expect it will be 650,000 at the end of the year. While the cities are growing rapidly, a large percentage of newcomers is taking up farming lands. This is as it should be. The development and settlement of the country is the best assurance of the growth and progress of the cities.

"There is land and room in the province of Alberta, as well as in the coast and other prairie provinces, for millions of settlers who are earnest and ambitious. Homesteading is difficult, I know, but the settler who is not afraid of hard work at the beginning can earn a competence and independence in a few years. No city in the world offers such inducements, even to the brainiest or most skilled workers."

The settlement of the homestead lands will mean the establishment of stores of all kinds, the importation of farm implements and other machinery to develop the varied resources. Business in the principal distributing centers of the provinces is bound to be more active as a result, and in turn larger orders will be placed with manufacturers at home as well as in various parts of the continent and abroad.

JONCE MONIHAN SEEKS POSITION

Indianapolis, March 25th.—Jonce Monihan, of Orleans, formerly a republican candidate for treasurer of state, is an active candidate for the republican appointment on the public service commission. He has entered the fight through several of his democratic friends at the statehouse, and, it is said, has sent in a formal application for the appointment. Mr. Monihan is a well-known banker, having served Indiana as her representative on the A. B. A. executive council.

Mechanical Power in Agriculture

The manufacturing industries of America need skilled laborers. The farm under broad rational treatment is equal to even greater things in the way of maintenance of those who are pressed into service in the factories. Scientific management of the soil, the use of fertilizers, machines and power that will cultivate more intensively, and above all, the solution of a credit system whereby the farmer can borrow money cheaply for the needed improvements, all will make possible the generous feeding of millions of Americans who will be added to the payrolls in shops and factories.

The average farm laborer uses four times as many animals to draw machines as the laborer of 1850, the animals are approximately 25 per cent more efficient, and the producing power of the present farm hand is approximately five times what it was at the earlier date. But farm machinery is not complete without the power that moves it, and while farm machinery has been marvelously improved in the last half century the power for driving it remained the same for centuries previous to the last decade. Animals have been improved but little by several centuries of careful breeding and selection, as compared with the giant strides made lately in steam and internal-combustion engines for the farm. However, not until the high cost of human food called attention to the fact that we were feeding the products of one tilled acre in every five to our 25,000,000 farm work animals was mechanical power seriously considered a factor in promoting the cause of agriculture.

The horse works only one hour and loafs eight, averaging up 365 days in the year. For each day he works, he must have 27 minutes of some man's time in feeding, watering, harnessing and currying. This work must go on day in and day out, morning, noon and night, tying the farmer down to a drudging routine for many months in the year in order to be ready for the heavy work of four. The horse can work hard only six or eight hours a day without exhaustion, and is subject to disease and premature death in time of greatest need. He is slow to reproduce and requires an army of idlers, old and young, in order to insure a full quota of the fit in rush seasons.

Plowing and harvesting are peak-loads in agriculture. To be ready for the work that is concentrated in a few spring and midsummer weeks, the farmer must maintain for twelve months the maximum of potential power that he can afford. Every added inch in depth of plowing can come only at the expense of maintaining idle animals throughout four-fifths of the year, for in the plowing season every available beast already is worked to the limit. Maximum yields, through deeper plowing, are impossible with animal power, simply because the animal's endurance is limited in busy times, and yet when work is slack he keeps on consuming like an engine with steam up, running at no load.

Not only the plow, but the binder, the mower, the drill, the harrow and the wagon, demand an improvement in the power ahead. With the rush to the wheat fields there came an evolution of the stationary steam engine into an engine on wheels and finally a self-propelling thing that went from place to place and pulled the threshing separator after it. Men with vision saw in this useful monster a solution of the awful problem of breaking up the stubborn prairie sod, crumbling it into loose soil, planting and harvesting the crop. And so they hitched plows behind these engines—crude, light, unwieldy groups of horse plows, that broke at the first hard tug of the insensible mechanism, tangled into hopeless confusion at every turn and sorely tried the patience of the pioneer traction plowman. But one after another of these visionaries solved his individual problem, and by and by the makers of engines, some gladly, some pooh-poohing the idea, swung into line and brought out huge steam plowing tractors. Behind these great engines, horse plows went to the junk heap in rapid succession, and finally there came the engine gang of three to a dozen plows and even more. Gradually the plow maker strengthened his product, made it more flexible, and added adjustments. Long before the tractor man fully realized the boundless possibilities that lay in the substitution of mechanical for animal power, the maker of the engine gang plow had his problem well in hand, and every tractor sold opened the sure market for a three to twelve hundred dollar plow.

And so it is that with the purchase of a single tractor the way to the sales of many other machines, which necessarily must depend upon it for their power, is opened up.

FURTHER PRIVATE BANK RESTRICTIONS

Albany, March 24th.—Private bankers will be affected by the enactment of a bill of Assemblyman Sufrin which amends the general business law by providing that every person, firm, association or corporation engaged in the private banking business shall, in addition to the regulation provided in the general business law, hereafter be under the supervision of the superintendent of banks and be subject to all the provisions of the banking law relative to individual bankers, regardless of the fact that they may have on deposit with the state comptroller or other public officer money or securities amounting to $100,000 and upward.

Assemblyman Walker has a bill which amends the general corporation law by prohibiting the use of "casualty," "surety," or "fidelity" by an organization or corporation as part of its name unless organized under the banking or insurance laws.

John L. Mitchell, vice-president of the Live Stock National at Sioux City, recently was put on the directory board of the institution.

E. W. Clark, for several years connected with the City National and the Iowa State, both at Mason City, has been elected treasurer of the Mason City Loan and Trust.

Des Moines, March 27th.—The executive council of the Iowa Bankers Association at the regular quarterly meeting held in the office of Secretary P. W. Hall last week decided that one of the programs during the state convention in May shall be held at Ames. One afternoon will be spent doing the colleges and hearing an address from W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central, who speaks at Ames at that time. The Des Moines Clearing House Association had decided that the convention should remain in Des Moines the entire two days, but the council of administration, after a conference with Des Moines bankers, determined differently. The trip to Ames will not, however, be a part of the entertainment which the Des Moines bankers will furnish. The bankers will pay their own expenses on this side trip. The fact that the bankers are deeply interested in the gospel of agriculture is responsible for the action of the executive council in voting to see how Ames College does things. President Brown will talk upon agricultural topics. He is a former Iowan and owns land in southern Iowa, to which it is said he is going to retire within a short time.

The program for the state convention was discussed. It was determined to renew efforts to secure Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo to take part on the program. R. A. Pearson, president of Ames College, also has consented to speak. Four members were not present at the meeting. President Shade is in California, and others not in attendance included Charles Hannan of Council Bluffs, treasurer of the I. B. A.; T. S. Hansen of Northwood, B. E. Hakes of Williamsburg and H. S. Young of Winfield. F. B. Fry, cashier of the City State at Corydon, made his initial bow as a member of the council. He was elected chairman of Group Nine to succeed Webb Hultz, vice-president of the State Savings at Chariton, who resigned from the chairmanship as well as the bank because of ill health.

Hall's Assistant Resigns

Miss Grace Edington, assistant to Secretary Hall of the I. B. A., has resigned that position to return to her former home at Sheldon. As a token of appreciation of her services, the members of the council of administration presented Miss Edington with a very beautiful la valliere. She will be missed by everyone who visits Secretary Hall but most of all by Mr. Hall who has found her most efficient in the work of keeping the association progressing.

Legislative Situation

The Iowa legislature knocked out the bill prohibiting the circulation of derogatory statements concerning banks and bank officials. The Webber bill permitting the payment of directors in a reasonable amount passed the senate and appears to be a winner. Other bank legislation pending has been held in abeyance up to the time of writing. The bill to provide for state inspection of private banks appears to be a loser. The bill providing for the handling of postal savings bank funds by state and savings banks passed the senate and seems a winner. It authorizes them to deposit funds in the treasury at Washington for the purpose of securing postal funds.

Tight Money in Des Moines

Des Moines bankers report that money is for the most part rather tight. Collections are slow because of this fact and the bankers are holding onto the money, unless the best of securities can be furnished for loans. It is anticipated that money will be tight the most of the summer.

Banker's Daughter to Wed

Announcement has been made of the marriage, this fall, of Miss Erma Louise Wohlenberg, daughter of C. J. Wohlenburg, cashier of the Holstein Savings. E. Gordon Fox of Fort Wayne, Ind., is the fortunate man. Father Wohlenberg was one of the live ones attending the council of administration meeting in Des Moines last week, and is one of the best known Iowa bankers.

Des Moines Visitors

The presence in Des Moines of Secretary of State William J. Bryan last week, brought a big group of democratic bankers to Des Moines. They were so busy, however, that it was not possible to get their names. Other out-of-the-city bankers who visited in Des Moines within recent days include the following: Cashier R. A. Clarke, Corn Exchange at Elkhart; President J. J. Taylor, Bank of Adel; Cashier J. C. Cozad, Decatur Citizens; President H. M. Rining, Lorimer Bank; Cashier C. O. Hasbrouck, Ames Savings; Cashier Fred Gray, Citizens Savings, Casey; Assistant Cashier J. W. Wadsworth, Kossuth County Bank, Algona; President Parley Sheldon, Story County Bank, Ames; Cashier N. A. Williams, Bank of Reasnor; Cashier F. L. Johnson, Bank of Bondurant; President E. W. Townsend, Citizens at Lake City; Assistant Cashier C. C. Couch, Citizens State, Earlham; President B. D. Forshay, Citizens Savings, Anita; Cashier M. B. Wheelock, Citizens State, Colfax; Cashier H. S. Fleagle, Fernald State; James P. McManus, First National, Chicago; President

H. J. Garlock, State at Maxwell; Assistant Cashier R. Geise, State Bank at Baxter; Cashier W. W. Walker, Macksburg National; Cashier W. H. Weir, Macksburg National; Assistant Cashier Miss Z. M. Hamman, State at Madrid; Cashier F. L. Sharon, Farmers and Drovers at Buffalo Center; Cashier R. D. Aitchison, First National, Colfax.

Important Bank Change

An important change is announced in the First Savings at Reinbeck, where the Pierce interests have been taken over by local capitalists who have effected a reorganization. The Pierces controlled 83 per cent of the stock. Under the reorganization, E. K. Greene is president; Senator Sherman De Wolf, vice-president; Elias Beaver, cashier. The latter has been cashier under the former management.

Group 6 to Meet

The program for the meeting of Group Six which will he held at Des Moines, April 10th, is nearing completion. As in former years the meeting will be held only in the evening. The bankers will attend a reception at the Savery in the afternoon. Then the dinner will be served and the program will be a feature of the dinner. H. M. Harwood, formerly a Des Moines newspaper man but now doing publicity work at the state university, will give his illustrated lecture on "Iowa's Assets." Mr. Harwood has studied Iowa until he has it down to a fine system. John Fletcher, vice-president of the Drovers Deposit National of Chicago, will speak on "Analysis of the Business of the Bank." Mr. Fletcher formerly was cashier of the Cedar Rapids National and is well known in Iowa. J. A. S. Pollard, the distinguished humorist from Fort Madison, has been invited to speak and it is hoped he will see fit to accept. Plans for 250 guests are being made.

Des Moines Police Make Raid

Des Moines police last week gathered in a bunch of yeggs wanted for a safe-blowing stunt in Omaha and believed to be connected with some of the numerous bank robberies in Iowa, Nebraska and South Dakota of recent months. The tip that the gang was in Des Moines came from the Omaha police. Des Moines detectives were informed that a dog would be shipped to a Des Moines address and that if the recipient of the animal were followed, arrests would be possible. Accordingly three local sleuths were put on the case. Eventually the dog arrived, the man who called for him was shadowed and in this way the gang was captured. The men are John Connors, alias "Scarfaced Jack"; F. T. Simms, alias John Lewis; Charles Hildebrand and Tom Concord. With the men were Mrs. Simms and two little children, Mrs. Hildebrand and Mrs. Concord. In the house the detectives recovered a bunch of wicked looking revolvers, quantities of nitroglycerin, soap, glycerin fuses and other materials used by expert safecrackers.

Iowa Notes

Secretary Percy W. Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association has received notices of the dates of some more of the Iowa group meetings. These are as follows: Number 1, Holstein, April 17th; Group 2, Emmetsburg, May 14th; Group 3, Council Bluffs, May 8th; Group 6, Des Moines, April 10th; Group 9, Corydon, May 17th. Group 4 of McGregor has changed the date of its meeting to May 13th.

Dr. Clarence Wassam of the state university, Iowa City, who has made a study of the loan shark problem, lectured in Des Moines recently upon how to regulate the usurious money lender. His lecture was especially interesting in view of attempts to pass some legislation at the present session of the general assembly relative to regulation of the loan shark. Dr. Wassam recommends that all loan companies be required to take out state charters; that a minimum charge for loans be fixed; that loan companies be inspected under the auspices of the state banking department just as are state and savings banks; that each loan company keep a record of the amounts loaned, the charges made and the time of the loan; that loan agents report regularly to the state banking department as to the condition of the business.

The city council of Des Moines is feeling quite joyous because in the past year it has received as interest on city funds nearly $10,000. This was on daily deposits.

D. F. McKee, vice-president of the Iowa Loan and Trust Company, who recently removed to Des Moines from Davenport, has purchased a fine home at Forty-second between Grand and Ingersoll, Des Moines.

The directors of the German Savings, Davenport, last week declared a quarterly dividend of 4 per cent on a capitalization of $500,000. The dividend is payable April 1st.

W. S. Arthurs and J. R. Gardiner have purchased 77 shares in the Dilenbeck Savings at Bouton of B. C. Dilenbeck. Arthurs and Gardiner now own 97 shares out of 159.

Homer A. Miller, president of the Iowa National, Des Moines, has been in Atlanta, Ga., where it is said he has been playing golf on the Millionaire Golf Club links.

The greater Des Moines committee is following out its custom of past years in urging the farmers to test their seed corn via the bank route. Every banker in Iowa is being importuned to take an active interest in getting the farmers busy.

The Winneshiek County State at Decorah is preparing to build a new home, according to announcement made by President C. J. Wesier. The bank had assets of $400,000 twenty years ago; now it has $1,600,000, an increase of 400 per cent.

C. B. Miles, vice-president of the Peoples Trust and Savings at Clinton, has gone to Minneapolis to become secretary and treasurer of the Lafayette Lamb Company. Mr. Mills is interested in nine Iowa banks.

A. W. Rakow is reported to be the leading spirit in a new bank at Argyle.

The Citizens State is a new institution at Monona. It will absorb the Monona State. The capital will be $25,000 with John Killen, president.

South Dakota Notes

The First National of Yankton celebrated the fortieth anniversary of the founding of the institution most appropriately. Throughout the day people were invited to the institution. Music was a feature and flowers were given out. The building was beautifully decorated. In the evening a banquet was given and the guests included 200 residents of the vicinity who were there when the bank was started in 1872.

L. Roy Klatt has been advanced from assistant to cashier in the Dakota State at Tripp, He succeeds L. F. Kliebenstein, resigned. Mr. Klatt is a son of the president of the bank, Henry Klatt, Jr. John Unruh, formerly assistant cashier of the German Bank at Avon, has been made assistant cashier of the Dakota State.

Lowell F. Lillinbridge, a banker from Burke, and Mrs. Kincheloe, also a resident of Burke, were married last week at Council Bluffs.

The Citizens at Letcher has doubled its capital stock from $10,000 to $20,000.

The First National and the Farmers State at South Shore have decided to merge interests. The same officers will remain in the service of the one institution temporarily.

E. A. Syverson of the Commercial of Watertown and C. A. Chase of Vienna have purchased S. D. Boyd's interest in the Henry State at Henry. Mr. Boyd retires after several years as cashier and Mr. Chase succeeds him.

The First State at Elkton has extended its charter for a period of twenty years.

Edward Kenny is president and S. G. Eggleston cashier of the State of Bancroft, which has reorganized. Mr. Kenny recently has purchased an interest in the institution.

NEW ENGLAND BANK ON THE SITUATION

First National of Boston in commenting on the business situation in New England, said:

"New England is maintaining a volume of business substantially larger than at this time last year. The improvement in business sentiment, which became noticeable in February continues. In general, demand is large, while supply is being held in control by business men who are endeavoring to give due weight to the several factors of the situation. In most lines of New England industry the new tariff has been largely discounted, and matters put in shape for the 'operation.' It commonly is conceded that if tariff revision must take place, it could not come at a more opportune period. The much talked of general falling off in business thus far has failed to materialize. In its place has come a slight relaxation of conservatism, the statistics recording a slightly freer movement in trade. A marked expansion in trade activity is being kept in check, not by absence of demand nor greatly by fear of tariff revision, but rather through fear of the acute money situation.

"Mills and factories as a rule have plenty to do, except where strikes have caused a temporary interruption, as in the worsted and woolen industry. Ample employment is assured for some time to come, as manufacturing concerns are some distance away from the end of their orders. In certain cases, shortage of labor rather than lack of demand for goods is the disturbing factor. Trans-shipments of grain continue in good bulk, and materially help in sustaining the good record of railroad gross earnings established in January. The opening of Great Lakes navigation will afford a further addition to this traffic. Spring buying has been confident and energetic, stimulated by the proximity of Easter, while our most recent foreign trade statement shows record-breaking transactions, not only of imports but of exports as well.

"With a conspicuous absence of speculation and with reports of somewhat more satisfactory net profits, the general trade situation is stronger than a month ago. Business men are moving with great caution, however, as collections are slow and the necessity for borrowing correspondingly large."

Frank W. Blair, president of the Union Trust, and Emory W. Clark, president of the First National of Detroit, have been elected directors of the Michigan State Telephone Company.

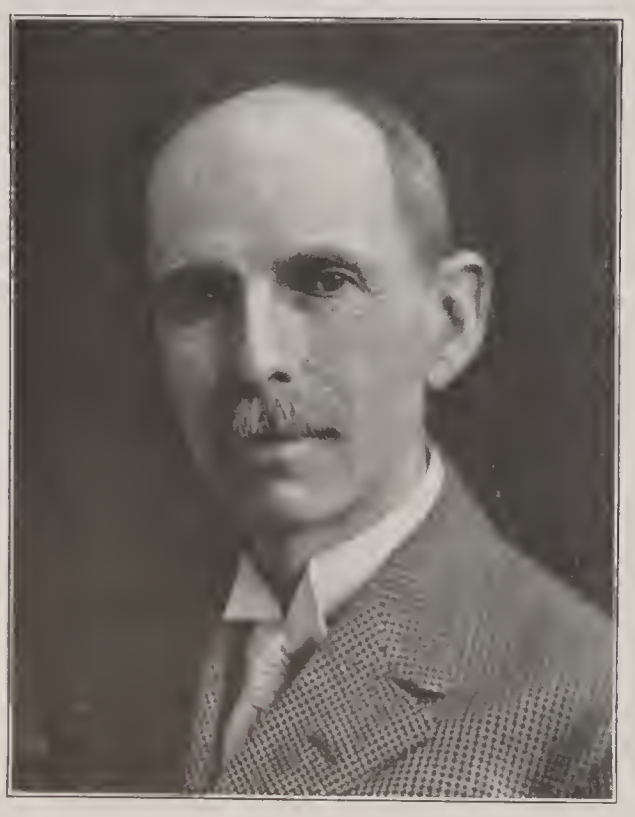
WOODLAWN TRUST HOLDS HOUSE-WARMING

Thursday evening, March 27th, was the scene of an enthusiastic housewarming in the recently remodeled quarters of the Woodlawn



CHARLES M. POAGUE
President Woodlawn Trust and Savings

Trust and Savings at 1204 East 63d Street, Chicago. All of the conveniences seen in a modern, up-to-date bank are found in the present home of the Woodlawn Trust, a picture of whose interior appears on this page.

This progressive institution was organized as the Woodlawn Bank, a private institution and was taken over by McKey and Poague in 1896 and operated by them for a number of years—first at the corner of Madison Avenue and 63d Street and later at the corner of Monroe Avenue and 63d. In 1904 the present building was erected and in 1905 the bank organized as a state institution, changing its name to the Woodlawn Trust and Savings Bank. Capital stock now is $200,000 and surplus and profits amount to $95,000. Deposits at the time of the last call were $1,533,514. An idea of the rapid growth of the bank is obtained by a comparison of the deposit figures during the last five years, which were $780,352 in 1909 as compared with the figures given above on February 5, 1913. Officers of the bank are as follows: Charles M. Poague, president; Emil Webbles, vice-president; John W. Watson, cashier, and Theodore Jessup, assistant cashier. Directors are J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National; William D. McKey, McKey and Poague, real estate; Lemuel B. Patterson, director, Drovers Deposit National; Charles M. Poague, Arthur W. Tobias of McKey and Poague, and Emil Webbles.

Mr. Poague recently was elected president of the Woodlawn Trust, taking the place of W. D. McKey who resigned. Mr. Webbles was elected vice-president to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Poague's election to the presidency.

Interior of Woodlawn Trust & Savings, Chicago

After practicing law in Ohio, his native state, for nine years, Mr. Poague came to Chicago and formed the well-known real estate firm of

EMIL WEBBLES
Vice-President Woodlawn Trust and Savings

McKey and Poague. Since 1893 he has been in charge of the 63d Street branch office of the firm. He was vice-president of the Woodlawn Trust from 1905 until his election as president.

Mr. Webbles is an Iowa product, coming from a state which is conspicuous for its excellent bankers. He began his career as a telegraph operator and station agent for the North Western, leaving the railway after a service of four years. In 1900 he was elected assistant cashier of the Peoples Savings of Grand Mound, under the present cashier, J. W. Reihman, remaining with that institution until September, 1903, when he accepted a position as cashier with the Mechanicsville Savings, a new bank. In March, 1910, he was elected vice-president of the Schoonover Trust Company and cashier of the Anamosa National of Anamosa, Iowa, continuing in those capacities until his removal to Chicago as vice-president of the Woodlawn Trust and Savings.

The reception tendered the public lasted from seven until ten o'clock and was largely attended, the management being the recipients of many congratulations as a result of the attractive quarters. The Woodlawn Trust has enjoyed a consistent growth since its organization, and the conservative policy pursued in its management has played no small part in this growth and development. The character of the bank's officers and directors who have been in charge of its affairs has been a potential factor in the reputation which the institution enjoys for stability.

senators have not been chosen, and as this change will take place before another session is called in any other state, I think it is fair to say you will have furnished the last of these contests.

"This fight began twenty-one years ago It is nearly twenty-one years ago that the house of representatives voted in favor of the resolution submitting this amendment, but the senate refused to act. Since that time the house has passed this resolution four times more. Six times the house acted.

Convention System to Go

"The senate refused to act until the last time. Five times it refused, but at last the pressure became so great that the senate joined with the house and the proposition was submitted.

"And while we have been changing the method of election, we have been changing the methods of conventions, and the primary system has been spreading over the land and it will not turn back.

"I believe we have seen the last great national convention this country ever will see; that before another presidential election rolls around we will have the presidential primary in so many of the states that our next candidates will be chosen not by delegates at conventions but by the people at home, and the men selected will, when elected, be the servants of all the people and not obligated to a few men for the honor of being elected."

The CHICAGO BANKER

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking and Financial Interests of the Middle West

APRIL 5, 1913 — Entered as Second-Class Matter January 15, 1903, at the Post Office at Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879 — 10 CENTS A COPY

BIG NEW BANK FOR CHICAGO

Springfield, Ill., April 3d.—Auditor of Public Accounts Brady to-day issued a permit to Ira D. Buck, C. S. Goodwin and Frank D. Follansbee to organize the Bankers Bank of America at Chicago, with a capital stock of $3,000,000. He also issued a permit to A. M. Hill, F. Kaufmann and S. Schack to organize the Public Trust & Savings Bank at Chicago, with a capital stock of $300,000.

GETTING THOSE FORTY MEMBERS

It ought to be easy for our six big members of the A. B. A. executive council in Illinois to secure the needed forty members which will give this state an additional member. The active workers referred to are N. H. Greene, E. E. Crabtree, W. G. Edens, W. T. Fenton, F. A. Crandall, Ralph VanVechten and J. Fletcher Farrell, treasurer. That will be only six apiece. Not a man of them but can do it, and do it easy. Then Illinois will rank with Pennsylvania.

WEST TOWN STATE BANK

The West Town State Bank, recently organized, has acquired real estate for the erection of its new building at the corner of Madison Street and Western Avenue. Pending the completion of the building about May 1st the bank will occupy temporary quarters at 2325 West Madison Street. Robert Forgan, formerly cashier of the Mid-City Trust and Savings, will be president, and Scott Ransom, formerly with the Prairie State, will be cashier. The capital stock will be $200,000 and surplus of $40,000.

CHICAGO BANKS SEND OUT CASH

Chicago banks shipped nearly $19,000,000 in currency to outside banks during March and received from direct outside shipping sources a little more than $8,000,000. The excess of shipments during the month was $10,600,000.

While some of the currency shipped went to New York, the amount was small compared with the total. The currency demand from western banks was heavy. In the first three months this year local banks shipped $7,000,000 more currency than they received from all outside sources.

EAST ST. LOUIS BANKER DEAD

Officers of the Illinois State Trust Company Bank of East St. Louis announce the death of their associate, Louis B. Washburn, vice-president, who died March 31st. Mr. Washburn formerly was secretary and treasurer of the Citizens Savings and Trust Company of East St. Louis and one of the leading lawyers of that city.

PLANS CURRENCY REFORMS

Washington, April 3d.—Senator Weeks of Massachusetts announced to-day he would reintroduce the bill for currency reform prepared by the national monetary commission, which died of inaction at the last congress.

Reservations for the Briarcliff Special

Members of the Big Council of the American Bankers Association had quite a serious time of it this year deciding where to hold the mid-year session. Some one started a movement that was in favor of holding the May meeting at a popular southern resort. Later on objections were made that not sufficient rooms with baths could be had and that the railroad transportation was a difficult matter. The final decision hung fire until General Secretary Fred E. Farnsworth hit upon a plan of settling it by a referendum vote. Printed ballots were distributed to all members of the council including proposals from Virginia Hot Springs, Atlantic City and Briarcliff Lodge. As was expected Briarcliff won by a two-thirds majority over both other contestants. Members of the council arrived at this decision partly because Briarcliff is one of the most beautiful hotels in the world, located on the hills high above the Hudson River thirty miles out of New York, surrounded by some of the most beautiful country estates known to the eastern metropolitan district. Partly they came to this conclusion on account of the splendid railroad facilities from the West over the New York Central Lines and the easy accessibility of New York City where most of the members expect to attend the Trust Company banquet at the close of the sessions.

The special train committee appointed to decide on how the western bankers would go from the Chicago district and contiguous territory consists of Fred A. Crandall of the National City Bank, chairman; W. G. Edens of the Central Trust and J. Fletcher Farrell of the Fort Dearborn National. This committee decided to go by the Lake Shore route and to have the train an exact duplicate of the Twentieth Century, as it was last year. It will consist of five ten-compartment cars, an observation car, a club car and two diners and will leave Chicago, Saturday, May, 3d, at 1 P. M., about twenty minutes behind the Twentieth Century. Stops will be made at South Bend and Elkhart, Indiana; Toledo and Cleveland, Ohio; Syracuse and Albany, New York, being in each place shortly behind the Limited. The time set for Toledo is 5:35 P. M.; for Cleveland, 7:55 P. M.; and for Albany, 7:25 A. M. The time of arrival at Scarborough is 10 A. M., Sunday, May 4th, at which point the western visitors will be met by New York bankers in automobiles to transport them over to the Lodge. All arrangements for train equipment have been made through Assistant General Passenger Agent Clare Hartigan and General Agent George Thompson, both of the Lake Shore, Chicago. It happens that the ladies are turning out this year in much stronger numbers than ever before and that all of the reservations in two solid cars were filled with bankers and their wives before any other assignments were made. The currency commission has been called to meet this year owing to the likelihood that congress will take action on currency matters and nearly every important committee will have a session at Briarcliff. Among those called are the agricultural and financial development and education committee; bills of lading; constitutional revision; currency commission; finance; insurance; law; committee on program for Boston convention, and all of the executive committees of the various sections except the

IF you are thinking about a "Coast trip" you ought to see the new North Western booklet entitled "Overland Limited." It's a work of art and full of needed information.

IF you are going to Europe and would be interested in a high-class personally conducted service, write to Charles W. Jacobs, Rock Valley, Iowa. He's vouched for by all the bankers out there. He uses automobiles for sightseeing at very fair terms.

E. F. SWINNEY will be prevented from going to Briarcliff this year by the absence of Mr. Hutcheson from the bank. Mr. Hutcheson injured an eye by a fall about four weeks ago and may be kept from work for several months.

THE 20th Century train souvenir last year had it "Sam W. Reyburn and wife," occasioning many explanations back home at Little Rock. This year he will be listed among the "singles."

J. A. LEWIS of St. Louis, whose mighty "w-o-o-f-f" as he hit the Bogey Colonel for 240 was heard at Nashville, is hoping to report on the Briarcliff links at the May meeting.

N. F. HAWLEY of Minneapolis has a son at Cornell with a birthday May 2d. He and Mrs. Hawley are to be there and help celebrate. He is planning to catch the "Briarcliff Special" for the "ride down the Hudson" at least.

EX-GOVERNOR W. J. BAILEY of Kansas will be forced to let the other revisionists do the heavy work on the new constitution at Briarcliff. Kansas state convention will be in session.

J. F. SARTORI, Los Angeles, has a compartment on the Briarcliff Special.

O. E. DUNLAP of Waxahachie, Texas, would be "glad to join the brethren at Chicago" on his way to Briarcliff, but he has accepted a speaking appointment at the New Jersey convention on May 2d.

CLEVELAND TRUST makes a specialty of "tax free in Ohio" bonds.

SECRETARY McLANE TILTON announces that the Alabama Bankers Association at Pell City this year will be the 21st annual and a "birthday event" is being planned.

THE dates are May 8th, 9th, 10th, and headquarters at the Hotel Mullen. Souvenirs will be issued to ladies, and the railroads are granting a rate, so Secretary Tilton looks for a big attendance.

THERE will be a banquet, an auto ride and a trip to St. Andrew's Bay, on the Gulf, for one whole day. The whole program will be agricultural in tone, matter and time, in a way that would delight even "Saint" Joseph himself.

TILTON has a new plan. No dues will be accepted after May 1st and none will be received at the convention. Brother secretaries will be glad to know how it works.

THE following Alabama group meetings have been fixed: Group 1 at Sheffield, April 8th; Group 2 at Jasper, April 9th; Group 3 at Anniston, April 10th; Group 4, April 25th, place to be selected; Group 5 at Selma, April 23d; Group 6 at Montgomery, April 15th; Group 7, April 22d, place to be selected; Group 8, April 16th, place to be selected.

C. F. CHILDS, Chicago, says: "The financial stringency of the past thirty days reflects not only the indirect influence of the foreign situation, but also the direct attempt on the part of our own institutions to curtail credit expansion by discrimination, limitations and carefully censored collateral requirements." Pretty neat!

FROM California on the Briarcliff special will be Sartori of Los Angeles, Lynch and High of San Francisco and Fletcher of Watsonville.

WHEN "The Bath House," heavyweight alderman from the First, heard Scribner's had published the lives of "two great American fighters" he headed straight for McClurg's.

"LE' ME SEE THEM BOOKS," said John. "I want to know who the guy is that's in it with Sullivan—Bob Fitzsimmons or Jackson. I dunno?"

THE two fighters turned out to be Gen. Meade who won at Gettysburg and John Paul Jones, founder of the American navy. "Whothe'ellarethey," said John as he turned on his heel.

CHICAGO is getting a dose of retributive reform. First Julius Rosenwald for his activity in the vice reform campaign was made the star defensive witness in the wages-and-vice inquiry by a legislative commission. It was the intention, perhaps, that he should bear the brunt.

NEXT came Frank M. Bunch, for fourteen years the chief Board of Trade warrior against bucket shops. He was "paid in full."

THE latest, lost-deposit "investigation" directed against the banks sent its first subpoena to the courageous banker who drafted the "plan for a bill to regulate private banks."

IF Governor Lester sign the private bank bill enacted by the legislature in the closing hours, private banks in Washington will be inspected by the state banking department.

THE new law forbids private banking, but gives institutions now doing business until January 1, 1915, to conform with the law as regards capitalization. By the date named the banks must pay in at least ten per cent of the capital stock required of a bank in the city or town.

IT will forbid the use of any artificial or corporate name or words to indicate improperly that such persons, associations or corporation is a bank or trust company or in any way, solicit or receive deposits.

THE Tri-County Bankers Association of Delaware will hold its semiannual meeting April 23d at Delmar, Del. An elaborate program, including a banquet, has been arranged.

YOU can still talk Swedish to the cashier at the Capital State Savings, Chicago. "Swedish" only came off the title line, not out of the vocabulary.

ERNEST A. HAMILL, taking into account conditions abroad and at home, predicts a strong demand for money during the year.

GEORGE B. CALDWELL is back from California, pleased with everything he saw but the "blue sky," which reminded him too much of J. N. Dolley. No self-respecting official of the Investment Bankers can go into raptures over blue sky.

THE big trust companies of Detroit and Grand Rapids are opposing the reduction of the present minimum trust company capital to $100,000. They do not believe that trust companies with small capital can live.

WHEN the floods are gone the Ohio clearing houses will descend upon Governor Cox at Columbus in a way that will make him think something else has broken loose.

THE governor has assailed the clearing houses as so many wicked money trusts and has a bill in the legislature to destroy their usefulness.

HE wants them incorporated, private examinations stopped and membership for all applicants. Gov. Cox should read Jas. G. Cannon's book or take a postgraduate course in banking with Geo. E. Allen.

THE Cleveland bankers say they will endeavor to show that in Cleveland clearing house examinations have been the most salutary and beneficial of all attempts to have better banks.

NEW JERSEY bankers will headquarter at Atlantic City for their convention May 2d and 3d.

THE long drawn out test case to determine the strength of the new Pennsylvania law regulating private banking has resulted in a verdict of "Guilty" for Rocco A. Frasso of Reading.

FRASSO has been engaged in the conduct of a private bank in connection with a steamship ticket-selling agency for a number of years, and was regarded as being one of the most responsible Italian bankers engaged in his line of business in the state.

HE refused to take out a license in conformity with the new banking laws of Pennsylvania, claiming immunity because of his having been in business for more than seven years, the time prescribed by law for the exemption of private banks from taking out state licenses.

THE district attorney, however, contended that in conducting a steamship ticket-selling business he forfeited his right of exemption, and on that contention caused his arrest for violation of the state's banking laws, and secured a conviction.

DOWN at Briarcliff the proper thing will be to ask Mr. Wexler solicitously about how the new pension system works at the Whitney-Central.

THE Kane County Bank, at Elburn, this state, has bloomed out fully as the Kane County Bank and Trust Company, and is so tickled over it that it points the way to the rest of the 700 privates—how to be good.

WILLIAM R. DRIVER, Treasurer.

THE legislature at Albany is considering the naming of a commission to "revise and rejuvenate," as G. W. would say, the whole New York state banking law. It will report "on or before February 1, 1914."

SECRETARY PHILIP S. BABCOCK of the trust company section has announced the trust company banquet this year for May 8th at the Waldorf. The Briarcliff sessions of the executive council will close on the 7th.

A STRONG committee has been at work and an attractive program arranged. Names of the speakers have not been announced.

THE New York "Blue Sky" bill creates a state board-governor, lieutenant-governor and state comptroller. Other features quite the usual thing.

SUPERVISION bills are quite the style just now in state legislatures. Almost as great a vogue as those of the "Blue Sky" variety.

COLORADO has a new law which is a complete modification of the present banking code and is intended to give the bank commissioner more power. It enables him to have practically unlimited supervision of state and private banks and to enforce reports, and enables him to make inspection of the banks at any time, and, if he finds a bank insolvent, to close it up and take charge.

THE general belief is that the new law not only will be good for banks, but particularly for depositors. The law compels additional reserves, and one of the best features is said to be in the provision forbidding any officer or director of a bank from borrowing its money without consent of a majority of the board of directors.

GOVERNOR AMMONS hesitated to sign the bill because it requires liquidation instead of receivership in cases of failed banks, but the balance of the law is so good that he approved it. The bill is looked upon as a long step forward for Colorado.

THE attempt to break up the monopoly enjoyed by one company of printing all stock certificates listed on the New York exchange has led to a bribery investigation at Albany.

REMINDS one of how the parcel post was defeated for years at Washington.

JOHN BARTON PAYNE, premier lawyer, clubman, art authority and big, manly man is to take a wife. That she comes of one of Chicago's oldest and most distinguished families is pleasing to everyone who has the taste to appreciate such alliances.

ELECTION day was "April first" for the bull moosers to a fare ye well. Most people are highly pleased at it.

YES, they have unsupervised banking in Germany. Gustav Puppe & Son, bankers, closed their doors on Tuesday at Kuvrin with liabilities estimated at $5,000,000. The banker and his son had fled the night before.

TWO similar banks failed, same day, at Darmstadt. Germany should join Illinois in the "uplift" for supervision.

NOT so serious as a bank failure, but serious nevertheless, was the defeat of the First Nationals by the Oak Parkers on Tuesday. It was the "first robin" of the baseball season.

OTHER opening events in the sporting line were the winning of a wrestling match by Gotch, and a golf tourney by Travis.

FORMER GOV. JOHN BURKE of North Dakota is now treasurer of the United States, succeeding Carmi A. Thompson, who turned over $1,426,422,051.48 to the custody of the new democratic official.

IT is quite a novelty to find a big department in Washington not in charge of an Ohioan. They had the habit.

JOHN PERRIN will not travel to Briarcliff this year. Too much engrossed in that new investment firm, in which he is "senior," at Pasadena.

PERRIN, DRAKE & REILLY have adopted a Cheopian pyramid, with monogram, as a crest or trade emblem. The idea is fine. Those who know Mr. Perrin need not be told that the engraving is "a good job."

A MAN at the curb was heard to remark the other day that he thought the general delivery window at the Chicago postoffice did more toward the delinquency of young girls than low wages. He said it didn't confine itself to wage earners either.

THE GERMAN AMERICAN, Los Angeles, has installed bubbly cups for employees and for the public, served with filtered and artificially cooled water.

ON the 3d of April, John Burroughs, the greatest of living nature writers, celebrated his 76th birthday. An illuminating study of his life and works and of the splendid personality that irradiates through all his writings is contributed to the April Home Progress by Charles S. Olcott. The article is illustrated with several new photographs taken by Mr. Olcott during a recent visit to Woodchuck Lodge, the naturalist's favorite retreat.

THE westerner who "stayed two hull days, b'gosh," in New York without being waited on by the booster committee "to inquire if he wuz goin' to locate permanently" was amazed.

HE should try Davenport for quick results. They have a boosters' club there which waits with difficulty until you've registered.

THE GREATER DAVENPORT COMMITTEE has done fine work and can show results. President A. F. Dawson of the First National is the "active" vice-president and President J. H. Hass of the Scott County Savings is treasurer.

ALEXANDER DUNBAR, now cashier of the famous Bank of Pittsburgh, N. A., started in at Steubenville. S. B. Rankin already had everything nailed down, so Alexander decided to migrate.

HE selected Pittsburgh and neither of them has reason to be sorry. Always he was receiving "offers" and a few of them he took, making good in every instance.

THE EXCHANGE NATIONAL was sorry to lose him and he disliked going, but some things simply can't be turned down, so he now is cashier in the famous old Bank of Pittsburgh, which has as proud a history as any in the realm.

IT ranks second in clearings now and—well, just keep your eye on it!

SECRETARY WOLFF of the clearing house section has done with simple asterisks what Savaroff would have attempted with siege guns.

HE got the statistical bureaus and papers so to designate clearing house figures from cities where they added-up until the rival town was beaten.

IN some states the abuse was ludicrous but the asterisk is getting in its work. Printed with the figures it indicated that "clearings contain other items besides actual clearings," a polite way of saying the totals were "bunk."

THE boom towns of Texas which regarded the thing as a "game" are yielding finally and joining the clearing house section of the A. B. A. The asterisk is a great weapon in a quiet way.

WHY will a farmer abandon land that he owns in New England which needs only fertilizer and travel clear across the continent to buy other land that needs only water? What's the lure? Is he wise or unwise?

WASHINGTON is enjoying its new banking law. Not a failure in the year. It is clearing out the "banks," "trust companies," and the "savings" concerns not under jurisdiction of the banking commissioner.

WHAT a rattling of the dry bones such a law would create in Illinois?

IF the bank act introduced at this session of parliament should be passed in its present form and a "central gold reserve" established, there will be no apprehension of a scarcity of currency at a time when the emergency provisions are not operative; for with the deposit of gold or Dominion notes in the custody of trustees, the banks will have the privilege of issuing their own notes to the full amount thus deposited.

THEY haven't much banking law in France, but recent depredations by adventurers as "bankers" has caused the minister of finance to ask for an act to prevent those who have "served imprisonment within five years for theft, forgery, embezzlement, etc. (and not pardoned)," from engaging in the banking business.

CONTINENTAL BANK & TRUST CO., Shreveport, La., so far as we know is the first bank to incorporate in its charter a provision which Comptroller Murray has been urging as a part of any new national banking law. It provides:

"NO loans shall be made to the president, vice-president, cashier or assistant cashier, unless application therefor be made in writing and placed before a meeting of the board of directors and be approved by them in the absence of the applicant for the loan, nor shall any loan ever be made to any of said active officers exceeding ten per cent of the capital stock and surplus of the bank."

THERE are many good points in the above paragraph and it could be written into any bank's by-laws with good effect upon the bank and upon its patrons.

THE Shreveport bank goes a little further and advertises "not a dollar of this bank's money loaned to any of its officers." Its percentage of growth has been twice that of any of its rivals, which is high justification.

YOU see, L. E. Thomas was banking commissioner in Mississippi for years and he was on record in convention addresses and in in thousands of letters telling his constituents how to run a bank cleanly and honestly. He simply had to make good.

SIOUX CITY DAILY TRIBUNE has a department for "Who's Who Among the Local Irish." Naturally Ed. T. Kearney of the Mid-West Bank came up for treatment. It was good reading.

ARE the Illinois A. B. A. members forgetting that they require only forty new members to get another member on the council?

R. L. IT is nice to be "it" somewhere and there are too many papers trying to be "world powers," forgetful of the vast fields at their very doors.

SENATE COMMITTEE TO QUESTION BANKS

A committee of the Illinois senate will call prominent Chicago bankers before it in an effort to secure information relative to undistributed relief funds raised during the past twenty years to aid victims of various catastrophes occurring during that period. It is alleged that the amount of money raised for such purposes which still remains in Chicago banks is close to $1,000,000.

Three Hundred Millions of Hoarded Money

Enough gold to support three billions of credit is hidden away by those who know how to work and to save, but who have not learned to make their money work for them—Postal savings system is reaching some of this buried wealth

How much cash is hoarded in this country by people, chiefly foreign laborers, who distrust the banks? This question has been put by The New York Annalist to heads of state labor bureaus and others, and though the information on the subject is fragmentary, several authorities agree that the amount is at least $300,000,000. That much cash lodged in the banks would supply the basis of at least ten times that amount of credits, or, stated differently, would serve as reserve against at least $3,000,000,000 of additional bank deposits.

Some inroad on this vast amount of hoarded cash is being made through the postal savings system, but rapid as the growth of that system has been during the two and a half years since its establishment it has so far brought into the hands of the government and through it back into the banks little more than 10 per cent of the estimated amount of hoarded cash. Much more, however, already would have gone into the postal savings banks were it not for the limitation which the law puts on the amount which can be accepted from any one person. Said Postmaster General Hitchcock in the latest annual report of the department:

"Sufficient time already has elapsed to show that the amount of money that the postal savings system causes to be withdrawn from banks is very small, and that a large part of the deposits of the system represents hoarded money that is restored to the channels of trade."

The amount is limited to $500. The department has recommended that the limit be removed with the proviso that interest be not paid on any excess over $1,000 standing to the credit of any one depositor.

Postal Savings Banks Drawing Hoarded Cash

Theodore L. Weed, director of the postal savings system, in reply to The Annalist's inquiry, said:

"There now is approximately $35,000,000 on deposit in the United States postal savings banks. Most of this money has come from the savings of persons who do not generally deposit in banks. Some of it comes from hoardings, but nobody can say how much comes from this source. That some does come from hoardings we know because it has been brought to us in sacks, valises or packages, which indicate that it has been hoarded.

"It is difficult to say what class of people make up the bulk of depositors, beyond the broad statement that all classes seem to utilize the postal banks. About 25 per cent of the depositors are foreigners. The bulk seems to be people of the middle classes. There are more men than women depositors. The depositors include men, women, and children. There now are about 350,000 depositors. The average deposit is approximately $100.

"The aggregate of deposits, the number of depositors, and the average on deposit all have been increasing steadily. The amount on deposit has been increasing about 6 per cent a month. The amount of postal deposit bonds sold is $2,500,000. We know that most of the money has been coming from savings and not from the banks, because this is the trend of all the reports, and bankers tell us that it has not affected their deposits. Money has not been drawn out of savings banks for deposit in the postal banks."

In speaking before the American Bankers Association last fall, Mr. Weed said:

"The exact amount of deposits refused has not been recorded, but it is certain that the total amount aggregates millions. At Philadelphia, in the space of four months, during which a partial record was kept by the postmaster, $25,000 was refused. Such occurrences are reported almost daily from every part of the United States, most frequently from rural and mining districts and from city stations located in foreign settlements.

"The sums offered range from slightly in excess of the limitation to $20,000, an amount that was once offered in a Western town in the form of canvas sacks containing long unused and tarnished coins. The sources from which this money comes and to which unfortunately it now is being returned by the hundreds of thousands of dollars are not the banks, but the homely hiding places of timid people unfamiliar with business and financial institutions.

"If the postal savings system could receive this money and the vast amount that has not been offered for deposit because of the limitation, the circulating medium of the country would be benefited to the extent of many millions, and the system would be in a position to perform a very important mission in times of panic when usually confidence is lost in the ordinary banking institutions. In such cases, it is reasonable to assume that frightened owners of savings and other accounts will withdraw their money from banks and deposit it with the postal savings system, by which it will be at once redeposited in the banks and made available for their use."

Distrust Does It

Fred. Lange, commissioner bureau of labor statistics of the state of Ohio, is among those who think that the amount of cash hoarded by foreign laborers in the United States is as much as $300,000,000. He wrote:

"I personally know that foreign laborers are afraid and that they distrust the banks and therefore keep the money on their person. I, therefore, appreciate that it almost is impossible to estimate the amount of money that foreigners in this country keep on their person, but owing to the fact that there are so many employed in this country, I believe that the assumption is right that the amount would reach the sum of $300,000,000."

J. L. Rockey, chief of bureau of industrial statistics of Pennsylvania, is among those who believe the amount to be very large, without means being at hand to put the amount into definite figures. He sent this reply to the inquiry:

"We have a communication from you asking whether we are in position to advise you as to the probable amount of money carried out of this state by foreign laborers on their return to their native countries. Also, as to what amount, in cash, they may keep in their possession.

"That is a most difficult question to answer. There is no doubt that they hoard large sums of money for various causes, either through suspicion that their means will not properly be cared for by others, or from a desire to have their means available in case they are transferred to another part. Much of this population is fluctuating. I am not in position to venture a guess even as to what such sums of money amount to beyond the fact that I know they are very large."

More than $300,000,000

Ralph delli Paoli, who was the first commissioner of private banking under the state comptroller of New York State, and whose father was one of the largest Italian bankers in this city, said the estimate of $300,000,000 as the aggregate amount of money hoarded by foreign working men was, in his opinion, too low. He explained:

"The average Italian laborer saves at least $200 each year. If he works in this country six months he usually sends home to Italy about $20 a month, which would be $120. When he returns to Italy for the winter he takes $100 more with him. We know this from the books of our bank. Laborers in the interior make their remittances through Italian banks in this city. They send money to us and when it accumulates a little they direct us to remit it to Italy. Then in the fall they come in with about $100 in American currency and exchange it for Italian money. This $100 at least is certainly hoarded in currency.

"In September, October and November, 1906 and 1907, we sold Italian currency to the amount of about $3,000,000 each year and, of course, this is only one of a number of banks. During the panic we were able, through these transactions, to sell American currency in Wall Street, where it was at a premium.

"I know one man who has been working in this country only two years and has saved $600. His wages are $9 a week. There are about 600,000 Italians in this city. Some of them have settled here and invest their money here. They don't hoard money. But if only 150,000 of them were considered in the class of laborers who keep their money with them the total, at $200 each, would be $30,000,000. Probably the number is more than twice 150,000. There are something like 3,000,000 in the United States, I believe, and if half of them hoarded $200 each you would have the $300,000,000 without considering any other nationality.

"A sidelight on the subject is the fact that the postal savings banks of Italy now have on deposit $400,000,000 drawn from America in the fifteen years they have been in existence."

A Sidelight on Hoarding

John Laing, chief of the department of mines of West Virginia, pointed out that foreigners among the miners in that state usually have cash, sometimes large amounts of it, in their possession. He had this to say on the subject:

"I have nothing direct on this subject, and the only thing that I could depend on to give you any information relative to it would be that in a great many instances, when either an Italian, Hungarian, Slav or Pole gets injured in the mine, it usually is found that he has some money on his person. This ranges from $10 to $500 or $600."

The 1910 census showed a total of 13,515,000 foreign-born residents in the United States, an increase of 3,174,000 compared with the returns of the 1900 census. Since 1910 the report of the commissioner-general of immigration shows there has been a net addition of over 900,000 in the number of foreign-born residents within the United States, bringing the total increase from 1900 up to the current year of upward of 4,000,000. The number of Italians and of members of other races which are known to be given to hoarding while at work in this country has increased during this same period by over 2,500,000.

Our Foreign Population

The total number of foreigners at present in this country thus estimated is 14,400,000. This figure includes, of course, women and children as well as men, but it seems conservative to estimate that at the least 10 per cent of these are wage-earners who are given to hoarding. Some of the estimates made in replies to the inquiry on which this article is based placed the number who hoard at a considerably higher figure. But assuming this low percentage of the total it would take about $200 apiece to make up $300,000,000.

The total stock of money in the United States, according to the last annual report of the comptroller of the currency, was $3,648,800,000. Of this $364,300,000 was held as treasury assets in the United States treasury, $1,563,800,000 was in the banks and the balance, amounting to $1,720,700,000, was in the hands of the people. This includes all hoarded cash as well as the vastly greater amount which is used in trade and as pocket money. The amount of cash held outside of the treasury and of the banks represents 47.16 per cent of the whole, and is equivalent to $17.98 per capita.

TO AWAIT ACTION OF CONGRESS

It is quite probable that the federal legislative committee of the A. B. A. will not give any great consideration to the currency question until it is able to get an official copy of the bill which it is understood the new administration is developing. The personnel of the committee is as follows: E. F. Swinney, president First National, Kansas City, chairman; Joseph A. McCord, vice-president Third National, Atlanta, Ga.; J. F. Sartori, president Security Savings, Los Angeles; Levi L. Rue, president Philadelphia National; and E. L. Howe, vice-president, Princeton (N. J.) Bank.

NEW YORK BANK ON THE SITUATION

President McGarrah of the Mechanics and Metals National of New York, in a letter to depositors, said:

"We hope that we may have comprehensive financial legislation from congress without waiting for a repetition of conditions which emphasize its need. For the past three or four years, credit has been freer than it is to-day, and this has led to an expansion which makes it uncomfortable for people to bring down their business to a volume commensurate with their own capital. It is our opinion that much comfort will be enjoyed by those who are content to 'trim sails' and be satisfied with something less than the 'greatest possible' business during the coming year; for while business remains extremely active throughout the country, and will remain so for some months to come, we believe that this activity is an echo of last year's bountiful crops rather than anticipated prosperity.

"This opinion simply follows our survey of present conditions, while our reasonable hopes include the settlement in the near future of both the Mexican and the Balkan situation, and prompt and able handling of tariff and financial legislation by congress. As in both the senate and the house of representatives the party in power has a majority, there is a splendid opportunity for prompt consideration of important subjects."

THINKS DAMAGE BY FLOOD OVERESTIMATED

New York, April 2d.—A. J. Hemphill, president of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, returned this morning from a trip of a month or more to the Pacific coast. Mr. Hemphill said that he did not encounter any trouble as a result of the floods until he reached Kansas City. His long experience as a railroad man and his observations on the way home lead him to believe that the estimates of damage to property in Dayton, Omaha and other flood centers, has been greatly exaggerated. He is equally confident that the losses of the railroads will not be anything like as large as has been reported.

Mr. Hemphill was very favorably impressed with the physical condition of the Western Pacific, over which he came on his return trip. He was highly gratified with the showing that is being made with the Denver & Rio Grande, and added that there was no occasion for the unfavorable rumors which were recently circulated with respect to those two properties.

He said that he found business men throughout the West generally hopeful, and that they are "boosters" instead of growlers. He added that they were unable to understand why the East should be so pessimistic. Conditions in the principal winter wheat states he found favorable on his way back. Earlier there was need of rain in Kansas. Already authorities in that state are predicting a considerably larger crop of wheat than was harvested last year.

Touches upon proposed banking and financial legislation by congress

WASHINGTON LETTER

By R. A. ALBERTSEN

Relates to administrative and department matters interesting to our readers

Washington, D. C., April 4th.—It has been reported here that the currency commission of the American Bankers Association, which has been hibernating for some time, is to be called into consultation early in the extra session of congress. Rumor has it that a special session of the commission will be held at Briarcliff Lodge, New York, in conjunction with the meeting of the A. B. A. executive council on May 5th. The commission is composed of the ablest men in the association, men who have given study to currency matters in the broader sense. From the West some of the leading names are: George M. Reynolds and Jas. B. Forgan, Festus J. Wade, Luther Drake, E. F. Swinney, and J. F. Sartori. Sol Wexler is from the South and Jos. T. Talbert, E. L. Howe, Robert Wardrop, and A. B. Hepburn are from the East.

Will Come up Early in Session

Currency reform will come informally to the attention of congress soon after it assembles next week, notwithstanding the efforts of President Wilson and the democratic leaders of the two houses to focus attention upon the tariff during the early weeks of the extra session. At least half a dozen currency bills will be ready for introduction when congress meets, it is believed, and their appearance in the house and senate will mark the beginning of a general discussion of the financial reform.

Most of the bills being prepared represent the views of individual members and will be introduced as individual bills. Senator Owen of Oklahoma and Representative Glass of Virginia are working upon measures which probably will be submitted first to the banking committees of the respective houses and made the basis for committee study.

Begin Work This Week

Senator Owen stated that he would call a meeting of the democratic members of the senate's new committee on banking and currency to be held late this week. The suggested plans of currency reform will not be taken up in detail at that time, however. Senator Owen's bill, representing his views of needed reform, will be submitted to the committee and studied with other measures that come before that body.

The senator has not made public the details of his contemplated bill nor indicated the extent to which it may provide a central agency under governmental control.

Two Other Bills Ready

The bill prepared by Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, another member of the senate committee, which provides for twenty separate and independent currency associations in the United States, will be introduced early in the session.

Senator Weeks of Massachusetts, a republican member of the senate committee, will reintroduce the bill drawn by the national monetary commission, providing for a national reserve association. Senator Weeks said the measure would be changed in no way from the form approved by the monetary commission and in which it was introduced in the last congress.

Probable Recognition of Chinese Republic

The entire membership of the first Chinese national assembly under republican auspices has been elected, according to official advices. The first meeting will be April 8th at Peking. There will be about 800 members in the lower house and 300 in the upper chamber.

The body is empowered to draft a constitution and establish a permament form of government. Then the members will resolve themselves into legislators.

The imminence of the meeting of this first assembly has brought President Wilson's administration to the question of prompt decision whether the Chinese republic is to be recognized immediately or whether the United States will join other powers in extending recognition only after the Chinese assembly has acted upon the proposed constitution.

Secretary Bryan's recent utterance at Trenton and a long conference with the Chinese minister here last Saturday are regarded as an indication of the adoption of the former policy.

President and Mr. Underwood Confer

President Wilson and Representative Oscar W. Underwood were in conference for several hours at the White House on Tuesday for the second time over features of the proposed tariff revision.

The conference was asked for by President Wilson, who had been studying the new tariff bill for several days and familiarizing himself with many of the questions about which controversy has been raised in the preparation of the democratic revision measure.

Since his first conference with Mr. Underwood, President Wilson had gone over the tariff bill in immediate detail with Secretary Redfield of the department of commerce.

It was understood that few detailed rates were under consideration at to-night's conference, but that the general questions as to the free admission of raw materials and the extent to which the duty should be removed from agricultural products and articles largely consumed by the public were discussed fully.

Efforts to bring the senate and house into accord before the details of the new tariff bill become public are to be made.

Should the senate committee determine that certain features of the bill will not be acceptable in the senate, efforts will be made to have the drift of the bill changed by the house committee or by the democratic membership of the house when it meets in caucus next week, so that house and senate may be brought into as complete accord as possible in support of the house bill.

RESERVATIONS FOR THE BRIARCLIFF SPECIAL

secretaries' section. There ought to be around one hundred passengers or more from Chicago, including members of council and members of committees from the South, Southwest, West and Northwest. Last year the railroad company volunteered that they would furnish a Saturday evening dinner which would not be forgotten soon. The company has volunteered to repeat this performance this year and in itself it is quite a treat. There will be automobiles and auto buses at Scarborough station prepared to take everybody over the hills to the Lodge for early luncheon on Sunday and in the afternoon there will be golf, driving, swimming or any other form of amusement which may be desired. Last year they furnished a rainstorm which was not on the program, but it was a dandy. Last year the New York bankers were at Briarcliff early on Sunday with their touring cars and hauled their friends over from the station. All then spent the day in friendly intercourse at the resort. All of the committees will meet on Monday and the two general sessions of the council will be held on Tuesday and Wednesday. Nearly all the guests probably will leave this year, as they did last, on Wednesday evening or Thursday morning for New York, since so many of them will attend the annual trust company banquet.

Reservations may be made on this train through any member of the train committee mentioned above or directly through the office of THE CHICAGO BANKER, where all train diagrams are kept. It is hoped that those going will agree to travel two in a compartment so as not to make the train unnecessarily burdensome to haul. Bankers accompanied by their wives are having first choice on the most desirable space and the present indications are that not less than seventy per cent of those going will be accompanied by ladies. St. Louis and southwestern bankers are advised that the fares are the same going by way of Chicago as they would be if going from St. Louis and kindred territory direct. It has been arranged that everybody who wishes to go can be taken care of even at the very last moment; neither is there any preliminary charge of any kind against reservations. No deposit is required on tickets and passengers may purchase single or round trip tickets as they may desire. The illustrations included herewith are from photographs taken of Briarcliff last year.

No bankers' special out of Chicago ever filled up a month in advance. There are about eighty positive reservations and half as many more on the tentative list. Thirty ladies in all are among the passengers, and there isn't a resort hotel in America which more nearly will meet their requirements. Those who hold reservations are:

FLOOD SITUATION AT LAFAYETTE

D. D. Jacobs, president of the Farmers and Traders Bank of Lafayette, Ind., says that press reports concerning flood conditions in his city have been exaggerated greatly; that they have suffered some loss but nothing as compared to that sustained by other cities along the Wabash river. Some of their business interests will be crippled for a few days, but it is believed that things will be in a normal condition within a short time.

Main Influences of Foreign Exchange Fluctuations

Address before the British Institute of Bankers by Hartley Withers. Influence of discount rates. Action of the bank of England. Gold movements and the bullion markets

The rough division of bills of exchange into two great classes, viz., commercial and finance bills (although there were some which partook of the nature of both classes), corresponded to a similar division in the monetary relations between one country and another. These relations depended largely on (1) the exchange of goods and commercial services; (2) the exchange of securities and financial services. Of these two divisions, the first was, on the whole, much steadier and less liable to fluctuation, and also much less susceptible to control by those whose business it was to watch exchange fluctuations and influence them when they needed control.

It was difficult to draw the line between commercial and finance bills, but the following definitions might be assumed: (1) Commercial bills were those drawn in the first place against goods exported; secondly, against any services rendered in connection with the interchange of goods such as freights, insurance and brokerages on produce, and thirdly, against any services rendered. All these ebbed and flowed in a more or less constant stream. (2) Finance bills were drawn against the export of a promise to pay, whether in the shape of a government loan or a railroad bond having a hundred years to run, or the implied understanding that the drawer would put the acceptor in funds to meet the bill before its maturity. According to this division, bills drawn in anticipation of shipments of goods were pure finance bills. The ebb and flow of the stream of finance bills had all the suddenness and strength of a freshet, and their effect upon exchange rates was very marked.

Influence of Discount Rates

There was a close connection between market rates of discount and the creation of finance bills. The finance bill in its simple form, i. e., one that was drawn on an English correspondent by an operator abroad who wanted to finance himself for a time, would, as a rule, would be created when the rate of discount in London was lower than that at home.

This rule also held good in the case of bills drawn on London by American or French houses under instructions from English firms who wanted to lend money in the United States or in France.

The same applied to a third class of finance bills, i. e., those drawn to supply a demand for exchange and in anticipation of an increase in the supply of commercial bills later on—obviously high discount rates made inroads into the profits of exchange.

As to bills drawn against exports of the more permanent kind of investments, a low rate of discount in London tended to stimulate the creation of fresh securities. In so far as these were foreign or colonial securities, the creation of finance bills was implied, the sale of which in the countries where they were drawn would turn the exchanges against England. Contrariwise, an abnormally high rate of discount would stop the import of this kind of security altogether.

As regards commercial bills, cheap money stimulated imports and a ready demand for foreign goods, followed by free drawing of bills on England and a downward tendency in the exchanges, while dear money would bring out the goods of English merchants and send them abroad for what they would fetch and turn the exchanges in our favor. Since, however, the price of a credit was a much smaller item to a merchant or a manufacturer than to a financier who was drawing accommodation bills, the effect of money rates on international trade was much slower than on international financing.

It followed, then, that those who had to study and forecast exchange fluctuations must master the movements of discount rates. Conversely, those who wanted to forecast discount rates must watch the rates of foreign exchange, the action and reaction of these two rates on each other being constant and effective.

Influence of Rates of Exchange

As regards the influence of exchanges on discount rates, when the former moved against us discount rates inevitably would tend to rise, because a large supply of bills for discount in London would be expected, and bankers and discounters would raise their rates in anticipation. Another reason was that if the exchanges fell sufficiently, exports of gold from London would be threatened.

Fluctuations in Discount Rates

Discount rates were established by demand for and supply of bills. The batches of bills that arrived by the various mails day by day were, after acceptance, usually sold to a billbroker, or a discount company, who

By C. C. Burford

General business conditions have improved over the rainy season reported last week and with the farmers again at work the general situation is more lively than a week ago. The soil is in the best of condition and will respond easily to cultivation. Conditions on the farms are at the very best and bankers and farmers are hopeful for a large crop this year. The season will be marked with large improvements in towns and cities and contractors of all kinds will be very busy. Much public improvement in the way of paving and public buildings will be made and there is a widespread demand for better transportation facilities such as good roads and more trolley lines, and this demand will be met in part this year by improvements in various places. Banks report a strong demand for money with funds loaned out heavily and a continued large demand for money is generally expected this summer. Generally speaking, there is less demand for lands in other parts of the United States, and while there are in the aggregate many families leaving Illinois for other states, yet the purchases of newer or cheaper lands indicates a desire for homes rather than for speculation. People in general seem to be highly interested in better living and are desiring more of the comforts of life, which will mean a large demand for all supplies necessary to the home and to the farm.

Death of George A. Turell

George A. Turell, formerly cashier of the First National of Champaign and connected with that institution for twenty-seven years, died March 28th, following an accident in which he was struck by a street-car. Mr. Turell had been in poor health for some time, resigning his cashiership in 1906 because of ill health and more recently had suffered a partial stroke of paralysis. March 13th, while walking in Champaign, he was struck by a street-car and one leg was crushed. In his weakened condition death ensued two weeks later.

Mr. Turell was born and reared in Massachusetts, coming to Illinois in 1873 and entering the banking business in Winchester, locating in Champaign in 1879 with the First National, and serving that institution as teller, assistant cashier and cashier until 1906. Since leaving the bank he had been in the insurance business in Champaign with offices in the First National Bank building. He was a Knight Templar Mason, an Elk and a member of the Congregational church. The First National Bank closed during the funeral. He was held in the highest esteem by the Harris family and by the entire community.

Death of Vermont Banker

Robert Dilworth, a well-known banker of Vermont, Fulton county, is dead. Mr. Dilworth was a pioneer settler in the southern part of Fulton county, and by investing in large real estate holdings, accumulated a large fortune. He was president of the Peoples Bank of Vermont. His wife is dead but he is survived by a son, Neal Dilworth, and a daughter, Miss Grace Dilworth, both of Vermont.

New State Banks

F. A. S. Price, C. S. Nolsman and Robert Joos have been given a permit to organize the Cook County State Bank of Chicago with capital of $500,000. The Morgan Park State Bank in Morgan Park will be incorporated by Martin E. Ryan, H. S. Goddes, and W. J. Yandell, Jr., with capital of $25,000. The Fullerton-Southport State Savings Bank of Chicago will soon begin business under a charter given to Edward J. Prebeis, William H. Schmidt and August J. Kowalski, Jr., the capital to be $200,000.

Charleston Trust and Savings Bank

Charleston Trust and Savings, the youngest of the four strong institutions of that city, having started business April 20, 1912, and barely a year old, is making distinct progress and has built up a business which is highly satisfactory to the officers and directors of so new an institution. The bank started with deposits of $28,470, which had grown to $115,659 November 26th, and at the last call, February 4th, reached $125,879, since which time a steady increase has been made. The bank is doing excellent publicity work and is preaching the doctrine of savings, children's accounts, young men's economy and many other good ideas of thrift as well as upholding the soil conservation methods so needful at the present time. "The Guide," a well-written little booklet upon savings and financial conservatism, is issued by the bank.

W. H. Shubert, formerly a banker at Greenup and Altamont, is the active vice-president and Frank Popham, formerly assistant cashier of the State Bank of Charleston, is the cashier, while Alex Briggs, land owner and business man, is the president. The directorate and the stockholders include many of the best names in the vicinity. The bank occupies a large room equipped with the best of furniture, fixtures and vaults. Its future is bright and continued growth will be made by this new institution.

THE PARAMOUNT ISSUE—SAFETY

FIRST and foremost the careful investor should consider the safety of his invested funds and should satisfy himself that the securities he purchases are thoroughly safeguarded before he even considers any other feature. ¶ Under present conditions many investors give too much attention to the interest rate and too little attention to the vital principle of safety. It is the established policy of this House to sell none but safe investments, and we emphasize the soundness of the securities we offer rather than the attractive interest rate they bear—5½ to 6 per cent. ¶ We will be pleased to submit offerings of First Mortgage Bonds directly secured by absolute first liens on the highest class of improved, income-producing, centrally-located Chicago property, in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000, maturing in two to ten years. Each bond issue is simply a large mortgage divided up into parts, each bond having its share in the mortgage. ¶ The soundness of these investments is best indicated by the fact that no investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us since this House was founded, thirty-one years ago. ¶ Call or write for "The Investors' Magazine," which we send free to investors, and for Circular No. 50-D.

is doing an excellent business with deposits of over $200,000. Mr. Harker lately has gone to Johnston City, having previously been manager of the savings department of the First National of Champaign. He is a son of Judge O. A. Harker, dean of the college of law of the University of Illinois, and is himself a graduate of the institution. The family formerly resided in Carbondale and Judge Harker and his family are interested in several banks in southern Illinois. Johnston City is a good business town in Williamson county and Mr. Harker has a good field for his work. He is especially active in the publicity line.

Illinois Notes

Frank H. Jones, president of the Farmers and Traders Bank of Tuscola, is mourning the death of his father, James Jones. The elder Mr. Jones was a prominent business man and republican worker and was a former county treasurer of Douglas county.

F. W. Beyer, cashier of the Farmers State of Danvers, McLean county, has resigned to become assistant cashier of the Farmers National of Pekin. George W. Springer will succeed Mr. Beyer.

E. L. Wilson, president of the First National of Manhattan, is president of the Will County Soil and Crop Improvement Association. F. C. Grannis, a graduate of the University of Illinois, has been selected to take active charge of the work. Will county is well organized for the task and some good work will be done this year. Mr. Wilson is a prominent banker-farmer and is well known to many Illinois bankers.

Lewis L. Lehman, president of the National Bank of Mattoon, has been spending the winter in warmer portions of the United States.

H. D. Blake, cashier of the Bank of Pesotum, has purchased a one-third interest in the bank of Bragg and Jeffers of Camargo. Mr. Blake continues with his friend, A. T. Bragg, president of the bank of Bragg, Helm and Company of Tuscola, who is president of the banks at Pesotum and Camargo.

The National Bank of Monmouth is another Illinois bank paying four per cent interest on all savings accounts. This bank, with capital and surplus of $400,000 and with resources of $1,500,000, is one of the strong banks in its territory. "Forty years of conservative banking is our record." W. C. Tubbs is the president and D. E. Gayer is the cashier.

The Farmers National of Pekin, which occupies one of the best appointed rooms in the state, is doing some effective newspaper publicity work and the topic of thrift is emphasized.

A large safe which had been standing in the banking room of the State National of Mattoon since that institution took over the business of the Coles County State Bank, was removed through the front of the bank, the plate glass in front being entirely removed. The big safe was removed to Toledo, the county seat of Cumberland county, where a new bank is being organized. The State National of Mattoon is occupying a most beautiful room with the best of fixtures and equipment. F. T. Maloney, who is well known to many Chicago bankers, is the president and A. H. Adams is the cashier.

The Woodruff Trust Company of Joliet, affiliated with the First National of that city, is issuing a booklet entitled "My Country," which can be secured upon request. The Woodruff Trust is a pioneer in inaugurating the French and German land credit idea in America and bankers are watching the project with great interest. George Woodruff, who is president of the First National and the Woodruff Trust Company, has made a long study of this interesting topic and the booklet "My Country" will be well worth study.

The building of the new state bank at Lacon, Marshall county, recently was damaged by fire, the blaze starting in a hall over the bank. The bank room itself was damaged by smoke and water and neighboring business houses suffered like loss.

LIBERTYVILLE BANKER WORKING FOR DAIRYING CONFERENCE

G. C. Gridley, assistant cashier of the First National of Libertyville, a member of the committee on agriculture and vocational education of the Illinois Bankers Association, is endeavoring to secure a conference of representatives of the railroads, shipping and dairying interests centering in Chicago with a view of developing a testing system for this important industry and plans which will prove of benefit to the people engaged in this business in Illinois.

It is hoped that such a conference can be arranged during the week that the First National Conference on farm marketing and farm financing is to be held here in Chicago, which conference will occur at the Hotel Sherman, April 8th, 9th and 10th.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

Wisconsin bankers appeared before the finance and taxation committees of the state legislature this week in support of the Kileen bill which exempts the income of banks, state and national, from the income tax. It was contended by Attorney Edwin S. Mack, representing Milwaukee banks, that with their taxation nationally the banks now are subjected to double taxation. He recommended an appeal to congress to remove conflict in the application of state and federal income taxation. Thomas S. Adams of the tax commission replied that this would be advisable were the only problem the removal of inequality as between banks but held that it involved also the question of permitting stockholders to use their receipts for bank dividends paid as personalty as offsets to their income tax. This had been done the past year and the bill proposed to check the practice, he said. Attorney Mack held that Wisconsin banks pay a larger proportionate tax than those in Chicago, St. Paul, or in Michigan, and that they must meet the competition of larger aggregations of capital in adjoining states and not be asked to bear unusual burdens of taxation.

Argue Against "Blue Sky" Legislation

Railroad men argued against proposed "Blue Sky" legislation before the joint legislative committees at Madison this week. The Culbertson bill, the subject of discussion, proposes that the railroad commission shall undertake the scrutiny of properties against which promoters place stock flotations, and was upheld by Secretary L. E. Gettle of the commission. Burton Hansen of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road argued that the state should not undertake to include interstate railroads within the scope of any bill and if attempted should include only property in the state.

"When a railroad cannot carry on its own business on a capitalization of $50,000 a mile, it should not be prevented from meeting the demands," said Mr. Hansen. "The state should not enact a law to penalize a corporation for borrowing money to make improvements."

"The issue of stocks and bonds is something that depends very largely on the market," said E. M. Hyzer of the Chicago and North-Western road. "Delay may mean something serious. Any handicap you impose on the company eventually reaches the public. We already have complete enough laws dealing with corporations." Harry Bolens, Port Washington manufacturer, declared the bill would interfere seriously with concerns dealing with patents or similar assets with no present value and relying mostly upon future development.

Propose Municipal Bank

City Treasurer Carney comes across with further arguments in support of a municipal national bank. According to figures he presents, more than $1,000,000 was paid to banks for loans made by the city last year. The loans were necessary to meet current expenses until taxes became due. If not a municipal bank the city treasurer advocates a rearrangement of city finances. At present, he says, the city collects the greater part of its tax money after it has actually spent it.

Wisconsin Notes

Mrs. Mary Ball Camp, wife of Robert Camp, president of the First Savings and Trust Company, died at the Camp home, Prospect Avenue, last week after an illness of several weeks. Funeral services were held Friday afternoon. Mrs. Camp was born in East Troy, Wisconsin. She came to Milwaukee in 1864 and was married to Mr. Camp in 1886. She was prominent in social circles and a leader in the Town Club and Country Club affairs. She also was a member of the Immanuel Presbyterian Church, the Woman's Club, the College Endowment Association, and the Colonial Dames of America.

The essay contest of the Wisconsin Bankers Association has aroused state-wide interest. Many responses from high schools have been received by Secretary George D. Bartlett. The association offers $145 in prizes for the best essays on "Possibilities of Undeveloped Wisconsin," information on which is offered by the state immigration bureau or the Wisconsin Advancement Association.

The Milwaukee Chapter of the American Institute of Banking will hold an informal dancing party in Kilbourn Masonic Temple next Wednesday, April 9th.

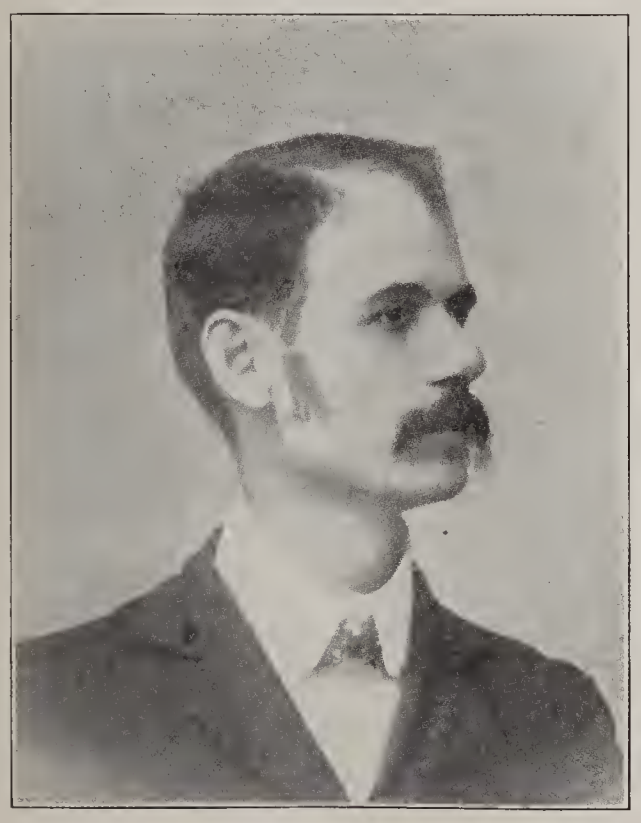
MISSISSIPPI BANKER AN AUTHOR

Duncan F. Young, cashier of the Farmers Bank of Osyka, Miss., has achieved some prominence in a literary as well as a banking way, his activities along the former lines embracing magazine contributions and several books, as well as some poetry. He formerly was engaged in the newspaper business and later conducted publications of his own in both Louisiana and Mississippi. Among his most popular books are "Behind the Grill," "The Fiction Writer's Workshop" and "Thoughts in Verse."



DUNCAN F. YOUNG
Cashier The Farmers Bank of Osyka, Miss.

Mr. Young is fully as good a financier as he is an author, being regarded as one of the strongest and most conservative bankers in the South. He has managed several banks, all of which have proved successful. During the six years which he has had charge of the management of the Farmers Bank, that institution steadily has grown in prosperity and influence in the community, enjoying the complete confidence of its patrons and of the general public.

NORTH WESTERN'S NEW OVERLAND LIMITED

On Monday and Tuesday of this week the new cars which go to make up the new extra fare train from Chicago to California were on exhibition at the Chicago & North Western terminal station. They were of all-steel construction of the non-telescopic kind, with the huge steel beam running from one end to the other. Probably no train ever shown in Chicago equaled it in points of luxury, comfort and safety. Engraved invitations had been issued for the occasion and the new cars were thronged during the periods they were on exhibition by sightseers and those interested in western travel. "Nothing finer on wheels" was the verdict usually pronounced by those who attended. This is said to be the only really exclusive train in operation from Chicago to California and the only one which charges an excess fare. It will operate daily from Chicago, running through from Omaha on the Union Pacific rails. Among some of the points noticed were electric ventilation, sanitary bubbly cups, telephone and telegraph service, provision for stock and market reports, a buffet club car, stenographer, and vapor heating. The new train will leave the Chicago & North Western terminal station daily at 7 P. M. A corresponding car will arrive in this city each morning direct from the coast. Full particulars about fare and other matters connected with the new Overland Limited may be obtained at the Chicago & North Western city ticket office, also at the Union Pacific office.

NEW BUILDING FOR GREENVIEW (ILL.) BANK

The First State Bank of Greenview, Ill., has opened up for business in temporary quarters in the general store of McGreevey and West, the latter being one of the directors, and has made an excellent start. The officers are: J. H. Behrens, president; J. A. Petrie, vice-president; J. S. Brown, cashier, and John Sampson, assistant cashier. Mr. Brown comes from Bridgeport, Ill., where he has been identified with banking interests for a number of years, and is well qualified to take charge of the new institution.

Future Home of First State Bank of Greenview, Ill.

Their beautiful new building, shown in the accompanying illustration, was designed and will be built and completely equipped by The Bankers Engineering Company of Chicago. It will cost about $15,000, and will be of dark brown pressed brick, with light Bedford stone trimmings, and will be one of the handsomest bank buildings in that section. It is one-story, with a twenty-foot ceiling, making it a two-story height. It will be modern in every respect, and will be ready for occupancy about Sept. 1st.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, April 2.—The gain in bank clearings for the month of March over those of the corresponding month last year was not large, and the falling off is wholly attributable to the floods, as the clearings for the past few days have been far below normal. Business at the financial institutions during the past week has been quite active. The demand for money was fair and rates were firm at 5 to 6 per cent on call and time loans. The death of J. Pierpont Morgan produced no discernible effect on the St. Louis stock market. "The death of Mr. Morgan was not unexpected," said Walker Hill, president of the Mechanics-American National, Monday. "To this fact the small effect it had undoubtedly is attributable."

State Bank Call Precedent Upset

The first call in eight years by the state authorities independent of the federal for a bank statement was made last Saturday by Bank Commissioner J. T. Mitchell, who was appointed early this year by Gov. Elliott W. Major to succeed John E. Swanger. An increase in the loans and discounts, a decrease in the cash reserves and a drop in deposits were shown by the statements as of March 26th made by the banks. This condition is attributed to a large demand for money on all hands by merchants and business men in preparing for the spring business. Totals for the three significant items made from the statements of six banks, which made public their statements yesterday, are as follows, compared with totals made from the previous statements as of February 4:

	February 4	March 26
Loans and discounts	$81,939,105	$86,393,551
Cash	44,647,858	36,606,238
Deposits	114,778,321	110,387,796

The institutions included in the above table, with their significant items, are as follows:

Mechanics-American National—Loans and discounts, $22,111,087; cash, $14,720,626; deposits, $33,134,161.

State National—Loans and discounts, $9,154,000; cash, $4,222,000; deposits, $11,376,000.

Mississippi Valley Trust—Loans and discounts, $15,185,741; cash, $4,829,537; deposits, $19,430,483.

Boatmen's Bank—Loans and discounts, $11,682,523; cash, $3,682,222; deposits, $14,000,545.

St. Louis Union Trust—Loans and discounts, $24,808,162; cash, $8,481,707; deposits, $28,450,601.

Commonwealth Trust—Loans and discounts, $3,452,038; cash, $670,146; deposits, $3,996,006.

Missouri's Cash Increase

The report of State Treasurer Deal for the month of March shows a balance in the treasury of $5,541,826.22, an increase of $107,026.90 over one month ago. The collections for March total $484,494.67 and the disbursements amounted to $377,427.77. There is a balance in the general revenue fund of $2,188,262.79 and in the state school moneys of $686,027.96. The penitentiary has a balance of $61,060.61 and earned during the month $29,013.71. The various good roads funds foot up $237,926.64.

Insurance Suits Probable

Unless the fire insurance companies reduce their rates, which, it is claimed, have been boosted, Attorney-general Barker will file anti-trust proceedings against them to oust them from the state. The governor's approval of the Orr bill repealing the Oliver rating law and putting the fire companies again under the provisions of the anti-trust statutes, makes such a proceeding practicable. During the last ten days the attorney-general has received a large number of complaints about the heavy increase of insurance rates. These complaints allege that the rates which the companies have been charging range between 50 and 300 per cent higher than the old competitive rates, which were charged before the enactment of the Oliver rating law. He has received letters from the representatives of some of the companies suggesting that it would be hurtful to Missouri to pursue the drastic course which Texas and some other states took against the companies. He replied that unless the people are given immediate relief he believed it would be a good thing for the state if the companies unwilling to obey the laws were compelled to leave the state. Twice attorneys-general of Missouri in recent years have proceeded against the fire companies to compel them to conduct their business along competitive lines. The first suit was instituted by former Attorney-general Edward C. Crow and the second by former Attorney-general Herbert S. Hadley. The companies paid fines under the Crow proceeding and under the Hadley proceeding they consented, while the preliminary inquiry was under way, to reduce their rates upon condition ouster proceedings were not instituted.

Facing $3,000,000 Deficit

Unless something unexpected occurs, Missouri will have a deficit of approximately $3,000,000 at the close of this biennial period. The legislature appropriated from the general revenues and the state interest funds, both raised by direct taxation, a total of $13,372,497.63. State Auditor Gordon estimates that the revenues for 1913-1914 will not exceed $10,300,000, in which event the state will be over-appropriated unless Governor Major vetoes items in the general appropriation bill aggregating more than $3,000,000. One little revenue measure was enacted. This doubled the tax upon the gross earnings of express companies doing business in Missouri. It is estimated this law, if uncontested, will not yield to exceed $35,000 annually more than the law as it originally stood. Governor Major estimates that the increase in the taxable valuation of real and personal property of Missouri for the year 1913 will not exceed $10,000,000. There will be a correspondingly low increase in public service corporations, so but little more revenue will be derived from these two sources. In the creation of new jobs this legislature broke all previous records, having created new positions with salaries aggregating $542,400 and in addition appropriated out of the general revenue $100,000 for the establishment of teacher training courses in approved high schools, $50,000 for state aid to high schools and $109,000 for relief to counties which had claims for permanent road construction.

Group 7, Arkansas, Meets

Group 7 of the Arkansas Bankers Association convened in annual session at Pine Bluff recently with large numbers of bankers from southeastern Arkansas present. The address of welcome was delivered by S. C. Alexander, president of Merchants and Planters bank. R. L. Hyatt of Pine Bluff responded. William Cargill of Pine Bluff, manager of the Arkansas Packing Company, also addressed the bankers. Drainage and bank audits were discussed in the afternoon and J. H. Dodge of Washington City delivered an illustrated lecture. In the evening at a luncheon Sidney J. Roy, field secretary of National Rivers and Harbors Congress, delivered an address. E. C. Stewart and T. B. Taylor of St. Louis were present.

Woman Made Bank Director

In addition to the election of G. C. Street, Sr., as president of the National Bank of Commerce, of Houston, Tex., to succeed the late Colonel O. T. Holt at the head of that institution, Mrs. O. T. Holt was elected as a member of the board of directors, taking the place formerly held by Col. Holt. Mrs. Holt is one of the best-known women in Houston, having for some time been prominent in Houston society and foremost in all movements making for the advancement of the city.

Captain J. C. Hutcheson also was added to the list of vice-presidents. Mr. Street is a native of Charleston, S. C., and came to Houston in 1878 to engage in the cotton oil mill business. In 1895 he became engaged in the commission business under the firm name of G. C. Street & Co. He now is a farmer, his commission business being in the hands of his son, LeRoy Street.

GEORGE FITCH WRITES ABOUT BANKERS

George Fitch, the Peoria funny man and progressive representative in the legislature, has turned out the following about bankers:

"A banker is a financial shepherd who spends his life guarding flocks of $100 bills.

"Bankers are usually concealed behind cages in large, strong buildings and must be approached respectfully and with caution. Out of business hours bankers are usually jovial and happy, but when a banker enters his office he leaves his heart outside with his rubbers.

"Bankers are greatly disliked for this reason by many people. Yet when a banker carries his heart to work with him he soon begins lending money to old friends in hard luck and when the bank examiner puts up the shutters later on it is found that the sole assets of the bank consist of a lot of promissory notes blotted with tears and worth a dollar a bushel.

"Bankers are cold and unsympathetic when you approach them to borrow $275 on a $5,000 farm in Canada and have great difficulty in recognizing personal friends when the latter need money. You may know a banker well enough to put your arm around his neck and call him Bill when you meet him at the club, but if you ask him for $1,000 for 90 days he will ask you how to spell your name and if you can get two well-known millionaires to sign your note for you.

"Because of these facts borrowers detest banks but depositors love them and bank receipts over the country are increasing faster than strong men with shovels can handle them.

"Bankers are usually rich men and only work from 10 to 2 o'clock. This gives them 20 hours a day in which to worry. Few people realize the banker's facilities for worry. After he has finished with the ordinary worries, such as crops, health, business, weather and trusts he has to go on and worry about discount rates, deposits, New York interest, political agitators, his cashier's automobile, the personal habits of his largest borrower and the state of the bond market.

"For all these reasons we would not care to be banker. We would prefer to be a principal depositor who is entitled to go into the banker's office at all hours with his hat over one ear and sass him with impunity."

LARGER PAID CIRCULATION IN THE MIDDLE WEST THAN ANY THREE OF ITS COMPETITORS COMBINED

JOHN PIERPONT MORGAN

The world at large and the people of the States in particular will remember John Pierpont Morgan as the far outstanding financial genius of his time, if not of all times. His almost supernatural gifts of analysis, insight and decision made him oracular and almost autocratic in corporate affairs. This was true in all countries as in his own. The striking tributes to his memory come from workers, from emperors, from poor and rich.

No death, even that of a king, has been so widely heralded. James J. Townsend, president of the Chicago Stock Exchange, says:

"Morgan was criticised for his United States Steel dealings, and yet he has been able to make that stock pay 5 per cent dividends all of the time. I believe that the world is better off because Morgan lived. I believe that he accumulated his great wealth honestly and in such a way that it did not cause distress among his fellowmen.. He had partially retired from active work, and I do not expect that his death will have any great effect on the market. No one can tell what will happen in the months to come, but I believe that this is too big a country now to be financially shaken by the death of even such a financial king as Morgan."

Mr. Townsend tells briefly of the Morgan sway. Many of his promotions were called inflations as well. Steel in particular, and yet he "made it pay 5 per cent" which in finance is the crucial test as to whether an enterprise is too heavily stocked.

Some of the big chapters out of Mr. Morgan's life condensed to a few words will serve to remind the reader of his effective methods.

In 1871 he created a market in Europe for $25,000,000 worth of New York Central stock.

In 1877 he handled an issue of $260,000,000 of government bonds in preparation for placing the national currency on a gold basis.

In 1880 he provided $40,000,000 for the extension of the Northern Pacific railroad to the Pacific coast. In the same year he led in the reorganization of the Reading railroad and of the Baltimore & Ohio, involving syndicate work and the loan of $10,000,000.

In 1893 the Southern railroad was created out of the Richmond Terminal and allied lines.

In 1895 the Erie railroad was rehabilitated.

In 1897 the Lehigh Valley was put on its feet, the soft coal combination formed and the Central Railroad of New Jersey leased by the Reading.

In 1901 he secured American subscriptions to the amount of $50,000,000 to the British war loan.

Other achievements of the "Doctor of Wall Street" were the floating of the securities of the United States Steel Corporation, the fathering of the agreement between the anthracite coal operators and the federating of soft coal interests in Ohio, Indiana and Pennsylvania. Also there must be mentioned the money victories which have given him interest in 50,000 miles of railways in America and shipping companies and English traction companies.

One feat of Mr. Morgan's which deserves a distinct niche in his chronology was that when in 1892, in company with August Belmont, he undertook to and did maintain the gold reserve in the federal treasury, although he suspended the laws of exchange, incurring heated criticism, in order to accomplish the result.

This is not all, but it will serve. In another column will be found a summary of public opinion—press and individual—which can be used in making the reader's own estimate.

THE BURROUGHS AND THE GOVERNMENT

It wasn't banking news is the real reason we did not print anything concerning the court controversies of the Burroughs Adding Machine Company of Detroit with the government over the business practices of the corporation. The Burroughs was "on the list" with the Cash Register and other industrials and the moment President Joseph Boyer learned of it he asked for prompt action. Mr. Boyer told the government "and satisfied them that if there ever had been any violation of the anti-trust laws on our part it was purely technical, and that the charges which had been made against us either were wholly unfounded or were based upon isolated instances of indiscretion on the part of overzealous salesmen, without the knowledge of the company and in violation of its instructions and policy.

"Under these circumstances an amicable arrangement with the goverment was effected, which now has been carried out by the filing of a suit and the entry by consent of a formal decree which satisfies the government and does not in any way interfere with the conduct of our business as we always have desired and intended to have it conducted."

Every banker-user of the Burroughs will be glad to know that its manufacture and distribution are carried on quite as scrupulously in a business way as they are mechanically. Banking could have no alliance with a business conducted under "unfair" policies. It is a pleasure to help tell the public that President Boyer and his splendid machine stand o. k. with the government and that Burroughs methods are above criticism.

HISTORY MAKING EVENTS

Recent events have been momentous in the great loss or human life; in America by flood and storm, in Europe by the fortunes of war. The practical close of the Balkan war came with the fall of Adrianople, accompanied by the loss of thousands of lives and the destruction of millions in property. The end of all prospect of a general European war would have had a stimulating market effect but for the great Middle West disasters by flood and cyclone. Thousands of Americans have lost their lives and hundreds of millions will not pay the property loss. Whole industries have been blotted out and thousands of families are homeless, hungry and penniless. It has been a crushing blow and the loyal citizens of the country are coming to the aid of the sufferers in a way that tells us the world is better really than many think.

In Illinois the senatorial deadlock has been broken in the only possible way, and the wonder grows that it was suffered to continue for months. The state has suffered in prestige, and salaries and expenses have been worse than wasted. Promised banking legislation has been deferred and the business of the whole state paralyzed by the political conflict. From now on an attempt should be made to make amends.

The whole state waits for banking supervision. Three states since the first of the year have passed up-to-date banking supervision bills, and the country wants to hear from Illinois.

CALIFORNIA AS A BANKING STATE

American National of San Francisco says in its March letter:

"It may not be generally known that California stands fifth in point of banking strength among the states, being outranked only by New York, Pennsylvania, Massachusetts and Illinois, in the order named. This holds good whether reference is made to capital and surplus, deposits or total resources, according to figures published in the annual report of the comptroller of the currency for 1912. The aggregate of individual deposits in all the banks of California on June 14, 1912 (both state and national included), was $795,604,000. In savings bank deposits alone, California with $389,000,000 outranks Illinois with $323,000,000 and is exceeded only by New York, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. With the exception of the thrifty old New England state, and New York, the amount of savings deposits per capita is higher in California than in the other states, while the average size of depositors' accounts is considerably greater in California than in any eastern state, or any foreign country."

FIRST NATIONAL DIVIDEND

First National declared its usual quarterly dividend of 4¼ per cent, payable April 1st.

The tariff revision is looked forward to with less uneasiness, and confidence is already manifest in business circles in the ability of the administration to effect changes in duties without disturbance to manufacturing interests generally.—Ware & Leland.

THE NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL BANK
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

THE FOUNDERS of this bank, in 1872, looked far afield and called the new institution The Northwestern. ¶ This wide vision has been steadfastly maintained and the resulting public responsibilities have been fully met. ¶ That its responsibilities to stockholders have been abundantly discharged is shown by the fact that its dividends have averaged over eight per cent since its organization. Its deposits have nearly quadrupled in ten years.

GUARDING DEPOSITORS' MONEY

(William Buckley in Leslie's.)

From the moment a depositor lines up before the receiving teller's window of a bank and lays his bills on the counter until he again receives back his money from the paying teller his deposit has been surrounded by a network of devices to insure its safekeeping. It has been subjected to the rigid banking laws of the state or nation, to a guardianship by a host of public officials, by steel and by timelocks, by the vigilance of the bank officials and the surveillance of bonding companies. And yet, in spite of this constant effort, though the depositor rarely loses himself, sometimes his money mysteriously disappears, and until the guilty person is detected the shadow of a doubt hangs over the personnel of that bank, from the office boy to the president. Such, however, is the system of vigilance by which the public, through its agents of the law, guards funds on deposit, that it is only rarely that the money so taken is not recovered.

The marvel is not that men daily, hourly, tempted with opportunities to purloin the wealth which passes through their fingers, sometimes yield to this temptation, but that the percentage of loss from theft which the banks of the country sustain is not greater than it is. Indeed, so unusual is the occurrence of a theft by a member of the bank's personnel, that when such is the case the bank's nervous organization is thrown out of equilibrium. The bank as a bank never rests until the theft is uncovered, and the guilty man is made to reimburse the cash taken.

COMPLETES BILL ON CURRENCY

One of the first currency reform bills to be introduced after the special session of congress convenes will be a measure just completed by Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, one of the democratic members of the new senate committee on banking and currency. It will provide for twenty individual banking associations in the United States, each supreme in its own territory, and with no central agency of control, such as was proposed by the National Monetary Commission.

Senator Hitchcock's bill will not bear the indorsement of the senate committee when it appears; but it is expected to form the basis for much of the early currency discussion. Senator Owen, chairman of the senate committee, who has been ill for some time, will take up currency matters next week and arrange for conferences with house members and with President Wilson.

Bert E. Mitchner of Holton, Kan., has been appointed bank examiner by Commissioner Sawyer of Kansas.

Many Pay Tribute to Morgan

Many were the tributes paid by the press and prominent Chicago financiers to the memory of J. Pierpont Morgan, who died in Rome this week.

George M. Reynolds who is at his winter residence in Pasadena, said:

"Mr. Morgan has done an infinite amount of good, more than the general public realizes. He has done it in a quiet, unassuming way, and many of his greatest benefactions are unknown to most Americans. He had the confidence and respect of his associates and of the business world in general, so that his death, while not a surprise, is regretted.

"I have never known J. P. Morgan to do a mean or a little thing nor to resort to petty things to obtain revenge on those who had done him a wrong. He was one of the greatest figures in financial circles the world has ever known, and it is impossible to say whether another as great will arise in the next generation."

"I believe that the world, and not the United States alone, is losing one of the greatest financiers that ever lived. It will be some time before his successor will be found. I don't believe his death will have any effect on the stock market or business in general, excepting a sentimental effect. Morgan & Co. have anticipated his death and taken care of everything. J. Pierpont Morgan has financed and is responsible for the success of the greatest projects of the world," said H. E. Otte, vice-president of the National City Bank.

James E. Otis, vice-president of the Central Trust, spoke of Mr. Morgan as a constructive financier, saying:

"Mr. Morgan did more for America in the way of building up than any other man in history. He was a constructionist from the beginning. We owe him more than we can hope to repay by the most sentimental expressions. He was a monumental figure and we will not have his equal for many years. His death had been anticipated. We felt that the Cairo illness was the beginning of the end."

Frank O. Wetmore, vice-president of the First National, in speaking of Mr. Morgan, said: "His was the greatest name in finance."

Ralph Van Vechten, vice-president of the Continental and Commercial National, said: "I have always been a great admirer of Mr. Morgan. He was a broad gauge man and had been immensely useful in the upbuilding of the country. He was never a destroyer, but always a conserver. He was a remarkable character, and more remarkable than anything else and more indicative of the real man was his testimony before the Pujo committee that he had never sold 'short' in his whole life.

"Mr. Morgan came to the rescue of the government several times. He was the most remarkable man America has produced.

"While his death is a great loss to the world, his business is so well organized that there will be no noticeable effect.

"Mr. Morgan will be more greatly missed and appreciated as the years go on."

Charles W. Dawes, president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, in speaking of the effect of Mr. Morgan's death, said:

"The death of Mr. Morgan is a loss to the nation and to the world. He was constructive above all things and his position of great power came from the fact that he led men because of their confidence in him and not because he drove them. His death will probably have no radical or permanent business effect, for the reason that he had long ago organized his business so as to allow time to devote to outside matters. The splendid organization which he built up, headed by his able son, who in character and strength much resembles his father, will carry on the Morgan enterprises as they have been in the past."

Ernest A. Hamill, president of the Corn Exchange National, said: "Mr. Morgan was a man of high ideals and probably the greatest financier the country ever has had."

"Mr. Morgan was a wonderful man and had a wonderful grasp of his business," said E. G. Foreman of Foreman Brothers Banking Company.

Statement by Kuhn, Loeb & Company

Kuhn, Loeb & Company made the following statement: "It is with the sincerest grief that we have learned of the death of J. Pierpont Morgan. The financial community mourns in him the greatest leader it has ever had, whose influence and power was based no more upon his commanding ability than upon the universal confidence in the loftiness of his motives, in his loyalty, fairmindedness and the ever splendid qualities of his character.

"The country at large has lost one of its noblest and most patriotic citizens. The immense services which he had rendered to the country, his many benefactions, his innumerable acts of personal charity and helpfulness, his public spirit, to which no worthy cause ever appealed in vain, assure for his great name an honored, grateful and affectionate memory."

President W. C. Brown of the New York Central Lines

W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central Lines, said:

"In the death of Mr. Morgan the city, the state and the nation lose one of its foremost citizens.

"Some years must elapse and a closer study of his life than is possible at this time be made to secure a just perspective of the man and his life's work. A profound confidence in the future of the country and a lofty patriotism which manifested themselves on all occasions, but especially so in time of financial stress, were his dominating traits of character."

Minneapolis Bankers Expect no Business Disturbance

"The death of J. Pierpont Morgan should have no effect upon business," said E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National. "The financial world has known of his illness, consequently there is no such financial shock as might have followed his sudden passing. But a greater reason for believing that no ill effect will follow is the important fact that Mr. Morgan was a constructive financier. He was not a wrecker. His name is not associted with the destruction of property values for personal gain. On the contrary he has rehabilitated many a property that had come to a bad condition through incompetent management or from other causes and his great reputation is based upon notable instances where he took over bankrupt properties, put money into them and made them successfully operative.

"His death, while a matter of first importance to the financial world, of importance not only in the United States, but in the monetary centers of Europe, should not have any disturbing or unsettling effect."

"There is no reason why Mr. Morgan's death should have any adverse effect upon general business," said President Frank M. Prince of the First National. "While he was pre-eminent in finance and his death is a loss to the country, it is some time since he has given as close attention to financial matters as he formerly did, and the whole world knew he was ill and was prepared for his death."

Perry Harrison, vice-president of the Security National, said there should be no effect upon business as a result of Mr. Morgan's death. "He was known to have been failing for some time and the financial world was prepared," Mr. Harrison said. "It probably will be found that the effect upon business of his passing was anticipated and has been discounted."

London Papers Laud Dead Financier

"An English friend," believed to be Lord Northcliffe, writing to the Daily Mail, says: "The passing of Mr. Morgan is a loss to Great Britain as well as to the United States. Perhaps because of his English associations, perhaps by reason of his great admiration for English institutions and the marriages contracted by his kinsfolk with English people, Mr. Morgan was a strong factor in making a good feeling between the English people and Americans."

The Daily Telegraph says: "America has lost a great financier, whose integrity was never questioned, whose methods on the whole have been in undeniable service to his country."

The Daily News says: "Little known to the outside world, in business he inspired confidence as a monument of integrity."

Paris Papers Express Sorrow

Appreciations of Mr. Morgan are published in most of the Paris morning papers, which call attention to his high position in international finance, his benevolence, and culture.

The Figaro says: "Mr. Morgan's death will cause sincere sorrow to France. The French museum possesses many proofs of his generosity, and the government intended to confer upon him the high distinction of grand officer of the Legion of Honor on his next visit to France."

Chicago Papers Tell of Life

"Mr. Morgan's genius was entirely constructive. He believed in building up, not in tearing down and profiting by others' misfortunes. Men have made millions by wrecking and undermining valuable properties; Mr. Morgan always rehabilitated, restored, consolidated. He exemplified and served the salient tendencies of the age—combination, efficiency and economy. His motto, recently formulated to the public, was, 'Character is the basis of credit,' and character was certainly the basis of his own credit with hundreds of thousands of investors and capitalists the world over. He inspired absolute confidence as a master builder and farsighted promoter; and no mere series of lucky accidents will explain his unbroken successes, his rapid rise to unchallenged preeminence."—Chicago Record-Herald.

"In the death of J. Pierpont Morgan the world loses its greatest constructive financier. He had imagination such as makes great artists and poets, but he applied it to material things. To Morgan, more than to any other man, is due the credit for the wonderful development of the United States in the last generation. There were other men who made more money, and whose operations rank with his in the brilliancy of performance, but Morgan was always unique in that he always worked on the constructive side of business and made more money for other people than he did for himself.

"Money-making was to him only an incident of business. He delighted in great productive enterprises just as an artist delights in a great canvas. When he looked at the stock market he did not see figures. The ticker tape was to him a panorama of rushing trains and steamships and roaring factories."—Thomas C. Shotwell in the Chicago American.

New York Papers Praise Him

"A great figure disappears from the stage of the world's activities in the passing of John Pierpont Morgan. The banking house established by his father and developed by him and those whom he associated with himself and whose work he guided, has become one of the largest and most influential of international financial agencies which serve, in a degree rarely appreciated, the industries and the commerce of his own country in its relations with other countries. The magnitude of what he accomplished in his lifetime no one ventures to question. The ability, the foresight, the grasp of complex questions of finance and trade, the sound judgment and the tireless energy which he displayed in his active years, are equally admitted. Another quality, equally essential to his success and exhibited in equal measure, is not so universally acknowledged; but this is an appropriate time for recognizing it. His integrity of character in all his dealings, his fidelity to every obligation, and the rigid standard of business morality which he exemplified and exacted from others, were less conspicuous to the public eye, but were as well known to those familiar with his practical methods of conducting his own affairs and the affairs of others. He recognized the vast importance of confidence in the dealings of men. He won the confidence of others in a remarkable degree, and he exacted from others a standard of conduct which assured confidence in them."—New York Journal of Commerce.

"It is interesting to ask whether J. Pierpont Morgan led the development of his time or, perceiving it quicker than any other, took command and regulated it. Like a good workman, he did not quarrel with his tools. He made the best of the means at hand, and, in the face of a banking and currency system faulty in principle and utterly inadequate in operation, his deserved supremacy as a banker, his insistence upon character in the conduct of business, his calculated courage in an emergency, with the confidence that his dominating personality inspired, enabled him to save the situation where nothing but supreme leadership stood between the country and irretrievable disaster."—Wall Street Journal.

JOLIET (ILL.) BANK ISSUES FORECAST

Joliet National has just issued its business forecast for the month of April, saying in part:

"After a fortnight under the new administration a confidence seems to pervade the general business situation which indicates that no serious disturbance of business is expected. The special session of congress will affect the volume of business in certain lines, of course; buying will be in small lots.

"It cannot be said that we have discounted possible tariff revision downward because a lack of knowledge as to the extent of the revision prevents a fair discounting, but we have without question prepared for some lowering of the tariffs on every schedule which will be taken up.

"Currency legislation of a substantial nature is hoped for, but it is not even expected that any wholly satisfactory banking and currency measures can be put through. It is possibly that some action may be had which will lay a foundation for future amendment.

"The clearings of banks for February showed an improvement over February, 1912. The February clearings set a new February mark."

RUMELY'S EARNINGS PUBLISHED

Earnings of the M. Rumely Company in 1912, including those of the Rumely Products Company and the Northwestern Thresher Company, furnished a balance of $1,824,500 after the deduction of all expenses, discounts and interest. This amount, after allowing 7 per cent on the preferred stock, provided a balance of about $1,124,000, or 10.3 per cent on the outstanding common stock. The book value of the common is about $90.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Much interest attaches to a series of suits brought last week by David R. Francis of St. Louis, banker and former governor, against the National Bank of Commerce, the Southwest National Bank of Commerce and Dr. W. S. Woods, all of Kansas City, to recover $50,000 which Francis says is due him for the services he rendered in reorganizing the National Bank of Commerce after its failure in 1907. Dr. Woods was president of the old National Bank of Commerce, and it is alleged that when that institution closed its doors Dr. Woods secured the services of Mr. Francis to put its affairs in such shape as to receive the government's sanction for reopening. The Southwest National Bank of Commerce was not in existence at the time Mr. Francis says he was employed but was organized later and took over the business of the National Bank of Commerce. This institution seems to be in no way liable for any money that may be due Mr. Francis and the only place of recovery seems to be Dr. Woods. It is contended that Dr. Woods was not authorized to employ Mr. Francis and therefore no obligation stands against the old National Bank of Commerce or its successor. The old bank being out of existence, the only chance Mr. Francis seems to have is in securing a personal judgment against Dr. Woods, at present in California. The affair has given no concern whatever to the Southwest National Bank of Commerce which merely took over the assets of the old bank. The three suits were brought because Mr. Francis was uncertain where responsibility rested. Each suit is for $50,000, and recovery on one automatically would invalidate any other claim.

Bank Robbers Busy Again

Bank robbers reopened operations in three Central West states last week and as a result two yeggmen were killed and another gang was forced to escape without securing anything of value. In the little town of Barnes, Kan., in Washington county near the Nebraska line, an unknown bandit and Robert L. Brown, cashier of the Barnes State, fought a desperate duel, the latter falling dead on the bank floor, while the bandit was killed a few minutes later while attempting to escape from a crowd of pursuers. Cashier had just opened the bank in the morning and was getting out the cash when the stranger entered and commanded the banker to throw up his hands. Brown reached for a revolver and opened fire but missed. The robber then shot down the cashier, grabbed a sack containing $600 in currency and started to run. John Potter, assistant cashier, entered about that time and gave the alarm. Several men joined in the chase, including Daniel Spence, cashier of the Exchange State across the street. The robber was shot and killed in front of the residence of the dead cashier. He has not been identified. The same day a similar affair occurred at Naper, Neb., when Clifford Rohr, a cowboy, tried to rob the First National by holding up Vice-president Erickson. Marshal Zimmerman of the town heard the disturbance and entered the bank in time to encounter the cowboy who opened fire on him. A rapid exchange of shots followed and Rohr fell dead. Early in the morning of March 31st, three yeggmen blew open the outer door of the safe of the Bank of Alton, Mo., and were placing another charge when they were discovered by citizens who fired upon them. The yeggmen ran and escaped in a stolen buggy, taking some papers belonging to the bank, of little value. There was $30,000 in the safe. Bloodhounds were secured but the trail was lost.

New Home for Kansas City Bank

The twelve-story building now nearing completion at Tenth and Walnut streets in Kansas City will be the home of the National Bank of the Republic after May 1st. The bank occupied an old building on the same site but when it was decided to build a new and splendid office structure on the corner the financial institution was moved to temporary quarters diagonally across the street in what is known as the Arlington building. The new building is owned by the bank and sumptuous quarters now are being fitted up on the first floor as a permanent home for the institution. Perhaps no other bank in Kansas City, except the Southwest National Bank of Commerce across the street to the north, will have a more beautiful bank lobby or handsomer fittings.

Kansas Convention

When the Kansas State Bankers Association convenes in Topeka, April 10th-11th, special attention will be given to the social side of the occasion and all of the visitors are urged to bring their wives. Topeka is noted for its hospitality, and plans have been matured to provide suitable entertainment for both men and women visitors. This meeting will be important as an exhaustive discussion of banking legislation recently enacted by the Kansas legislature makes up a large part of the formal program. The speakers include Governor George H. Hodges, Charles Sawyer, the new state bank commissioner; J. N. Dolley, retiring bank commissioner; Mayor J. B. Billard, and state bankers from all over the state. E. S. Chenoweth of McCracken is president of the association; William Macferran of Topeka is first vice-president; John E. Wagner of Larned, second vice-president; W. E. Wilson, Washington, secretary; and F. G. Bergen, Summerfield, is treasurer. The district vice-presidents are: First district, F. M. Wilson, Soldier, and Otto Wulfekuhler, Leavenworth; second district, T. J. Sweeney, Lawrence, and J. H. Campbell, Iola; third district, M. A. Householder, Columbus, and C. A. Truesdell, Burden; fourth district, Will Wayman, Emporia, and A. R. Wallace, White City; fifth district, Harry O'Brien, Clifton, and E. Laughlin, Marysville; sixth district, J. E. Gleason, Norton, and W. A. Matson, Jewell; seventh district, D. F. Callahan, Kingman, and C. M. Branch, Hutchinson; eighth district, George W. Robinson, Wichita, and J. D. Joseph, Whitewater.

Charles Sawyer Succeeds J. N. Dolley

On the first day of April, J. N. Dolley turned over to his successor, Charles Sawyer, the office of bank commissioner of Kansas. Mr. Dolley has been a very conspicuous figure in Kansas, and as the author of the "Blue Sky" idea, he has come into national prominence. For it was Mr. Dolley who first worked out the "Blue Sky" bill that afterward became a law in Kansas and has been copied by a score of other states. Mr. Dolley also was a pioneer in the bank deposit guaranty movement, putting the Kansas law into effect after much litigation and opposition. Before leaving his office Mr. Dolley summed up the operations of the bank guaranty law in Kansas, which has formed the basis for practically all similar legislation all over the Union.

The bank deposit guaranty law has been in operation in Kansas for four years, and there has been but one failure in that time, and not a cent of the guaranty fund has been taken to meet the liabilities of any bank. There are 464 state banks now participating in the guaranty plan, more than half the state banks doing business in Kansas. The Abilene State, wrecked by John A. Flack, is the only bank participating in the guaranty plan that failed, and its assets almost will pay all of its liabilities, so that no money has been taken from the guaranty fund up to the present time. All of the depositors of the Abilene bank have been paid, but its affairs have not been entirely settled.

The total deposits guaranteed under the Kansas law aggregate fifty million dollars, a little more than half the total deposits in the state banks. Since the law went into effect only four banks have withdrawn, and the number participating has steadily increased. The guaranty fund has in actual cash in the state treasurer's office, $108,051.79, secured from the annual assessments made on the banks each year of 1/20 of 1 per cent of the average deposits of the banks for the previous year. In addition to the actual cash there is on deposit $349,877 in bonds, deposited by the banks as a guaranty that they will turn over the cash needed to meet the special assessments which may be made in case there are several failures in a single year. So there is actually on deposit in the guaranty fund $457,928 which may be used in paying off the depositors of failed banks.

The Bank Deposit Guaranty Company, the corporation organized by the national banks of the state at the time the guaranty law was put into effect, has enjoyed a nice business as the guaranty plan has grown. This association now has 103 banks in which deposits are guaranteed by the company. Of these, twenty-four are state banks and seventy-nine are national banks.

Bankers Contribute to Omaha Relief Fund

On account of the devastating storm which visited Omaha on Easter day, the financial business of that city was badly demoralized last week. All of the local banks became depositories for relief funds and bank officers had a prominent part in the work of relief and temporary restoration. None of the banks was in the path of the storm but a number of bankers suffered heavy losses to their residences and other property. It will be several weeks before business in Omaha will become normal and in the meantime the Omaha bankers invite relief funds which will be used to aid those who have suffered the most severe storm losses. Bankers of Nebraska, Kansas, and other neighboring states have contributed liberally to the Omaha relief fund and have volunteered as collection agencies for those who wished to help in the various communities.

Central West Notes

Charles Campbell, president of the Campbell Paint and Glass Company of Kansas City and first vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company, is very ill at his home, "White Gables," Thirty-sixth and Main streets, Kansas City. Grave fears are entertained as to his recovery.

According to a joint resolution of the Oklahoma legislature passed last week, the people of that state will have an opportunity of voting on a bond issue of $2,500,000 for a state capitol at the next general election.

Six Kansas City financial institutions have agreed to finance the plan to acquire and improve a plaza in front of Kansas City's new union passenger station, which will be opened in the fall. The banks will advance the money, taking a deed of trust for $150,000 worth of municipal property. The banks in the deal are the Fidelity Trust Company, the New England National, the First National, the Southwest National Bank of Commerce, the National Bank of the Republic and the Pioneer Trust Company.

A substantial building is being erected for the use of the First State Bank of Blanket, Brown County, Tex., which now is being organized.

With the organization of the Guaranty State of Robston, and the Farmers State of Big Sandy, the total number of Texas state banks now is 800.

C. R. Waterhouse, of Kansas City, has bought a controlling interest in the Ponca State Bank of Ponca City, Okla.

Announcement has been made of the organization of a new national bank in Cleburne, Tex., which will have a capital stock of $100,000.

The Citizens State of Blair, Okla., has McAlester, Okla., have appealed from the decision of Judge Liedtke of the superior court, holding that a bank can be assessed as agent of the shareholders, the capital stock already having been assessed.

The Citizens State of Blair, Okla., has changed hands, the purchasers being H. Mathewson of Manitou, Okla., and J. T. Jackson of Olustee. They will nationalize it immediately with a capital of $25,000.

John A. Blair, of Blair & Co., New York bankers, was in Kansas City for a short time last week in connection with organization work of the Kansas City Southern Railway Company.

The following out-of-town bankers were Kansas City visitors last week: William Houk, president of the Conqueror Trust Company, Joplin, Mo.; Frank Larabee, president of the Farmers National, Stafford, Kan.; H. D. Price, president of the First State Bank of Keoti, Kan.; E. W. Moses, president of the German-American State, Great Bend, Kan.; Howard Hannah, vice-president of the Fidelity State, Cleveland, Okla.; W. T. Atkinson, vice-president of the Mexico Savings, Mexico, Mo.; A. W. Hurley, cashier of the Citizens National, Pawhuska, Okla.; Berne Hostettler, cashier of the Earlton (Kan.) state; F. W. Mollenbrock, cashier of the Bank of Blackburn (Mo.), and H. C. Rupert, cashier of the Swedish-American Bank, Courtland, Kan.

PITTSBURGH CONDITIONS

Peoples National of Pittsburgh says in its monthly letter:

"The past month furnished a striking illustration of the intimate relations subsisting among the world's money markets. The strain was most severe on the Continent, being acute in Germany, to which country the United States exported gold for the first time since 1908. It was felt in all the foreign markets, and extended to this country. Here in Pittsburgh a fairly firm 6 per cent rate prevailed on all classes of loans. Fortunately, the consciousness of sound underlying conditions in the situation at home and the entire absence of speculative inflation in any part of the United States (more especially in the general stock market) relieved the stringency from any accompaniment of positive uneasiness. There was a slight accession to the conservative feeling noticed in the previous month, but nothing of a character to induce the withholding of banking credit from legitimate commercial operations. Every dollar of funds was free to work full time, hence there was no enforced restraint upon business.

"Commercial conditions in the Pittsburgh district last month did not undergo much change. The steel trade continued active, with shipments of finished products somewhat in excess of the booking of new orders. The coal trade was less active, the mild weather reducing domestic consumption, and the wholesale trade awaiting the negotiation of spring contracts and the opening of the lakes. A considerable shipment, however, was made to the southern markets by river. The coke trade was quieter, with some concession from prices quoted earlier in the year, and similar conditions existed as to pig iron. Other important industries of the district continued seasonably active."

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

That the average size of the Minnesota farm has increased an acre a year for twenty years, is the report of the agricultural college of the University of Minnesota. This average now is 177 acres. Altogether there are in farms in the state 156,137 acres. The report estimates farm property to be worth $1,476,411,737 with a crop value for 1912 of $218,502,250. The division of valuations is as follows: Lands, $1,019,102,027; buildings, $243,339,399; implements and machinery, $53,329,165; live stock, $161,641,146. Since 1890 the farm valuation has almost trebled to an average of $9,456, as compared with $3,549 twenty-three years ago. The acreage valuation has grown from $18.22 to $45.62. Implements average $335 a farm as compared with $145 in 1890. The average price of domestic animals on the farm is $1,035, and $494 in 1890.

Banking Department Would Have Low Rates for Farmer

Circulars inquiring about rates of interest on certificates of deposits and changes in rates have been sent by the state examiner to the state banks in Minnesota. One question is as to the amount of each bank's funds invested in first farm mortgages. Another is whether, if the state banks agree to lower the rate on certificates, it would permit a higher rate on farm mortgages. The department's idea is to make farm loans more desirable, and interest rates lower to the farmer.

Minnesota Changes

Numerous changes have taken place in Minnesota banks. At Judson, ten miles west of Mankato, a bank is to begin May 1 with $15,000 capital. Thomas James is to be cashier. State banks are proposed for Eagle Lake and Garden City, also in Blue Earth county. The First State of Gary has elected officers as follows: President, D. C. Jones; vice-president, Norman Hanson; cashier, Nels Bagne. The bank has taken the stock formerly owned by W. H. Mathews and it will be sold to stockholders. Mr. Jones succeeds Mr. Mathews on the board and Mr. Bagne, assistant cashier, succeeds Mr. Jones. Cashier Alfred Hoel of the First National of Gilbert has been elected vice-president of the First National of Biwabik. He will assist President F. B. Myers in supervision of the banks on the Range. R. W. Barstow of Barnum is arranging to open a bank at Cromwell May 1st. Capital will be $10,000 and surplus $2,000. Mr. Barstow will be cashier. Warren Miller bought an interest in the State of Verdi and became cashier April 1st. Mr. Miller has been a resident of Lake Benton. He is an attorney and will continue practice of law as far as practicable.

Floods Hamper Banking

W. R. Dawes, vice-president and cashier of the Central Trust company of Illinois, through which many collection accounts of northwestern banks are handled, has sent out circulars from his Chicago office, copies of which Minneapolis bankers received to-day, saying that conditions in the Ohio flood districts may delay exchange of checks for some time. As rapidly as possible, the circular says, collections will be made and the amounts forwarded, but checks drawn on banks in Dayton, Columbus, Zanesville or other towns are subject to indefinite delay as to time of a cashing.

Minneapolis Clearings

An average increase in Minneapolis bank clearings for the first quarter of the year of $800,000 a day brought the gain over the same quarter of 1912 at $56,731,277. The total clearings were $303,093,116. In January the gain was $31,000,000 and in February nearly $10,000,000, the gain said to have been due to manufacturing and trade activity. Spring opening caused the big gain in March. By months the 1913 clearings were: January, $117,148,102; February, $87,176,262; March, $98,768,751.

Northwest Notes

The Northern Mississippi River Power Company, subsidiary to H. M. Byllesby & Co., which is constructing a power house at Coon Creek Rapids, a short distance above Minneapolis, has completed plans to issue $2,500,000 bonds covered by a trust deed to the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings of Chicago. Work is under way.

Joseph Chapman, vice-president of the Northwestern National, has been reindorsed. C. G. Schulz, state superintendent of instruction in Minnesota, said of the Chapman plan to build a model rural consolidated school for the state fair grounds: "Mr. Chapman's idea is a splendid one. Such a building would be instrumental in hastening the acceptance of the consolidation gospel by rural communities. Such a building would cost a few thousands. Surely no greater good could be accomplished for a like expenditure."

The Security National circular reads: "After a fortnight under the new administration confidence pervades the general business situation. The coming session of congress will affect business in some lines." Promising crop conditions are indicated in winter wheat and rye. The Northwestern National circular reads: "The three weeks of democratic administration have brought nothing to justify the predictions made by Mr. Wilson's opponents that his administration would be disastrous to prosperity."

The Security National Bank added $200,000 to surplus, raising it to $2,000,000, or twice the capital. The undivided profits are $400,000. The Security declared a 4 per cent quarterly dividend, the Northwestern National 3 per cent and the First went on a 3 per cent quarterly basis. Formerly the bank paid 3½ per cent with an extra annual dividend of 2 per cent.

The Northwestern National Life Insurance Company has placed a $50,000 policy on the life of Emil Oberhoffe, conductor for the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra. The annual premium is $1,500. The policy was ordered by the Minneapolis Orchestral Association. The policy will protect the association against loss on its lease of the Auditorium and its contracts in case of the demise of the conductor. An important member of the orchestra recently died suddenly in Washington, D. C., while the orchestra was on a tour and this set the directors of the association thinking.

Dakota Notes

South Dakota's treasurer, guessing about the refusal of eastern financial houses to bid on $500,000 state revenue warrants, sold them to local banks. Formerly the warrants have sold easily in the East at 4 and 5 per cent. This year most of the replies were, "not interested." Only one bid was received, and that was at 6 per cent. A Deadwood bank bid 5¼ per cent, which was considered too high, and by a little effort on the part of the treasurer the whole amount was floated in different banks in Pierre, Sioux Falls, Aberdeen, Redfield and Brookings at 5 per cent straight, showing that for such a sum the state need not worry as to what eastern bankers will do.

The South Dakota bankers of the Watertown district elected officers as follows: President, W. B. Ryalls, Watertown; vice-president, H. L. Hopkins, Brookings; secretary-treasurer, C. A. Fountain, Watertown. The association decided to give special aid to farmers for the good farming movement as typified in the Codington County Better Farming Association, of which Colonel Lee Stover is president. Thirty outside bankers were present. E. L. Mattson, cashier of the Scandinavian American National, Minneapolis, was on the program.

Condition of South Dakota state banks is discussed by the examiner as follows:

"The reserve condition of the banks is normal and shows a slight decline of thirty-two one-hundreths of 1 per cent, but remained strong at 29.10 per cent, notwithstanding the decline in deposits of $3,490,000, and the distribution of dividends to stockholders of $850,000. Deposits showed the heaviest average decline for any similar period for months, due in large part to interest and tax payments and the March 1st settlements. A large amount is required for settlements and real estate loans that mature around February 1st to March 1st, most of which money goes out of the state. The country in general has in the past three years been depleted in live stock, but early spring shipments have begun and cattle are again being put back on the ranges, ranches and farms, notwithstanding that they are going higher in price. The money that is used for buying grazing cattle is a prime factor in the reduction of deposits in the state."

Following the last call the examiner found a decrease of $1,988,432.09 in first real estate mortgages, while in the resources there is a decrease of $5,008,555, the total for the February call being $107,276,088. There is a decrease in deposits subject to check of $1,674,377, while there is a decrease of $1,231,070.25 in savings deposits.

The report shows that two banks have suspended business since the call was made in November, and that there are now 625 national and state banks, with private banks and trust companies.

Robert Mucklen, president of the State of Rockham, S. D., has sold a controlling interest to the Farmers State, and the banks have consolidated with $25,000 capital. C. E. Smith, is president and B. C. Hagman cashier.

SAN ANTONIO BANK TO INCREASE CAPITAL

Stockholders of the Central Trust of San Antonio, Texas, have voted to increase the capital stock from $500,000 to $1,000,000, which will make the Central the second largest trust company in the state.

Plowing at 30 Miles an Hour

A Rumely OilPull Tractor pulls an Engine Gang Plow, often turning 12 furrows at once. This is equal to a single horse-plow moving at a speed of 30 miles an hour.

High Speed Plowing! That is what has been accomplished by the

RUMELY OILPULL TRACTOR LA PORTE IND.

Until the coming of the tractor, the plow was the slowest of all farm machinery. It turned only one furrow at a time, and it moved at 2½ miles an hour.

A cablegram can be sent completely around the world while a horse-plow is moving 200 yards. But now, pulled by a Rumely Tractor, the plow has been speeded up. It is no longer the snail of the farm.

Guy C. Browne, eldest son of the late J. J. Browne, Spokane pioneer and banker, has purchased from the Browne estate the Columbia Valley Bank, largest and oldest at Wenatchee, Wash. Mr. Browne intends to give up his residence in Spokane and move to Wenatchee next fall. He is associated with a syndicate of Spokane and Seattle business men. The Columbia Valley is capitalized for $100,000, and was organized by J. J. Browne in 1892. Among the Spokane bankers associated with Mr. Browne in the purchase are A. F. McClaine, president, and Alfred Coolidge, D. M. Drumheller and J. A. Schiller of the Traders National. Others interested are Frank C. Robertson of Miles City, Mont.; H. C. Culver of Sandpoint, Idaho; G. W. Maxwell, president of the National City of Seattle; F. W. Baker of the same institution; D. E. Skinner, a Seattle lumberman; G. H. Bloedel, H. Baum, Jr.; C. M. Lamont, Lewis Heinrich of the Seattle Brewing Company; and Albert Daub of Alberta. Mr. Browne also is president of the Cashmere State at Cashmere, Wash.

M. M. Cook, cashier of the National Bank of Commerce, has resigned as vice-president of the First National of Hillyard, and has been succeeded by W. S. Brant of Scotland, S. D. Mr. Cook remains a director of the Hillyard institution. Mr. Brant has been in Hillyard for about a week, and has assumed charge of the bank there, of which Joseph Farrow is president; B. S. Sheire, cashier; and R. I. McGinnis, assistant cashier.

Articles of incorporation were filed this week by the Eltopia (Wash.) State, with a capital stock of $10,000. The incorporators are Felix Van Hollebeke, Robert Jahnke, L. R. Prichard, H. M. Owen and W. C. Bannerman. The officers are: Robert Jahnke, president of the First National of Pasco, president; Felix Van Hollebeke of Walla Walla, vice-president, and W. C. Bannerman, cashier. The three named, with W. H. Sutherland and H. M. Owen, compose the board of directors. The bank was started in 1905 by J. D. Bassett and W. H. Sutherland on a capital of $2,000. This was raised in 1907 to $5,000. The deposits now are $35,000, with cash and due from banks amounting to $25,000.

While a receiver has been winding up affairs of the Wallace (Idaho) State Bank of Commerce, for the failure of which B. F. O'Neil is serving sentence, dividends amounting to 65 per cent have been paid to depositors. This week Harry L. Day, millionaire mining operator, offered to clear up the remaining 35 per cent. Mr. Day made the following statement:

"It is true that I expect to submit to the receiver a plan for liquidating the remainder of the indebtedness of the State Bank of Commerce at an early date. Up to the time of the failure of the bank my name never had been connected either directly or indirectly with any enterprise of a questionable nature, and while my holdings in this institution were small, being only 30 shares, and my knowledge of its affairs only the most superficial, still I have from the moment of this unfortunate failure fully intended doing something of this kind when the proper time came, and I now believe that time has arrived. The necessary legal papers are being drawn by my attorneys, and as soon as these are completed the tender will be made to the receiver, subject to the approval of the court, and I have no doubt that the plan contemplated will be acceptable, as it contemplates the ultimate payment practically in full of the entire remaining indebtedness."

After being led to believe that the city of Spokane would be $10,000 richer because of failure of the owner of that amount in municipal bonds to claim his money, the city commissioners have received word that the owner appeared this week at the office of the Equitable Trust Company and drew down the money deposited for him nearly two years ago. The city commissioners, to close this account, had a few days ago ordered that the money deposited for the payment of the bonds be temporarily drawn down and placed in the city sinking fund pending the prosecution of the search by the New York bankers for the owner of the bonds. In case the man failed to appear with the bonds, the money was to revert to the city.

Two hundred dollars were netted by the annual theater party of the Spokane chapter, American Institute of Banking. W. J. Schiesl of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, and Hugh E. Winder of the Union Park, introduced specialties at the regular show at the American theater.

W. J. Davenport, a well-known banker of Colfax, Wash., has purchased the interests of the late Charles H. Larkin of the Hayward-Larkin Outdoor Advertising Company, of Spokane and San Diego. Mr. Davenport takes charge of the Spokane office.

Among out-of-town bankers visiting in Spokane this week are L. K. Moore, assistant cashier Dunlap (Ia.) State; A. R. Metz, cashier Elberton (Wash.) State; A. E. Reed, cashier Bank of Spirit Lake (Ida.); John Sawyer, director Davenport (Wash.) National; Ernst J. Wienss, cashier First State, St. Joe, Idaho; F. W. Anderson, cashier Lincoln County State, Davenport, Wash.; and G. A. Lafferty, manager of the Rossland (B. C.) branch of the Bank of Montreal.

EDMONTON NEWS

George Brown, president of the Empire Hotel Company of Edmonton, backed by capitalists of Greece, who already have invested more than $2,000,000 in Edmonton, has awarded a contract involving an expenditure of $300,000 to the James Prentice Contracting Company, to remodel Revillon Brothers' warehouse in Second Street, south of Jasper Avenue, for hotel purposes. The three-story brick structure, 150 by 150 feet, with full basement, will be incorporated in a four-story building. The three upper floors will contain 410 rooms, each being fitted with hot and cold water, a shower bath, telephone and other conveniences. The ground floor will contain a banquet and ball room, 100 by 125 feet, and a grill and café in front and kitchen and storage rooms in the rear. The full basement is to be utilized as a billiard hall with 45 tables and a 15-alley bowling department, also a modern heating plant.

James Henderson, architect, who prepared the plans, has provided for a roof garden overlooking the picturesque Saskatchewan river and valley. The design is attractive in its plainness, being devoid of ornateness or embellishment on the exterior. The interior will be finished in every detail, the chief work being in the banquet hall.

Work on remodeling the building was begun immediately after the license commissioners granted Mr. Brown's application for a license, and it is planned to have the house ready for occupancy in September.

"The plumbing, heating, lighting and ventilating systems will be the best that money can buy," Mr. Brown said, "and the fixtures and furniture will be modern. We are planning to make the Empire one of the best European hotels in western Canada. We have a lease for 99 years on the premises."

Mr. Brown is owner of the Pantages theater building in Second Street, which will be formally opened April 15th. Facing the playhouse and providing an entrance from Jasper Avenue, will be a ten-story store and office building, six floors of which will be erected this season by Mr. Brown and his associates. The remaining four floors will be completed early in 1914. Mr. Brown also contemplates erecting several other business buildings in other parts of the city, but is not yet ready to give out the details.

The Edmonton Board of Trade, through its secretary, F. T. Fisher, has forwarded a communication to the minister of trades and commerce, requesting that steps be taken to secure the appointment of a United States consul for Edmonton. It is given out that on account of the lack of a representative in Edmonton, contractors, lumber dealers and merchants in general having business with the United States frequently are inconvenienced.

ON THE SUBJECT OF PRIVATE BANKS

The Commercial West has the following comment on the private bank question of the present day:

"If the governor of Washington signs a bill passed by both houses of the legislature, private banks in that state will be subject to state supervision after January 1, 1915. This will of course have the effect of abolishing private banks, even though they may not be compelled to take out a charter; for private bankers must necessarily lose their license to handle the funds entrusted to them as they may see fit, without even the check of a board of directors, when the bank is subject to state supervision.

"The principle of private banks is so archaic that it continues to be a surprise that any state permits such banks to exist—though, of course, it is understood that private banks are not without a certain amount of political influence. And, too, they gain an additional influence through weak-kneed national and state bankers, in the larger centers, who act as their correspondents.

"There is not a single logical reason why private banks should be permitted to exist without at least being subject to state supervision. The system is so primitive that it certainly has no place in the advanced business methods and customs of the present century. Private banks date back to pioneering days, when the 'storekeeper' was the big man of the community. People deposited money with him for safe-keeping, and gradually he evolved a private bank in connection with his many other lines of activities. And it was regarded as a distinction when a man 'opened a bank' and made a specialty of receiving deposits, loaning money and otherwise investing it as he pleased—and without restraint from any source. The private banker is a trader by instinct and training. He deals in farm lands, 'scalps' notes, loans on chattel mortgages; he is often something of a promoter, and frequently he is a very useful man to the community. But the principle of receiving deposits as a 'bank,' to invest and to trade with as the private banker may see fit, and giving the depositors no security but a receipt,—the principle is so contrary to the entire spirit of modern ideas that private banks cannot much longer be tolerated in any state.

"The greatest possible extremes seem to have been reached when at the same time private banks are permitted in several states and an effort is being made to enact a federal guaranty of deposits law!"

Ohio Finance touches up the situation in its own state. It says: "The Ohio banking department has prepared a statement giving the aggregate resources and liabilities of unincorporated banks in the state of Ohio at the close of business February 4, 1913. As there is a decided sentiment throughout the state and in the legislature calling for either the regulation of private banks or the forcing of them out of business, the statement is particularly interesting at this time. The aggregate resources of institutions in Ohio of this character on February 4th, this year, were $30,504,488.73. These banks had loans of real estate of $5,690,000, loans on collateral of $4,928,000, and other loans and discounts of $10,538,000. They own $1,097,000 of state, county and municipal bonds and they had due from banks and bankers $5,381,714. These banks had capital stock paid in of $1,828,000, a surplus of $1,069,000 and undivided profits of $367,000. They had individual deposits of $12,000,000, demand certificates of deposit of $7,000,000, time certificates of deposit of $5,500,000 and savings deposits of $1,300,000."

F. F. Graesser has been chosen cashier of the Iowa State Savings at Burlington, succeeding Charles G. Mauro, who resigned recently.

J. P. Taylor is said to be organizing a new bank at Ladora.

A. L. Holmes is the new cashier for the First National at Lyons.

The legislature is on the eve of adjournment, and the prospects for any legislation of special interest to bankers looks remote at this writing. In the closing days it is possible that some important bills will be enacted, but it is difficult to conjecture upon them in advance. Sifting committees are very busy, and it is apparent that many a bill that was introduced in fullest confidence is due for an untimely demise. The bill to put private banks under state control is liable to be brought up before the session ends, although it was postponed indefinitely by the committee. It seems unlikely, however, in view of the flood at the finish, whether either the senate or the house will consider a bill once killed in committee. Nevertheless, it probably is safe to say that the sentiment in favor of this measure has become so strong as to make its passage altogether probable at the next session of the legislature, two years hence.

The "Blue Sky" bill was thought dead at one time but it was resurrected and brought out in the senate last week. For a measure that started out backed by more enthusiasm than any other single bill this measure has had a stormy career.

The senate passed the DeWolf bill to permit trust companies and state and savings banks to act in a fiduciary capacity. The vote was 34 to 12, which is sufficiently one-sided to indicate the passage of the bill by the house. There was considerable opposition to the mayor in the speechifying, but it largely was dissipated when the vote was taken. This has been a feature of the entire session from a banker's standpoint, and there has been much interest as to the outcome of the measure.

Supposed Counterfeiters Liberated

Des Moines detectives thought they had captured, redhanded, a pair of counterfeiters last week. A suspicious landlady gave a tip that the two fellows were acting mysteriously with rolls of bills, electric batteries, acid, copper batteries, etc. After the arrest, U. S. men investigated and stated that it was not possible to secure a conviction upon the slight evidence offered and the men were turned loose.

Hazelton Bank Closes Doors

An exciting situation prevailed at Hazelton, where the Kiefer Savings voluntarily closed its doors after undergoing a "run." The state insurance department took charge of the situation, and A. O. Wolever, examiner, was hastened to the scene. At this writing it would appear as if everything is all right, and the depositors will be fully paid. It appears that Adam and Karl Kiefer were owners of a private bank at Hazelton. They also were president and vice-president of the Kiefer Savings. On March 8th, the Kiefers voluntarily closed the doors of the private bank and turned their books over to inspection of the trustees for the savings bank. On Monday, March 10th, a depositor in the savings bank became possessed of the idea that the closing of the private bank would involve the stability of the savings bank because the Kiefers also were interested in the latter. Accordingly he demanded his money, a small amount, which he received. He told one of his friends, and in a short time the run was on, forcing the bank to close its doors, and causing considerable excitement.

The assets of the bank are $60,000, the capital stock $10,000 and the liabilities $50,000. Adam Kiefer, president of the institution, has been in the banking business at Hazelton for forty years. He is the father of Karl Kiefer, the vice-president. If the bank does not reopen a new bank will be organized and business will start at once, according to statements issued by the Kiefers.

Des Moines Bank Celebrates Anniversary

The Citizens National of Des Moines celebrated its forty-first birthday March 22d. There was no regular observance, but the officials of the bank wore the smile that wouldn't come off as they welcomed the many friends and patrons of the institution. The Citizens National started its career as a private bank. For thirty years it was located at Fifth and Walnut, where the Century now is located. Then it was removed to its present handsome structure at Sixth and Walnut, one of the finest buildings on one of the best corners in the business section. The Citizens is an exceptionally strong institution.

Widow to Run Husband's Bank

Mrs. Clara B. Hart, widow of the late E. E. Hart, well-known Council Bluffs banker, has been authorized by Judge Wheeler at Council Bluffs to continue the business of the private bank founded by her husband. Mrs. Hart told the court that at the time of her late husband's demise he owned valuable realty holdings in Iowa, Nebraska, Colorado, Missouri and Oregon. Some of this property is under liens, and she asked permission to renew these encumbrances in some instances and pay off the others. In his will the deceased banker instructed the disposal of certain holdings for cash, the latter to be invested in certain securities of certain value. Mrs. Hart

Shaw Again High Bidder

Once again bids have been opened for the sale of the Atlantic Northern & Southern Railroad, and for the third time Leslie M. Shaw was high man. This time, however, the high bid was only $294,000, about $100,000 less than the high bid on a previous sale. In fact, the bid of Mr. Shaw seems to get less each time, yet he remains high. The court will make his ruling on the bids April 8th. It is predicted that Shaw will be awarded the railroad, providing he can make good the amount of the bid. On a previous bid, he was awarded the road but failed to deliver the money which he had promised to contribute. Secretary Shaw was present in person.

Iowa Notes

Frank C. Welch now enjoys the distinction of being the youngest cashier in any Cedar Rapids bank. He was recently promoted to be cashier of the Peoples Savings. Frank O. Mekota was named assistant cashier.

W. C. Johnson now is on the directory board of the American Savings at Sioux City, succeeding the late N. Tiedeman.

Charlie Laird has resigned as assistant cashier of the First National at Tabor.

Roscoe P. Thoma has been chosen cashier of the Fairfield National, succeeding S. K. West, who has retired because of ill health.

The state banking department recently approved the charters of two banks which are changing from private to state institutions. This sort of a transposition is favored by the department, although the latter is not going out of the way to encourage entirely new banks.

The Monticello State at Monticello has decided to increase its capital stock from $100,000 to $200,000.

The new bank at St. Lucas has opened its doors for business under the title of the Bank of St. Lucas. J. Greteman is in charge of the institution, which is private.

The Waterville Savings at Waterville has voted to increase its capital stock to $20,000, and hire an assistant, O. G. Kolsrud.

The Des Moines Trust Company has purchased a big tract of land at Fifty-sixth and Ingersoll, Des Moines, and will open a new residence district this coming summer. It is a valuable piece of territory.

A new institution, to be known as the Farmers State at Ellsworth, has been organized, with officers as follows: Peter Holt, president; B. H. Henderson, vice-president; H. H. Lexvold, cashier.

Officers and employees of the Davenport Savings held a most enjoyable banquet in that city. Alvin Gruhl was toastmaster. The guests enjoyed an evening at cards and bowling, following the feast.

A. C. Jacobs has been chosen cashier of the Ollie Savings to succeed J. N. Stahl, resigned.

The new North Harrison Trust and Savings at Davenport opened its doors last week. Souvenirs were handed out to the many visitors who welcomed the new institution. The bank is located temporarily at 1509 Harrison, but the officers plan to erect a new building within a few months.

H. E. Bassig, formerly of Humboldt, Iowa, now is at Los Molinos, California, where it is said he is preparing to erect a new bank building.

The Peoples State at Humboldt is reporting a change in ownership. Frank Corey of Fort Dodge and F. A. Ayers of Lytton are acquiring the stock, it is stated. G. L. Tremain, who has been president since the institution was founded in 1881, retains his interest and remains president.

The Peyton Bank is getting into a new location. It has disposed of its old building at a price which was considered quite advantageous for the stockholders.

John T. Edson has resigned as cashier of the State at Schaller.

The Dupree State claims that its new quarters, now occupied by the institution, are the finest in Fox Ridge county.

Automatically Subtracts Checks Adds Deposits Gives New Balance Marks Overdrafts

When these bank statements were made out, the machine automatically subtracted Checks, added Deposits, gave New Balance, and automatically marked Overdrafts.

All the operator had to do was put down the amounts—the machine knew when to subtract, when to add, and when to mark Overdrafts.

They were made on the new Burroughs Adding-Subtracting Machine, which is as far ahead of ordinary adding machines as ordinary machines are ahead of hand work.

For instance, the National City Bank say this New Burroughs has effected a 50 per cent saving over their former methods.

Every bank man wants to see this machine, of course, but our manager in your territory naturally wants to show it to those most interested.

If you will drop us a line we will ask him to make it a point to see you, and show you what this new Burroughs is doing for other banks.

Just tear out this ad and hand it to your stenographer—tell her to "drop the Burroughs people a card."

usually held a large stock of bills of various maturities to suit their customers—the banks—but, in the main, acted as intermediaries. Any slackening in the demand of the banks for a certain class of bills tended to throw an additional burden on the billbrokers and discount houses, who generally financed themselves by borrowing at call or for short periods from the banks. This was another influence exerted by bankers on the price of bills.

Discount rates thus depended, in ordinary times, on what the managers of the clearing banks thought ought to be the price of bills, but sometimes the scepter of the discount market passed into the hands of the Bank of England, which watched over the money market and regulated its rates with a view to influencing exchange rates and protecting London's reserve of gold, which was in its keeping. This it did, either (1) naturally, when the excess of supply of bills over demand sent people who had bills to sell to borrow on them at the bank, which thus got control of the market, or (2) artifically.

Action of the Bank of England

When the bank thought discount rates too low, in view of the state of the exchanges or of the size of the reserve and its proportion to their liabilities, it would secure control by borrowing money from the market, and so create a scarcity of funds. When market rates rose in response, the bank was said to make its rate effective. Students of exchange had to take into account such interventions by the Bank of England. As under the English system we worked on a much smaller gold basis than any other leading financial nation, and at the same time always were prepared to hand the metal out when asked for, there was twofold need for vigilance on the part of those who kept our reserve. Hence it was that discount rates in London were so sensitive to foreign exchange movements.

The rise in discount rates would, for reasons already given, probably be followed by a favorable movement in the foreign exchanges, owing to a decrease in the amount of finance bills drawn on London, and to the inducement offered to English and foreign capitalists to employ their floating supplies of credit in London.

Gold Movements

Such was the method by which the Bank of England tried to keep the foreign exchanges above the "gold point," i. e., the point at which it was theoretically more profitable to send gold instead of buying a bill. In practice gold shipments from London were made by firms who specialized in it and bought up bills on London so as to put themselves in funds there to meet their purchases of gold. By buying the bills, they prevented the rate from falling far below gold point.

As regards a rise of the exchanges up to the incoming gold point, it was by no means certain to be followed by imports of gold.

In the case of the United States, it was generally possible to get gold certificates, and turn them into gold at the subtreasury. In the case of France, the Bank of France charged a premium on gold when it chose, and Germany took measures which were so effective that the theoretical gold point was often reached without gold being shipped. In other centers the theory worked only partially.

As regards a fall in the exchanges, it was safe to assert that when the point was reached at which it paid better to ship gold from London than to buy a bill, gold would go, but experts always differed as to when that point was reached, and, moreover, gold often left London long before there was any question of its being the more profitable form of remittance. The latter kind of export was made for a variety of reasons, e. g., for the sake of the advertisement gained by the importing firm; to produce a stimulating effect on stock markets by marking credit cheaper and more abundant; to enable bankers to lend more freely at attractive rates. The effect of movements of gold on the exchanges was, of course, the same as those of other commodities: an import turned them against us, and an export turned them in our favor.

The Bullion Market

For purposes of export bar gold was preferred to sovereigns, or better still, coins of the country to which the gold was to go, and as the Bank of England was entitled to meet demands on its store in sovereigns, which were usually below full weight and involved loss on recoinage, it could fix within certain limits the price at which it was prepared to supply bars or foreign coin.

The bullion market consisted of three or four firms which specialized in trading in gold and silver. Arrivals of gold were sold to the highest bidder, two buyers being always constant in their demand, viz., India and "the trade," i. e., the goldsmiths.

Bar gold could not fall below £3 17s 9d per ounce, because at that price the bank was bound to buy any amount offered to it, and the mint would coin it at the price of £3 17s 10½d the difference of 1½d being the demurrage charge.

The weekly arrivals of bar gold were eagerly watched in the city, and sometimes, owing to competition, the price might touch £3 18s per ounce. In recent years the bank had appeared in the market, and bid against other buyers when its reserve needed strengthening, but it rarely bid higher than £3 17s 9⅜d per ounce, which price covered the bullion broker's commission and cost of assay.

In conclusion, the big lesson we learnt from the exchanges was that every nation that bought also must sell, and vice versa.

NEW STATE BANK FORMING

The auditor of public accounts has issued to Robert Joss, E. W. Fleinly and A. R. Maloney a permit to organize the Commercial Trust and Savings Bank, with $500,000 capital stock.

BACK FROM THE WILDS

Vice-president Fred. B. Woodland and wife have returned from Panama. Most of the return trip was by water and through water. J. W. Thomas is back from a New York and New England trip and says conditions there are satisfactory. Both bankers are with the Central Trust. Mr. Thomas is head of the credit department.

BIG LOAN COMPANY FOR CINCINNATI

Cincinnati is to have a new loan company, capitalized at $100,000 and to be known as the East Hill Savings and Loan Company. The company will operate principally as a building and loan concern, but it is expected that in the future the activities will embrace those of a savings bank.

WOULD PROTECT THE FARMERS

Lansing, Mich., April 3.—The house this morning passed on third reading the Follett bill to protect farmers against dishonest commission men, the Martz bill to give aid to the flood sufferers in Ohio, and the Wood bill to provide for the building of a state highway in Alger County.

GROUP ONE, IOWA

Chairman C. J. Wohlenberg of Holstein, Ia., has invitations out for the Group 1, Iowa, meeting in his city April 17th. Headquarters will be at Turners Hall. Ladies will be entertained at the bankers' homes. Mr. Wohlenberg will welcome the visitors and W. P. Manly will tell how glad they are they came. J. H. Ingwersen of Clinton will speak on "The Relations of the Banker to the Community," and John Fletcher of Chicago on "The Live Stock Market Conditions." Kent C. Ferman of Cedar Rapids is down for a "Good Roads" talk and Dan Norman of Chicago will explain "Our Food Supply."

There will be an auto ride and a six o'clock dinner at the Turner Hall. Mr. Wohlenberg has been a very active and efficient chairman and there will be a good turn out. Hotel reservations may be made at Sioux City—to and from which point special cars will run.

Carnation Lodge 354, Knights of Pythias, Chicago, presented their fellow member W. G. Edens, of the Central Trust, with a veteran's jewel at their regular meeting, Wednesday evening, April 2d. Mr. Edens is a representative from Illinois in the supreme body of this organization and a member of its finance committee.

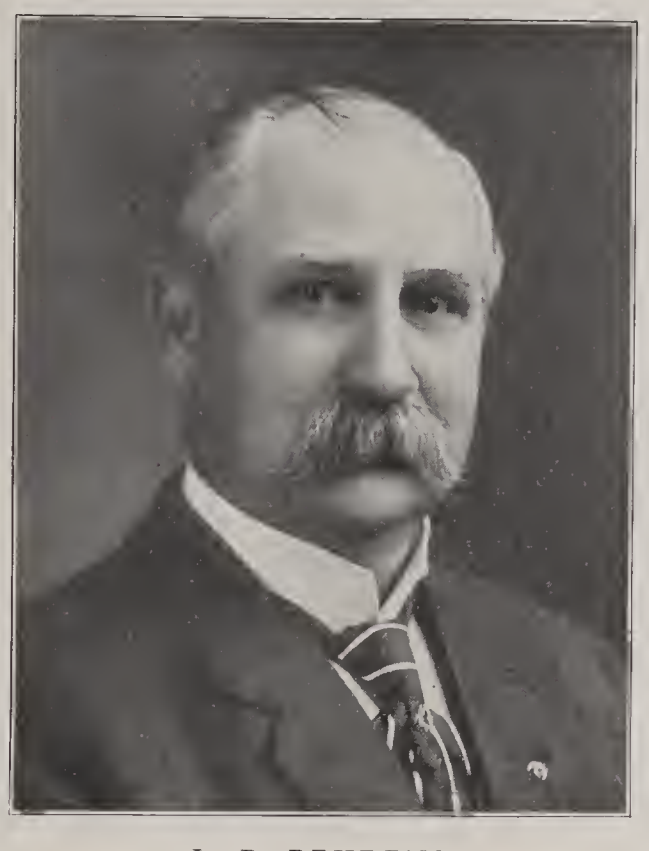
The CHICAGO BANKER

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking and Financial Interests of the Middle West

APRIL 12, 1913 — Entered as Second-Class Matter January 15, 1903, at the Post Office at Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879 — 10 CENTS A COPY

Two Active Association Vice-Presidents



L. P. BEHRENS
REDWOOD CITY, CALIFORNIA

R. D. SNEATH
TIFFIN, OHIO

CONSPICUOUSLY identified with those association officials who have achieved things are L. P. Behrens and R. D. Sneath, respectively vice-presidents of the California and Ohio bankers' organizations. Mr. Behrens is cashier of the First National of Redwood City, and Mr. Sneath president of the Commercial National of Tiffin.

CHICAGO NATIONALS REPORT

The published reports of the Chicago nationals tell in plain figures why money is loaning at 6 per cent. Country banks are withdrawing funds or borrowing to carry the farmers who are holding their grain for higher rates or are buying cattle and feeding the grain. The reports on April 4th call show a reduction of $12,000,000 in the aggregate deposits from the amount reported as of Feb. 4th. In the same period the aggregate loans were expanded $18,800,000 and the total cash resources dropped nearly $24,500,000. The figures show that the national banks of the city are loaned up to a very close margin. Their total cash resources figure only a shade more than 37 per cent of their total deposits, compared with 41 per cent in February, and even 38¾ per cent on November 26th last year, after the heavy crop demand for funds. Some of the larger national banks are below their legal reserve and have been running so for some time. The figures explain very easily why money has been lending at 6 per cent in Chicago.

MOVING OF TWO BILLIONS

In moving to its new building at 140 Broadway, the Guaranty Trust Company of New York transferred from its former quarters to its new vault cash and securities amounting to more than $2,250,000,000. Nearly $2,000,000,000 of this was in the shape of trust securities held by its trust department. This probably is the largest amount of actual, physical wealth that ever has been moved at one time by one institution.

The main banking room of the company, on the opening day, resembled the annual flower show at Madison Square Garden quite as much as it did a banking room, for immense bouquets and floral pieces sent in by neighboring banks and other friends of the company decorated every portion of the immense room. President Hemphill, Vice-President Sabin, and the other officers were kept busy all day long receiving the congratulations of hundreds of visiting friends. From the time the great doors opened in the morning until they were closed late in the day there was a constant stream of sight-seers passing through the building. It is estimated that the total was well up in the thousands.

This latest addition to the individual banking homes of New York City is indeed a model of elegance and convenience which it will be hard to surpass.

BANKERS SPEAK AT FARM CONFERENCE

That the interest taken by the bankers in the campaign now on foot to better the condition of the American farmer and agricultural conditions in general has been appreciated and recognized is evidenced by the fact that three well-known Illinois bankers were on the program. B. F. Harris, George Woodruff and W. G. Edens presented to the conference their views as how best to solve some of the problems with which the farmer is beset to-day and which have proven to be potent factors in the much-talked-of high cost of living.

Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association and L. P. Baker, J. E. Wheeler and Earle Pease of the agricultural committee of the association were interested attendants at the convention.

THE MONEY SITUATION

A prominent Chicago banker in speaking of the money situation this week said: "There has been some relief lately from the tension which we have been experiencing the last few weeks. Money is still in good demand and local rates are firmly maintained at 6 per cent, although some prime names in brokers' hands are offered at a somewhat lower rate."

NEW CURRENCY BILLS

Three new currency bills were introduced in the house this week. Congress now has nearly a dozen bills covering all branches of banking and currency reform.

SEATTLE BANK ESTABLISHES BOND DEPARTMENT

President James D. Hoges of the Union Savings and Trust of Seattle announces the establishment of a bond department.

FLETCHER FARRELL AT EXCELSIOR SPRINGS

Vice-President J. Fletcher Farrell, of the Fort Dearborn, has retired for a short time to Excelsior Springs, Mo., to shake off a bothersome attack of spring rheumatics. A few days back in good old Missouri always fixes him up O. K.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

FLOYD SEYBOLT of Lincoln, Neb., was in Chicago over the week-end on his way "back home from New York and Washington.

HE had in his pocket a commission as "National Bank Examiner for Nebraska" the first signed and issued by the new secretary of the treasury, McAdoo.

E. G. Mc WILLIAM, secretary of the savings bank section, was here at the same time. He came to attend the "Thrift" dinner presided over by President Noel of the North West State Bank.

SECRETARY P. C. KAUFFMAN of Washington, in writing to his faithful subjects, says that "in view of the fact that many frauds have been perpetrated by raising the amount of certified checks, say $8 to $80, the protective committee hereby recommends that all banks in certifying checks should write the limit of the amount across the certification, and it would be well to stamp the exact amount by a perforator or protector."

THE legislative committee of the Washington association has had a most arduous and active time during the past three months. Prior to the meeting of the legislature the committee met several times and drafted a large number of bills, copies of which were submitted to every bank in the state, all of which were introduced in either the house or senate in the early days of the session.

NO less than seven new laws go on the statute books as a result. Several state laws are made to conform with the national banking act. The new laws cover joint accounts, making derogatory statements about banks, and a uniform warehouse receipt bill.

ALL these measures are of the greatest importance. Probably the most important was the bill putting private banks under the control and supervision of the state banking department and providing that after January 1, 1915, all private banks must incorporate under the state banking law. The other subjects speak for themselves and will show that the association is thoroughly alive and working for the best interest of the members.

CHAIRMAN J. H. EDWARDS, vice-president of the Dexter Horton Trust & Savings, was present during almost the entire session and indefatigable in his committee work.

WE hear that St. Louis is steadily getting into the southeastern territory, and that the old Third National has added nearly one hundred and fifty new accounts from Kentucky and Tennessee—largely through the joint efforts of Messrs. F. O. Watts and F. K. Houston.

TOPEKA is to have women policemen. Gentle hint to Johnny Bull. Put your militants on the "foorce."

JOHN E. BLUNT, JR., Merchants Loan, is in California for a month's rest.

JOHN BURNHAM & CO., of this city, get out a very interesting market letter. If you wish to see it, use a postal.

EVERY branch of the banking business is being organized into associations. Even the advertising men see the benefits of it, first in Pittsburgh, now in New York.

ABOUT thirty officers and managers of publicity departments of New York banks and trust companies have established a temporary organization, the purpose of which is to increase advertising efficiency and economy and to develop the social advantages of association.

E. B. WILSON, manager of the advertising department of the Bankers Trust Company, was elected temporary chairman, and E. A. Bennett, assistant cashier of the American Exchange National, was chosen temporary secretary.

THE Seventh Regiment proved to be the most effective of all the flood fighters. The boys not only worked but they forced everybody to lend a hand. Col. Moriarity should have a Carnegie medal.

IF the legislative vice commission wants to do something effective let it give Illinois a "red light" bill such as Gov. Johnson of California has just signed.

A CLEAN sweep-up of the opportunities and inducements will help save the girls, the underpaid as well as the overpaid and those morally lax.

BYRON L. SMITH, head of the big Northern Trust, Chicago, is in Europe on his "annual tour" but he is faithful to his first love, Chicago. This is what he told the journalists in Paris:

"THE more I travel the less I am inclined to make hasty comparisons between one country and another," he said. "The traveler in making such comparisons is almost sure to overlook many important considerations of race, history, circumstance and national temperament.

"SOME Chicagoans who come abroad begin by 'knocking' the city where they made their money. They do not know what they are talking about. I suppose there are some fine people everywhere. But Chicago is the place for me. Neither London, Paris nor Berlin compares with it."

THOSE "Banker's Love Letters" appearing in all Chicago papers are not adding any medals to the professional breast nor anything to the credit of McLean county.

COUNTRY bankers are warned against the blandishments of pretty Chicago widows. "Get the coin" is the real and only motive in such cases.

DOES the oldest member remember an April when several booms for chairmanship of the council were not under way? The non-succession plank in the platform did the trick.

SEVERAL candidates for the treasurership —Graham of Baltimore, Comly of New York and Hoopes of Texas—are in the gossip.

BOSTON is preparing for a big, enthusiastic crowd. The new constitution is to be up for discussion and adoption and in its provisions will rest the fate of many an ambitious banker.

NOTE how one little three-line plank, hatched at New Orleans, took all the life out of the annual selection of a head master

THERE are 132 trust companies in the state, all doing commercial banking.

UNDER the new banking law, recommendations for a superintendent of banks will be made at the annual convention of the Tennessee Bankers Association to be held in Memphis April 16th and 17th. The new law provides that a superintendent of banks shall be selected from five names recommended by the association.

THIS will give Secretary Mayfield's meeting an added interest this year.

AN interesting instance of the current tendency toward incorporated banks as against private banks is the reorganization of the "Harlan Bank" owned by the Walters family and one of Iowa's oldest private banks.

IT is now the Harlan National Bank. The Walters interests in the bank are represented by Godlebt Walters. The majority interest has been taken by J. E. Davis, now active vice-president. Mr. Davis was formerly a banker at Sutton, Nebraska, and later at Oskaloosa, Iowa.

"THE present banking and currency system was invented during the Civil War. As with the Monitor, it was a case of necessity being the mother of invention," writes John D. Lamson, in the issue of Harper's Weekly for April 5th.

"THE Monitor did good work in '62, and the present currency system did good work in '64. But times change. Ericsson's invention was a wonder at the time, but you would hardly expect the old Monitor to go up against a modern battleship.

"NO more can we expect to get to-day's business properly done with the help of the old currency system. In fact, between the old cheesebox-on-a-raft and the modern dreadnought there is less difference than between business conditions in 1864 and business conditions at present."

THE Grange, the Farmers Union, the State Bankers Association and the State Federation of Labor are four organizations not often found pulling in the same direction.

YET this is just what they are doing in Washington. They are bending all energy toward making the first annual boys' and girls' agricultural and industrial contest a success.

THE state has provided money for every part of the plan except the prizes—they will be donated by citizens of the state for her 285,000 school children.

THE contest will come off at the state fair at Spokane, October 28th, 29th and 30th. Julia Preston, superintendent of public instruction, is at the head of it all, but will be assisted by no end of committees.

ANY banker outside of the state can give a prize (not money) in any of the lists. W. D. Vincent, Old National, Spokane, can fix you up.

FLOOD travel isn't altogether a joke. Secretary E. G. McWilliam of the savings bank section missed his Sherman House "Thrift" dinner on account of it and tells it thus:

"WE arrived at the banquet hall Friday evening at eleven ten, although scheduled to arrive in Chicago at eight forty-six that morning. This was due to the fact that we spent a large portion of the day in exploring the State of Ohio under direction of the Pennsylvania railroad, which, finding that a bridge somewhere between Loudonville and Mansfield had settled eight inches after a preceding train had passed over it, refused to permit us to take a chance, and took us up some eighty miles to Alliance, then over to Cleveland and on to Chicago over the Lake Shore.

"HOWEVER, I feel that as we at least furnished the excuse for calling the Chicago bankers together upon the subject of school savings banks, our trip was not in vain, and at luncheon the next day we met several of your bankers together with the committee appointed to take up the school savings system with the Board of Education, where we were possibly able to contribute some suggestions and information of value."

McWILLIAM is one of those patient, intelligent workers whose modest persistence will not be denied. If we are to have a real campaign of education along thrift and school savings lines, the job is in the effective hands.

LEROY A. GODDARD, president of the State Bank of Chicago, addressed the members and guests of the Chicago Real Estate Board at their weekly luncheon on Thursday, taking for his subject, "The Banks and the Republic." CASHIER.

ANOTHER PRIVATE BANK MUDDLE

A miserable little private bank in Chicago, masquerading under a title simulating that of the American Bankers Association, is to be investigated by the courts, under a bill filed by a stockholder. A decree dissolving the association and distributing its assets is asked if it is disclosed that it is insolvent.

The plaintiff alleges that she purchased ten shares from J. F. Koelling, February 14th. Since then she has attempted to obtain the right to inspect the books and accounts, but permission, she claims, has been refused by John W. Worthington, president of the bank. Louis W. Frank and Worthington, the owners, also are named defendants. The name of the bank is "The American Banking Association." This couldn't be done in any other state.

CONDITION OF CHICAGO STATE BANKS

The state banks of Chicago in their reports of condition under date of April 5th, like the national banks, show decreased holdings of cash, increased loans and smaller deposits in the aggregate, as compared with the previous statements February 5th.

Deposits of sixty-four state banks totaled $516,847,222, a decrease of $7,701,391; loans and discounts amounted to $356,282,577, an increase of $11,840,433; and cash on hand and due from other banks aggregated $129,829,888, a decrease of $15,656,038.

Canadian Parliament Calls American Banker in Consultation

James B. Forgan, of Chicago, leading financier, conspicuously honored. Appears before the committee on banking and commerce at Ottawa as an expert. Much of his testimony applicable to solution of same difficult problem at Washington

The Committee on Banking and Commerce, House of Commons, Ottawa. Gentleman:

I have read the draft of the proposed Act revising the Dominion Act relating to banking in connection with which you have done me the honor of asking me to express my views upon some of the new matters in it which you have now under consideration.

I have put in writing my views on some of the more important new features proposed in the Act and with your permission I will now read them to you.

If, as I proceed, or when I get through, any questions occur to you that you desire I should answer, I am entirely at your service.

First, then, referring to Sections 10 and 13 as to whether a further system of local banks with small capital is desirable:

I think not, for the following reasons:

1. Because I believe experience in Canada, as in England and elsewhere, has shown that small local banks cannot successfully compete where the more economical system of branch banking has been established.

2. Because competition among the large banks with branches affords the legitimate business of all localities better service than can be had from small local institutions.

3. Because small local banks are usually organized and controlled by local borrowing interests, which leads to borrowers lending the bank's money to themselves and becoming the judges of the limits of their own credit, than which there is nothing more dangerous in the banking business.

4. Because small local banks, unless they are affiliated with large central banks, are at a disadvantage in the matter of carrying adequate cash reserves against their current liabilities.

The weakness of the banking system in the United States and the cause of the periodical money panics there, such as with your branch banking system in Canada you have been happily exempt, are attributable to the difficulty a large number of small local banks experience in individually controlling and carrying their cash reserves. Such a wide distribution of the gold reserves of the country as is caused by more than twenty-five thousand individual banks in the United States all undertaking to control and carry their own share of it is unscientific, wasteful, dangerous and impractical. Whenever anything occurs to shake public confidence the banks are the first to take alarm. Every bank proceeds to strengthen its own cash reserves by curtailing credits and converting its loans into cash. The result is that the gold supply of the country, which, if mobilized and properly controlled at the financial centers for the protection of all the banks, would be ample for the purpose, when it is distributed all over the country into more than 25,000 small piles under as many separate ownerships, is insufficient for the individual protection of any. Not a bank in the lot can control enough gold to protect itself against that which they all fear, a run by their depositors, so they all suspend cash payments or seriously restrict them and panic ensues.

Under your established branch system these small local banks, even if legally encouraged, never could get a sufficient hold of the banking business of the country to become a menace to its general financial condition, but as this is what they tend to, as they are out of harmony with the principles on which your banking system is based and are quite unnecessary, why legalize them?

Referring to Section 34 as to the rate and terms upon which new bank stock may be issued—

This new problem, it seems to me, calls for a reasonable and equitable adjustment of the rights of the three interests involved in it. These interests are (1) those of the depositors, or more broadly speaking, the public; (2) those of the shareholders; and (3) those of the banks themselves, as established institutions of the country of a quasi-public nature.

Referring to these in their order, the interests of the public lie in having banking capital on which there is a double liability of shareholders, kept in proper proportion to the liabilities assumed, irrespective of the amount of the surplus or rest, paid in, or accumulated from earnings; also in the supply by the banks of sufficient circulating medium for the requirements of commerce, this being limited to the amount of the paid-up capital of the banks.

If, in the people's interest, their representative government imposes a double liability of shareholders on capital invested in the banking business, it seems to follow as a natural sequence that some limit should be placed on paid-in "rest" or "surplus" which can be used as capital, except that there is no note issuing privilege attached to it. But for the note issuing privilege attached to paid-in capital every dollar paid in by shareholders as surplus or rest would have to be regarded as banking capital, which, by a system of bookkeeping and a change in name, escapes the double liability of shareholders.

While this is true it should be borne in mind that the security afforded by a bank with a paid-in capital which does bear proper proportion to its deposit and note issue liabilities is materially strengthened if in addition to such adequate capital it carries a large rest account. It cannot be to the disadvantage of the public, but the reverse, if in addition to adequate capital the banks carry large rest accounts.

The banks' privilege of note issue makes them responsible to the public for the supply of circulation in sufficient volume to meet all the legitimate commercial demands for it. To do this they must maintain insufficient paid-in capital, increasing it as the country develops and commerce expands. When increased capital is necessary for this purpose they should find it by offering their new stock issues at a price that will attract it. With daily redemption of their notes through the central clearing houses, with adequate cash reserves maintained for that purpose, and with their note issues limited in amount to the amount of their paid-in capital or covered dollar for dollar by a special deposit of gold, there should, it seems to me, be little or no fear of over-expansion of the currency.

Incidentally, if they should assume fully their responsibility in this connection, there would be no necessity for the privilege they now have of issuing an extra fifteen per cent during the usual crop-moving season on which they pay the government interest at a rate not exceeding five per cent. I do not much favor this emergency issue of fifteen per cent; it looks to me too much like undue expansion of circulation.

So far as the shareholders are concerned their interests are undoubtedly conserved by the accumulation of large "rests." The larger the accumulated "rest" in proportion to the capital paid in the farther is the shareholder removed from his double liability on the latter. There is, however, another feature which affects the interests of the shareholders. I refer to their rights to subscribe for additional stock when issued. If the "rest" is proportionately large and the new stock is issued at the book value of the old, the shareholders, in exercising their rights, are called upon to raise and pay in just so much more money than they otherwise would. Combined with their inability to borrow from banks on their stock, this feature must materially affect the market value of their stock holdings. It seems to me that it must also sometimes be to the disadvantage of the banks themselves when they want to issue new stock.

In the United States new bank stock issues are as a rule offered to the old shareholders at a price which, compared with the prevailing market price, makes them a very attractive investment. If the old shareholders do not find it convenient at the time to increase their investment in the stock, a market is created for their rights to subscribe so that they do not suffer by their inability to do so. This, I believe, is the principal reason why the value of the good will and franchise rights of the banks are not reflected in the market price of Canadian bank stocks to anything like the extent they are in the market prices of the more important banks in the United States. I think some of the Canadian banks have been rather hard on the rank and file of their shareholders in requiring from them practically the full value of the old stock every time they have asked them to subscribe for the new. The excuse is, I presume, that the main reason the banks have had for increasing their capital has been to provide needed increased circulation privileges, and as dividends have to be paid on the new stock from the time it is paid in, the earning capacity has had to be maintained in order that there should be no diminution in the established dividend rate. As a rule, however, I think "rests" should be earned rather than contributed by shareholders. This process may be slower and more troublesome to the managers, but in the long run it redounds to their credit. It certainly is in the interest of shareholders that they should have an opportunity to subscribe for new stock issues at a reasonable rate. Such issues when made should, therefore, be regulated by the proportion of capital to liabilities and their price fixed by the proportion of "rest" to capital.

In considering the interests of the banks themselves they should be regarded as established institutions of the country, existing not alone for the benefit of their shareholders, but as a vital part of the nation's commerce and as custodians of the people's money; in other words, as quasi-public institutions. From this standpoint it is most desirable that they should be built up as bulwarks of strength. Adequate capital, properly proportioned to their liabilities to the public, plus large "rest" accounts will accomplish this. The larger the "rests" the stronger the banks and incidentally the more comfortable the management. "Rests" afford protection against encroachment on capital through disaster either general or specific.

From the standpoint of the banks themselves it therefore is desirable that there should be no limits placed on the "rest" accounts they may build up out of accumulated earnings. Reason and common sense, however, should regulate everything, and the institutional interests of the banks should not be pushed to the disadvantage of the other interests involved when "rests" are built up by direct payments from the shareholders. When the "rest" is increased by direct original payments made by the shareholders as a premium on capital stock issued, then not only their interests but those of the banks themselves and of the public become involved and should all have due consideration. There may be more sentiment than logic in the distinction I make between "rest" earned and "rest" paid in. When once a "rest" exists its use is of course the same, whether it is earned or contributed. It seems to me, however, that if shareholders are willing that only moderate dividends should be paid them on their capital employed, so that surplus earnings may accumulate in "rest" accounts to strengthen the banks gradually, such a policy should not be restricted. So long as the capital subject to double liability of shareholders is maintained in proper proportion to existing liabilities there would seem no reasonable ground for restricting the amount of accumulated "rest."

A reasonable adjustment of the rights of all the interests involved would, therefore, it seems to me, be accomplished by permitting the banks to issue new stock on such terms as are fixed by the directors; provided that in no case shall a rate be fixed which will make the premium, if any, payable on the stock allotted exceed one-half of the percentage which the "rest" or reserve fund bears to the paid-up capital, nor shall such rate of premium in any case exceed 100 per cent of the new stock so issued. I would leave the fixing of the rate in the hands of the directors, as now.

It is proposed to strike out from the bill Sections 438 and 77, the effect of which would be to abolish the bank's previleged lien on its own stock when held by a debtor of the bank.

In connection with this there would be considered the restriction contained in Section 76 which prohibits the banks from making advances on the pledge of their own stock, or of the stock of any other bank.

This combination of the privileged lien given the banks on their own stock and the restriction prohibiting them from making advances on the security of their own stock or on the stocks of other banks, appears to be illogical in the one case and too drastic in the other. It must materially curtail the market for bank stocks, as the practical effect of it is that no one can acquire more bank stock than he has the money on hand to pay for. I can readily see why banks should not make advances on their own stocks, but the reason is not quite so apparent as to why they should be entirely prohibited from loaning on the stocks of other banks.

I do not know to what extent, if any, the privileged lien held by the banks on the stock of their debtor shareholders may, in practice, nullify the legal restriction against their making advances on the security of their own stock, but I can see how this might be the case. I see nothing to prevent banks loaning money on some ostensible pretense to their own shareholders, while they really rely on the security afforded them by the lien on the stock standing in the name of the borrowers. If this be done the worst feature of loans on bank stocks—that of banks loaning on their own stocks—is accomplished, while the less objectionable feature of loaning on the stocks of other banks is not permitted. The intention of the law was presumably to prevent absolutely speculation in bank stocks, and this desirable result it has no doubt accomplished, but like most legal restrictions on intelligent business management, it pinches at the other end. When bank shareholders are called upon to subscribe for their proportion of increased capital stock, it would seem only fair and reasonable that they should be able to borrow temporarily somewhere on the security of their own bank stock, to enable them to finance their privilege.

We have so many banks in the United States that, as a rule, their stocks are not regarded as a very desirable banking collateral. The market for them is very circumscribed. In the larger financial centers, however, the shares of the leading banks are listed on the stock exchanges, have a regular quoted market value, and while banks are prohibited from advancing on their own stock, they are permitted, and do, to a moderate extent, loan on the security of the stock of other banks. This is not done, however, to any large extent, and I have never noticed any evidence of speculation in bank stocks which, as a rule, are owned and carried as permanent investments by parties having money to invest in such securities.

The restriction against banks loaning on the security of their own stock is unquestionably a wise one. So far as loaning on the stock of other banks is concerned, both the privileged lien and the general restriction against it would have to be removed before it could be done. I feel that I am not sufficiently in touch with Canadian banking conditions nor am I sufficiently informed as to the working of the present law to urge the matter strongly, but I cannot but believe that some modification of the law in these respects would prove generally advantageous. I know of no good reason why the banks could not deal with their shareholders in the matter of loans just as they deal with other customers. It seems to me that in all legitimate borrowing transactions both the banks and the customers would prefer to have it so. If it is conceded that banks should not be permitted to make advances on the security of their own stock it would seem illogical that they should be given a privileged lien on it

Section 56. Alternate proposals as to audits. Whether they will be at the instance of the shareholders or under a system established and controlled by the government.

The external supervision of banks through audits and inspections has of late years commanded considerable public attention both in Canada and the United States.

In the United States such so-called supervision is undertaken by the government. Dissatisfaction among the banks themselves with its effectiveness in recent years induced the clearing house associations in some of the larger cities to organize their own bureaus of examination. This innovation had its origin in Chicago. Three banks failed there, the disclosures in connection with which were appalling and almost inconceivable. Two of the banks were under state and the other under federal control, while all three were under the management of one man who acted as president of each. No question ever was raised as to the efficiency of the examiners. The trouble seemed to rest with the action, or rather inaction, of the government. Nothwithstanding the reports of the examiners, which from time to time disclosed the facts, bad conditions were permitted to develop for many years through gross irregularities and mismanagement before action was taken by the department.

Without intending to reflect in the slightest degree on either the usefulness or desirability of external bank audits and inspections, the value of which I fully appreciate, experience compels me to say that it seems impossible to establish any system of external supervision that will at all compare in thoroughness and effectiveness with the organized internal supervision you now have in connection with your excellent banking system.

Bank supervision presupposes some degree of responsibility for existing conditions and in that sense is a misnomer when applied to external audits and inspections. Such responsibility cannot successfully be placed upon, nor should it be assumed by, any authority whose only prerogative is to make periodical audits and inspections of existing conditions. Control of the initiative management is the vital part of supervision which external authority does not and should not have, and which, therefore, makes the supervision through internal general management, of which auditing and inspecting are integral parts, so much more effective.

Internal general management supervision approves or disapproves business as it is done and is consulted in regard to all important credits, loans and investments when and as they are made. When internal inspections are made every loan account at the branch under inspection is reported on to the general manager whose instructions in regard to them are revised and new directions are given by him when necessary. Inspectors are kept familiar with head office instructions as they are issued and it is part of their duty to see that these instructions are carried out. It must be quite apparent, therefore, that in connection with internal supervision there exists an effective working organization kept in touch with the business as it is transacted, which it is quite impossible to have in connection with any external supervision unless a bureau duplicating the general manager's department is to be organized.

In the United States we have had some impractical suggestions for legislation further to restrict intelligence and discrimination in bank management by providing rules and regulations with penalties for stricter governmental supervision. The practical difficulty of all such legislation is that it misleads public opinion as to where responsibility for bank management really belongs. When banks fail public opinion is liable to hold the highest supervisory authority responsible for their condition. If government, through a department, assumes supervisory authority over the general management of the banks it will be held responsible for what it did not do, what it did not consent to being done and could not, therefore, prevent, and what it could only discover, if it discovered it at all, through an inspection of conditions produced under other authority, which would be too late. It might thus close the stable door after the horse had been stolen; it had no opportunity to do so before.

External authority assumes a heavy responsibility when it undertakes to supervise bank management, to pass judgment on existing conditions and to interfere by summary action when in its opinion conditions warrant it. Were bank management all good, such responsibility would be light, but in the case of mismanagement the problems arising would be difficult to solve and the responsibility of solving them heavy. Mismanagement has the unfortunate faculty of accumulating business which good management discards. Under good management desirable business is the rule, and undesirable business the exception. Under mismanagement the case becomes exactly reverse: the accumulation of bad business fairly smothers out the good. No external authority ever will undertake to declare a bank's condition such as to warrant summary action to close it, so long as it can keep its customers afloat in business and itself in condition to meet its obligations as they are presented. The problem it faces in connection with bad management is the passing of judgment on the realizable value of doubtful loans and on the integrity of the values at which investments and other assets are carried on the bank's books, neither of which can, in all probability, be definitely determined except in liquidation. It is, therefore, no easy problem to solve as to when a bank's condition warrants such summary action. Conditions must be bad indeed and admonition and expostulation will have to be exhausted before any external supervisory authority will assume the responsibility of closing a bank's doors. Were such an action arbitrarily taken because of general unsatisfactory conditions found to exist in a bank, causing the failure of many of its customers, the authority taking it would be blamed for closing a solvent institution by both depositors and stockholders in whose best interest it would doubtless be taken. In the last analysis responsible supervision must rest on the bank directors who control the management through their power to appoint the executive officers and to remove them for cause. Executive officers judiciously selected and wisely directed are thus readily controlled. You cannot legislate good judgment and honest purpose into their minds and hearts, but if they lack those essential virtues, the duty of the directors is to remove them.

While what I have said about the limitations of external supervision is undoubtedly true, external audits and inspections have a most valuable function to perform and are most desirable. They do the same for the banks that they do for corporations in other lines of business. They verify the statements of the banks to the shareholders and to the public, certify that they agree with their books and records and that the cash and securities are in hand. Under government supervision in the United States neither the shareholders nor the public get any such external assurance. The government examiners' reports are made to the de-

By R. A. ALBERTSEN

Touches upon proposed banking and financial legislation by congress

Relates to administrative and department matters interesting to our readers

Washington, April 10th.—The meeting of congress, the appearance of the president before the joint session, a new tariff bill and a new currency plan are the events of the week at the capital. At the opening session Speaker Clark used a silver mace presented by King George I of England to the colony of Virginia and used in the House of Burgesses of the colony.

It later was sold to Colonel William Heth of the Continental army, and has descended to Miss Nannie Randolph Heth. It was loaned by Miss Heth to the speaker to celebrate his re-election.

New Currency Bills In

A comprehensive bill revising the currency laws, the keynote of which is the prevention of the shipment of the surplus and reserves of national banks to New York City for speculative purposes, was introduced in the senate Wednesday by Senator Hitchcock.

"One effect of my bill would be to keep the reserves of the national banks nearer home and make them more accessible instead of permitting them to drift to New York to be used for speculative loans," said the senator.

"Another effect would be to reduce the rates of interest to borrowers by increasing the supply of loanable funds. Banks that now stop loaning when their reserves get down to the limit, because rediscounting bills is not considered good banking, would through their reserve association be able to rediscount good commercial paper and use the money to make additional loans to their customers.

"This plan will permit the banks to retain their present bond-secured currency and remain, as they are now, independent. The banks in each district would control their own reserve association instead of being controlled by a reserve association as is proposed in the Aldrich plan."

Representative Jefferson Levy of New York reintroduced his bill of the last session requiring the secretary of the treasury to loan all treasury surplus in excess of $30,000,000 to national banks under competitive bidding and to permit the conversion of 2 per cent government bonds into non-interest-bearing gold certificates of deposit. National banks are allowed to lend on real estate and, with a capital of $5,000,000 or over, to establish banks in foreign capitals and seaboard cities.

The Tariff Bill is Comprehensive

The tariff bill is too comprehensive for the present letter but the more prominent features as set forth by a tariff expert in the government service are about as follows:

The reduction in rates applicable to food products seems to be substantial and the rates should have the effect of reducing the cost to the consumer in all of the necessities of life. A reduction in the duty on wheat of 15 cents per bushel will, no doubt, make a substantial difference in the ultimate cost to the consumer. The same thing can be said of cheese, eggs and vegetables. On woolen goods there seems to have been made perhaps the greatest cut in the entire list and this is due, no doubt, to the placing of raw wool on the free list. The rate of 35 per cent, which appears to be the rate under the new law on woolen cloths, will benefit the poor man rather than the rich. The old law, or the act of 1909, bore both a specific and advalorem rate and while, in a measure, the specific rate was dependent upon the cost of the cloth, yet that specific rate bore more harshly upon the poorer grades of woolen cloth than on better grades.

Aid to Poorer Men

It appears from some estimates that the average rate, presumably for the year on woolen cloths, was the equivalent to 97 per cent. On the higher grades of woolen cloths, however, an equivalent for average rates probably would be much larger than the old rate and therefore the reduction to 35 per cent will go to the users of the cheaper grades of cloth, or will enable the poorer man to wear a better grade of cloth for the same price as he paid under the present rate of tariff. As a whole, in looking over the schedules as given out, there appear to be substantial reductions all along the line, which seem to carry out the ideas expressed by President Wilson and Mr. Underwood and which, from past experience, it is possible to see, will result in substantial revenues for the government and will give to the American manufacturer who thinks he needs it a measure of protection and will enable him to pay his labor an adequate wage.

J. S. Aisthorpe of Cairo on Unfair Journalism

The following statement has been issued by J. S. Aisthorpe, president of the First Bank and Trust Company of Cairo, Ill., as a result of misleading reports published by certain newspapers concerning the flood situation in that city:

"Although Cairo suffered perhaps less physical damage from the recent flood than any other city situated in the lowlands of the Ohio Valley, it received more damaging publicity than all the other cities combined. It would be impossible to place an accurate estimate upon the amount of damage Cairo's reputation has suffered in the financial and commercial world, but to place it at several hundred thousand dollars probably would be a conservative figure.

"While it is true that Cairo was saved from inundation only after a fierce battle in which every able-bodied citizen took an active part, not a single dollar's worth of property has been damaged by an overflow of the Ohio or Mississippi rivers, nor at any time during the high stage was there a single street under water. As a matter of fact, the streets of Cairo suffered more from the lack of sprinkling than anything else, even when the river had attained the highest stage in the history of the United States weather bureau, which was 54.7 feet.

"Cairo's troubles began when the first contingent of newspaper correspondents arrived from Chicago. From that day until the date of their departure, a week later, the correspondents crowded the telegraph offices with copy, 90 per cent of which was based on imagination and the remainder on fact. In their fertile minds, the correspondents conceived disaster after disaster until the outside world could not help but picture Cairo as being completely submerged, something that never has and never will occur so long as the men of Cairo can prevent it.

"Newspapers containing exaggerated accounts of conditions in Cairo have been received from all points of the compass. An extra edition of a St. Louis publication contains an account of the breaking of the levee at Fourteenth Street and the subsequent flooding of the entire city. Another publication, the Chicago Record-Herald, contains reproductions of two photographs, each 4 inches in depth and 5 columns in width, and labeled "Scenes in Cairo." One picture shows the outskirts of some city, the identity of which could not be ascertained in Cairo, submerged to the depth of from 10 to 15 feet, with men, women and children marooned on housetops The other shows a scene in a business section of some other city, with the water not less than 6 feet in depth and every store in sight filled with water. How can the management of the Record-Herald explain such a blunder, —or was it a blunder? How can the Record-Herald efface the damage the publication of the pictures has done?

"The Chicago Tribune, during the course of the fight, gave space to a statement that Commercial Avenue, one of the retail store districts in Cairo, was submerged to the extent of 19 feet. Three days later the entire Seventh and Fourth regiments, Illinois National Guard, paraded up this street to the blare of bugles and the beating of drums, while a moving picture man turned the crank of his machine. On the same day a ball game was played between members of the Seventh Regiment and the local militia company members. How can the Tribune account for this fake and how can they overcome the damage it has done Cairo?

"Cairo is not afraid of the truth—it never has been and never will be. Our city is protected by the most adequate levee system in the nation, and if they had been only three feet higher, as now projected, business would not cease for a single instant. The city now has plans to obtain the money to raise and strengthen its levees to such an extent that it will be able to offer more protection to its citizens and business men than any other city in the Ohio of Mississippi Valley, but when this task has been completed will the Record-Herald, the Tribune and other unscrupulous publications, who have made paper-selling news at the expense of our commercial reputation, donate columns of space to us for free advertising?

"Cairo is on the map and it will stay on, despite adverse reports. Our losses from the present flood, so far as business is concerned, are slight. The high water resulted only in a temporary cessation of business, and now our institutions, banking and mercantile, are as strongly entrenched as ever, but how much the metropolitan newspapers' exaggerated and malicious reports may injure the credits of our commercial and industrial interests and curtail the placing of our projected issues of bonds and securities to be issued by our city cannot now be foretold. All we ask is a square deal, and if we can obtain this concession from our journalistic enemies, Cairo cannot help but prosper."

By C. C. Burford

Springfield banks, according to a comparative study made by J. H. Holbrook, vice-president of the Ridgeley National of that city, have had on an average for the past five years, capital, surplus and undivided profits of $3,346,396. The average yearly earnings for the past five years on this amount has been $247,972, the average percentage of yearly earnings having been 7.41 per cent. A total of $152,125 has been paid to stockholders yearly. The percentage of this annual dividend on the amount invested in the business has been 4.55, the balance of the earnings, or 2.86 per cent, having gone to increase the bank value. The average yearly deposits in Springfield banks for the past five years has been $12,709,000. Mr. Holbrook has made an interesting study of the banking power of Springfield.

Oats Sowing Late

Oats sowing has been greatly delayed this spring on account of the continued wet and cold weather. It is pointed out that the season last year was fully as late, yet the cool spring and summer with abundant rains last year helped to mature one of the largest, if not the largest, oat crops ever raised in Illinois. Much will depend on the months of May and June in the oats crop this year, as several weeks of hot, dry weather will, with the added handicap of a late sowing, be very hard upon the large acreage of Illinois oats.

Boone County Banker-Roadbuilder

E. E. Seward, president of the Farmers National of Marengo, is especially interested in highway improvement between Chicago and Rockford, through Marengo and Boone county. He favors the improvement of the old state road, or better known as "The Old Galena Trail." The improving of a historic road like this one will meet with a sympathetic approval from northern Illinois people. Mr. Seward will be invited to speak at various good roads associations and will make his ideas better known then. He is an able banker and is deeply interested in the road problem. With Mr. Seward, "success has become a habit," and there is no doubt that this venture also will be successful.

Smaller cities, and larger ones, too, in Illinois are awakening to the commercial possibilities of being upon well-established lines of travel and no doubt the time is not far distant when it will mean as much to an ambitious town or city to be penetrated by a good highway as to secure a new railroad or trolley line.

Dedicate U. of I. Commerce Building

The beautiful new Commerce Building of the University of Illinois will be formally dedicated April 16th and 17th with an appropriate program containing many prominent names in the commercial world as speakers. The dedicatory exercises will be in the nature of a conference-dedication and will be, in many ways, a "love feast" upon the relations between commercial education and the commercial world.

A number of men prominent in the financial, railway, commercial and educational fields will speak. Among these names are Frederic A. Delano, president of the Wabash Railroad; Robert H. Aishton, vice-president of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad; Frederic A. Cleveland, chairman of the national commission of economy and efficiency; Harry A. Wheeler, vice-president of the Union Trust Company of Chicago and president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States; Charles A. Ewing of Decatur; Alexander H. Revell, president of Alexander H. Revell and Company of Chicago; Leon C. Marshall, dean of the College of Commerce and Administration of the University of Chicago; Julius H. Hegeler, chairman of the committee of the Illinois Manufacturers Association on college courses in business administration; Howard Elting, president of the Chicago Association of Commerce; Senator Albert B. Cummings of Iowa; Thomas B. McClelland, president of Knox College, Galesburg; Judge S. B. Montgomery, president of the State Savings, Loan and Trust Company of Quincy and vice-president of the Illinois Bankers Association; W. L. Abbott of Chicago, president of the board of trustees of the University; Dean David Kinley, director of the courses in business administration in the University and President Edmund J. James of the University.

A portrait of the late Edward J. Parker, formerly president of the State Savings, Loan and Trust of Quincy and one of the grand old men in the banking life of Illinois, will be presented to the University by Mrs. Parker. It is to be hoped that a Hall of Fame, similar to the one in the College of Agriculture in the University, soon may be installed in the Commerce Building, honoring the business men of the state.

The building is a most commodious and elegantly appointed one and has been in use since February st. Its erection marks a most

FIRST and foremost the careful investor should consider the safety of his invested funds and should satisfy himself that the securities he purchases are thoroughly safeguarded before he even considers any other feature. ¶ Under present conditions many investors give too much attention to the interest rate and too little attention to the vital principle of safety. It is the established policy of this House to sell none but safe investments, and we emphasize the soundness of the securities we offer rather than the attractive interest rate they bear—5½ to 6 per cent. ¶ We will be pleased to submit offerings of First Mortgage Bonds directly secured by absolute first liens on the highest class of improved, income-producing, centrally-located Chicago property, in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000, maturing in two to ten years. Each bond issue is simply a large mortgage divided up into parts, each bond having its share in the mortgage. ¶ The soundness of these investments is best indicated by the fact that no investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us since this House was founded, thirty-one years ago. ¶ Call or write for "The Investors' Magazine," which we send free to investors, and for Circular No. 50-D.

The School of Commerce of the University of Illinois, together with many others in the United States, has struggled hard for recognition during the past twenty-five years and the results of this victory will be reflected in the training of the business men of this country in the next few years.

Railroad Building in Illinois

Bankers always are interested in railway extension and a number of important construction propositions will claim their attention this year. The entrance of the Frisco lines into Peoria is especially important, an extension of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois having been made north from Witt, on the Chicago-St. Louis division of that road, through Springfield to Peoria. This line will open Peoria and Springfield to the Frisco lines of the great Southwest. With the building of the Ohio River bridge at Paducah, Ky., Peoria will be connected with Southern cities by means of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois and the Louisville and Nashville. The road will be completed about January 1, 1914.

A through Northwestern line from St. Paul to St. Louis is looked for by down-state bankers. The Northwestern now is building south from Peoria into the southern Illinois coal fields and it is believed that a St. Louis entrance is desired. The Northwestern has a line north from Peoria and only a few links would have to be built to connect the Twin Cities of the Northwest with St. Louis. As the extension south from Peoria is being double-tracked credence is added to the St. Louis entrance suspicion.

Interurban building will proceed this season, a line from Springfield to Jacksonville being especially desired. This road will give Jacksonville an outlet north, south and east of Springfield by trolley over the McKinley lines or the Illinois Traction system.

The McKinley lines are also expanding, especially in the Joliet-Ottawa-LaSalle territory, and a Chicago entrance soon will be the object of this growing company. Interurban construction in the counties west of Peoria to Quincy and Burlington, Iowa, also is being favored and this territory will be well developed by trolley lines within the next few years. The completion of the Kankakee-Urbana line, part of it in operation now, will connect Chicago with the Illinois Traction system and thence into St. Louis. It is said that a link between Danville and Crawfordsville, Ind., will be built this summer which will connect the Illinois Traction system with the very extended interurban systems of Indiana.

The Illinois Central, having built a four-track system from Chicago to Matteson, will extend its four-rack building south to Kankakee. The Illinois Central undoubtedly will reap a large harvest from the completion of the Panama Canal.

H. W. Mahan and "Jake" Stahl

H. W. Mahan, president of the South Side State of Chicago, visited about the campus of the University of Illinois last week and watched the Boston Red Sox play baseball with the University nine. His son-in-law, "Jake" Stahl, is captain of the Red Sox and is the idol of University of Illinois men, as he formerly was the baseball and football wonder of the state institution. Stahl was well entertained about the campus, as he was and probably is he most popular athlete ever on the campus. The Boston Red Sox were on their way north after spring training in Texas and escaped over the Ohio river at Cairo just in time to miss the floods. They played a number of games with the University nine and Stahl renewed old friendships in the Twin Cities.

Mr. Mahan himself is "at home" around the University, as he is a former student and a Twin City business man and was formerly president of the First National of Urbana. He owns some choice farming lands in Champaign county and mixes business and pleasure on his down-state trips. Mr. Mahan is a member of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity and "Jake" Stahl is a member of Sigma Chi.

Road Dragging in Brown County

Banker-farmers who are interested in the topic of better roads in the state will read with interest of the "new way of tackling the road question in Brown county around Mt. Sterling." Givens Bros., a grocery firm in that city, advertised one Saturday recently that on the following Monday they would give free a pound of their favorite coffee to each farmer who would ride from his home to their store on a road-drag. A further inducement was offered by the firm in giving a barrel of their highest priced flour to the farmer driving the longest distance.

Early Monday morning the farmers started to Mt. Sterling on road drags, the "early bird" arriving at the store about eight o'clock. By evening fifty-three drags had driven up to the store. A total of 380 miles was covered by the drags, the winner of the barrel of flour coming twelve miles and each farmer received a pound of coffee. Some drivers used two, some three and some four horses, a total of 125 horses being necessary. Bad weather with plenty of rain failed to keep the crowd away. As a result Brown county has about the best dragged roads in the commonwealth of Illinois and with no great effort to any one farmer. The cost to the firm was $60, which was after all very cheap advertising. Here is a tip to some enterprising bank or mercantile house.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

Deposits of national banks in Milwaukee are mounting rapidly, judging from the advance of $2,021,059 in the statements for April 4th, an excellent gain since February 4th, when the last statements were published. There apparently is an undiminished demand for loans, the two months' gain in this department amounting to $1,293,361. If there is any trade hesitancy because of portending tariff changes it certainly is not indicated in the bank figures. Loans gained 3 per cent for the period between the last two statements, deposits went up 3 per cent, cash resources increased 4 per cent and total deposits 3 per cent. Total resources of Milwaukee national banks are now $76,775,000, the highest record ever attained and showing a gain of $2,274,000 in the two months. Commenting on the banking situation the vice-president of one bank said:

"Money is scarce and tight. There is a big demand, since business is almost uniformly good, although there is no boom. I suppose the new tariff is going to hamper some lines of business a little but there will be no far-reaching disturbance. There is no cause for fear. The farmers first opposed rural delivery but now they are enthusiastically for it. So with the tariff. Many of the so-called evils will prove merely imaginary."

Hulbert Addresses Milwaukee Credit Men

E. D. Hulbert, vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company of Chicago, spoke against the Aldrich bill at the annual banquet of the Milwaukee Credit Men's Association in the Hotel Pfister last Thursday night.

"It is very likely that during the present administration a law will be passed providing for district associations where banks could under stress of circumstances deposit approved securities and have currency issued on them," said Mr. Hulbert. "The bill providing for the district associations is nearly completed and will be presented to the legislature within the near future. President Wilson has announced his approval of the bill as it now stands. There is no doubt but that it will pass the house, but it may meet with some opposition in the senate. I think the bill, should it become a law, will prevent money panics in the future and will do much toward solving the present situation. The Aldrich bill merely provides for an inflation of the currency, an inflation that is indefinite and unlimited."

J. W. P. Lombard, president of the National Exchange Bank, gave some interesting reminiscences, saying:

"I shall be 50 years old—in the banking business—the first day of next January. It used to be looked upon as a pretty respectable business in the old times, but in these days not only the banker, but any other man who manages to make more than a living is looked upon with suspicion and his money is called tainted. One of the changes that have taken place in the last fifty years is the substitution by merchants of the open book account in place of taking notes from their customers. The only commercial paper offered to banks nowadays is from piano houses and yet every scheme that has been proposed for elastic currency has contemplated the issuance of bank notes backed by commercial paper. We have got to get rid of the bugaboo of Wall Street and New York. Any system of currency reform that leaves Wall Street and New York out of its calculations is going to be a failure. We must rely on Wall Street. It is the financial center."

May Permit State Loans for Agricultural Purposes

Without debate or any opposition the state assembly on Monday advanced to a third reading the joint constitutional amendment resolution which, if incorporated in the constitution, will permit state loans for agricultural purposes. Under the terms of the amendment bonds may be issued and the proceeds devoted to farm lands to aid in the development of the land.

Cleveland Central States News Letter Cincinnati

Cleveland bank clearings during March, 1913, amounted to $98,458,041. This compares with $81,150,554 in the month last year and shows a gain of nearly 22 per cent. The remarkable character of the showing is indicated by the fact that in March last year the gain over the same month in 1911 was a little over 3 per cent. The gain of 22 per cent despite the lessening due to the floods indicates the activity of general trade in March this year compared with the month last year. January and February this year made like favorable comparisons with those months in 1912.

Would Not Change Ohio's Debt Limit

"The Ohio legislature ought to make no attempt to increase the debt limit of Ohio cities, as is now talked of," said Otto Miller of the bond house of Hayden, Miller & Company, last week. "By so doing the legislature will undermine the credit of the cities and so defeat the very end it seeks to accomplish. While reconstruction in all of Dayton may require from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000, the city of Dayton as a city will require only a few millions at most to repair the ruin of its municipal buildings, its streets, its sewers and other city property. Assessed valuation of its taxable property in 1891 was $143,230,000 and its total outstanding bonds, less money in the sinking fund and bonds not figured in computing debt limit, was under $2,500,000. In any event, Dayton's bonded debt limit is 5 per cent of its tax duplicate, which makes $7,161,540, so that it can issue more than $4,600,000 bonds without exceeding its limit, and besides may rebuild bridges and repair streets under the emergency statutes with bonds issued independently of its debt limit. The city can recreate its property under present laws without attempts on the part of the legislature to increase the debt limit of every city in the state. That would mean that the city's credit would be hurt."

David McLean Dead

David E. McLean, for twenty years president of the Pearl Street Savings and Trust Company, Cleveland, died early Saturday at the Rockwell Springs Trout Club, near Castalis. Mr. McLean went to the trout club with a party of friends last Tuesday, apparently in good health. The attack came about two A. M. Saturday and within a few minutes proved fatal.

Banks Will Show Records to State

After many years of fighting, state officials have been notified that books of banks carrying state funds under former state treasurers are to be opened for inspection and the full truth made plain. The state has won its fight, for two of the banks, understood to have carried the largest amounts, have agreed to give state officials access to their books. It now is expected that the other six banks will follow suit. The demand made by Attorney-General Hogan of the banks was that they supply the full statement showing funds from the state of Ohio deposited with them by I. B. Cameron, W. S. McKinnon and Charles C. Green from January 1, 1900, to January 11, 1909. Since the average rate of interest that state funds have earned is 3½ per cent, the cases in which no resistance is made may be settled upon that basis. It is expected that, as the result of negotiations, a setlement will be effected with one of the Ashtabula banks, that has been sued.

Dayton Banks Open

All of the Dayton banks, closed since the flood, opened on Monday without runs or indications of financial panic. All factories not within the flood district have resumed operations. Labor in Dayton is at a premium and workers are flocking to the city by the thousands.

The Alger Savings Bank of Alger has elected T. Reed Dunlap as president; Justin Brewer, vice-president, and Fred Ankerman, cashier.

Michigan Savings Bank Reopens

Greenville (Mich.) Savings, which was closed by order of the savings bank commissioner more than four years ago, was reopened last week. Notice has been given that the depositors will receive the amount of their principal on deposit, together with a three per cent dividend and interest since last November. The suspension of the bank was caused by unprofitable loans.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, April 9th.—Affairs at the financial institutions during the past week have been fairly lively and the volume of business transacted has been quite large. Floods in the South still are hampering country business to a slight extent. New York exchange was in fair offerings, while the demand was light, with the result that the premium that was paid between banks last week was wiped out entirely and a discount appeared of five cents per $1,000. The demand for money has been of more than fair proportions and the rates were firm at 5½ to 6 per cent on call and time loans. Commercial paper was discounted by the brokers at 6 per cent.

Large Increase in Cash Reserves

A heavy increase in cash reserves in the nine days between March 26th and April 4th was shown by St. Louis banking institutions in the statements they made public as of April 4th on the call of the comptroller of the currency. The previous statement was called by the state bank commissioner. The call of the latter showed the cash reserves at a lower ebb than they had been for years. This was due principally to the fact that the call came at a time in the month when the periodic monthly demand for money for payroll and similar purposes had overlapped the usual commercial demand. The statement of yesterday showed how quickly the banks had been able to increase their reserves. As a result of this increase in reserves, loans showed a marked reduction. Deposits showed an increase. In seven important financial institutions the loans and discounts showed a decrease of $2,531,691. The cash reserves in these institutions showed an increase of $6,322,219 and the deposits an increase of $4,360,605. The following table shows the principal items of these seven banks for March 26th and for April 4th:

	March 26th.	April 4th.
Loans and discounts	$131,626,236	$129,094,545
Cash & sight exc'ge	63,629,932	69,952,151
Deposits	174,386,375	178,746,980

The financial institutions considered and their significant items are as follows:

American Trust Company—Loans and discounts, $3,148,154; cash and exchange, $1,102,233; deposits, $3,598,783.

Boatmens Bank—Loans and discounts, $11,901,512; cash and exchange, $4,027,726; deposits, $14,548,977.

Central National Bank—Loans and discounts, $6,449,696; cash and exchange, $3,174,297; deposits, $8,945,878.

St. Louis Union Trust Company—Loans and discounts, $25,669,132; cash and exchange, $9,122,860; deposits, $30,139,228.

National Bank of Commerce—Loans and discounts, $37,282,610; cash and exchange, $23,656,412; deposits, $53,614,206.

Third National—Loans and discounts, $22,713,491; cash and exchange, $13,389,501; deposits, $34,253,223.

Mechanics-American National—Loans and discounts, $21,929,950; cash and exchange, $15,479,122; deposits, $33,646,685.

Continental Trust Company Forms

Continental Trust Company, a new banking and trust company, with a capital stock of $100,000 subscribed for by St. Louis business men and bankers of Southwest Missouri, was organized recently. Officers and directors were elected. The bank will open June 1st at 5888 Delmar Boulevard, in the West End, and will be conducted by the president, J. D. DeBuchananne, cashier of the Bank of Herculaneum, Mo. R. B. Jones, cashier of the Peoples Bank of De Soto, Mo., was elected vice-president. The board of directors is as follows: J. D. DeBuchananne, R. B. Jones, H. D. Evans, cashier of the Lead Belt Bank of Bonne Terre, Mo.; Henry T. Ferriss, a lawyer of St. Louis, and N. R. Donnell, vice-president of the Bank of Herculaneum.

Flourishing Missouri Bank

At a recent meeting of the board of directors of the Bank of Marshall, George H. Althouse was elected president to succeed the late Captain Alexander Denny, who was president of the bank from the time it was organized until his death last year. Mr. Althouse was elected cashier when the bank was organized twenty years ago and has held the position continuously ever since. To him is due much of the credit for the successful management of the bank. At the same meeting of the directors, James A. Walker, who has held the position of assistant cashier, was promoted to be cashier.

Houston Leads as Financial Center of Texas

With the passing of 1912, not only have the bank deposits of Houston's national banks undergone an increase of more than five and one-half million dollars, but the organization of another national bank has been perfected. The growth of the deposits in Houston banks has been in accord with the continued and steady growth of the city in all other directions. While the average amount of coined wealth in the United States for each citizen has not passed the $40 mark, the average amount on deposit in the banks of Houston for each man, woman and child in the city is $375. This does not include the deposits in the trust companies, the state guaranty banks and the private banks, but only the national banks. The clearing house receipts for the city show an increase of more than five millions. One remarkable fact is that the clearing house receipts for 1912 show an increase over those of the first year of the clearing house—22 years ago—of more than 825 per cent.

Texas Treasury Depleted

The state of Texas is running on a deficit, official statement to this effect having been issued by State Treasurer Edwards. Senator Willacy, chairman of the senate finance committee, says the deficit is due to the large drains on the treasury for emergency funds and to the low tax levy of last year. There has been consumed $3,372,026 in operating and maintaining the state government for the first six months of the present fiscal year—from September 1, 1912, to April 1, 1913. Not including special appropriations, the total amount appropriated for the fiscal year was $4,461,832; consequently it is seen that practically three-fourths of the entire appropriation has been spent.

Growth in Postal Savings

The postal receipts for March, made public by Postmaster T. J. Akins, amount to $496,354.40. This is an increase of 10.87 per cent, or $48,686.41, over the corresponding month of 1912, when the receipts amounted to $447,667.99.

Gains in Loans

A considerable reduction in cash reserves and in deposits and a large increase in loans and discounts compared with the previous statement was shown by the statements of St. Louis financial institutions, made public last week by the clearing house. The deposits in the forty-three institutions showed a decrease of $6,379,512, the cash reserves a decrease of $19,488,129, and the loans and discounts an increase of $12,703,804. Bankers say the statements show a large increase in the funds used in business. This, they say, is especially indicated by the fact that most of the large banks, whose depositors are the big business corporations of St. Louis, have not only materially increased their loans, but have also been heavily drawn on by depositors so that the deposits of many of these banks show a decrease. The statements promise great business activity in St. Louis this spring. Most of the trust companies, whose principal customers are individuals who maintain savings and time deposits, showed increases in deposits as compared with the February 4th statement.

Appoints Bank Examiner

State Bank Commissioner Martin has appointed Harrison Grant, formerly of Fulton, but now engaged in the banking business in St. Louis, a bank examiner under the provisions of the law recently passed by the legislature allowing the department two additional examiners. He will be assigned to territory in the eastern part of the state, including St. Louis.

Bank Clearings Increase

Nearly $12,000,000 more was handled by the banks of Little Rock, Ark., during the year which ended March 31st than during the preceding year. This was shown in the report of the manager of the Little Rock Clearing House Association, which showed $111,447,842.28 was handled as against $100,368,472.01 during the preceding year.

Muskogee County Bankers Association

The Muskogee County Bankers Association recently was organized at Muskogee, Okla., every bank in the county participating in the organization, the object being for a closer affiliation of the banks. A. N. Darling of the First National of Oktaha was elected president; Otto E. Sump of the Citizens State of Council Hill, vice-president, and Willard John of the American National of Muskogee, secretary and treasurer. Meetings will be held quarterly, the first meeting to be held at the Hotel Severs, April 16th.

THE SCHOOL SAVINGS BANK DINNER

Hamlet with Hamlet left out was enacted last Friday night at the school savings bank dinner at the Grand Pacific, since E. G. McWilliam, secretary of the savings bank section of the American Bankers Association, and J. J. Reynolds, principal of Public School No. 122, Brooklyn (where a successful school savings bank is in operation), the principal guests of honor scheduled for this meeting, were stalled on a railroad train in Ohio, owing to the recent floods, and reached Chicago fourteen hours late, more than an hour after the meeting had adjourned. Fifty representatives of incorporated Chicago and out-of-town banks, and of the Chicago Board of Education, attended the dinner to do honor to the invited guests and to learn about school savings banks.

Joseph R. Noel, who is vice-president for Illinois of the savings bank section of the A. B. A., acted as chairman of the meeting, and William George, president of the Old Second National of Aurora, Messrs. William Rothmann and John J. Sonsteby, of the Chicago Board of Education, John D. Shoop, first assistant superintendent of the Chicago schools, and Professor Carlton E. Douglas, superintendent of the Aurora schools, spoke of the need for and the advantages of school savings banks.

The meeting adopted a resolution asking the board of education to adopt school savings banks, and a committee was appointed to confer with the board with that end in view.

Although the absence of Mr. McWilliam and Mr. Reynolds was a keen disappointment to all who attended the meeting, intense interest in the subject of school savings banks was manifested by the guests present, not so much on account of the possibility of immediate financial return (since it is conceded that there is very little immediate profit to banks in school savings banks), but because of the educational value to children, and the upbuilding of habits of character and thrift.

Mr. McWilliam and Mr. Reynolds were entertained on Saturday at luncheon at the Union League Club, as the guests of Lucius Teter, president of the Chicago Savings Bank and Trust Company, at which the members of the committee appointed the night previous and a number of others who had attended that meeting were present, and plans were made for the future.

Miss Gertrude Wolf, daughter of Herman Wolf, vice-president of the Wisconsin National, narrowly escaped serious injury last week when a street car struck the automobile she was driving. The automobile was wrecked but Miss Wolf was thrown out, sustaining only slight injuries.

AN APPLICATION OF "BLUE SKY"

For several years St. Louis and other southwestern cities have been afflicted with a gang of conscienceless promoters operating chiefly on insurance company lines. Kansas City and Oklahoma City suffered about equally with St. Louis. There were no "Blue Sky" laws in existence then for the protection of the public, but the United States government has come to the rescue valiantly and has succeeded in convicting two of the grossest offenders. The federal court in St. Louis on Tuesday sentenced ex-Congressman Harry M. Coudrey and his partner, Harry B. Gardner, to four and one half years in the penitentiary at Leavenworth. In addition each was fined $1,500, the sentence in both fines and imprisonment being the maximum under the law. The charge brought against them was the hackneyed one of using the United States mails to defraud. It is a very useful provision in the absence of other laws and for use in cases where the state authorities are lax in enforcing existing laws against swindlers.

THE CHICAGO BANKER takes more than the usual interest in this particular case for the reason that nearly one hundred bankers were among those operated upon by this pair of confidence schemers. The bankers were very slow in coming forward to assist in punishing the guilty ones. First, they feared the ridicule of their neighbor banks for engaging in such an enterprise, and second, they came "very near" to violating the banking laws. The plan which succeeded the best with the country banker was something like this: Solicitors for the sale of stock in the two insurance companies "headed" by Coudrey and Gardner would appear in a country town with stock for sale. First they put five hundred to one thousand shares in the name of whatever banker seemed most useful to them. In payment they accepted from him a certificate of deposit, explaining that it was merely a matter of form and would not be used but that his stock would be paid for out of commissions allowed him on the sale of other stock in the county. He was made to believe that he would be allowed these commissions for the use of his name as a reference among other intended victims. Where the banker went wrong was in allowing his name to be so used, and where he sinned against the banking law was when he issued a certificate of deposit when no deposit had been made.

The solicitors for the company deposited these certificates immediately in some other bank for discount or collection. The banker who foolishly issued them was obliged to make them good to his own bank and to pocket his loss. Various other schemes were worked against other classes of individuals. Doctors were induced to subscribe on the promise of being made medical examiners at a big salary. With these collateral swindles this publication has nothing whatever to do. It hopes that this case will prove a warning to all bankers that they have no right to sell the use of their names to promoters and that when they issue certificates of deposit without a deposit being made, they are violating the law. Not one of them could escape the verdict of guilty if prosecuted for what they have done. It so happens that they were able and willing to stand the loss personally and to make it good to the bank, but the offense remains in spite of that. The whole country will be glad that Coudrey and Gardner have been convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary. Every state in the Union needs some form of a "Blue Sky" law for ridding the country of such imposters.

TEMPERING THE "BLUE SKY"

The one oasis in the large expanse of "Blue Sky" legislation in the states is the Indiana veto. Governor Ralston gave heed to the remonstrances of the Investment Bankers Association and to other associations induced to go before him. The measure vetoed was very like the bills passed in other states and which are being considered by the legislatures in Iowa, Illinois, Michigan, Minnesota and Wisconsin. The whole situation is deemed of such public concern that President George B. Caldwell of the Investment Association has issued a statement to the following effect:

I have been in touch with the status of "Blue Sky" legislation in many of the states and a close study to this matter of protecting the part of most states to give a wide hearing and a close study to this matter of protecting the investing public from fraudulent offerings of securities. I have been disappointed, however, to observe that many of the states have joined the mad rush to imitate the Kansas act without closely observing its unfairness to legitimate business, its points of questioned constitutionality, and particularly the effect its operations will have on a state's industrial progress. The office of the Investment Bankers Association in Chicago has given wide distribution of facts, and welcomes any inquiries with reference to the relation of investment bankers to this type of proposed legislation. But the question is a bigger one than most persons imagine, and goes beyond the mere interests of investment bankers. I feel that the average honest manufacturer, railroad operator or public utility owner, or promoter of any legitimate enterprises, does not appreciate the undue hardships that would accrue to him were the average pending measure passed. There are several bills before your legislature and I am not exaggerating when I say that a state's commercial and industrial progress is dependent upon closer examination of the proposed measures than has heretofore been given. Stock and bond holders in corporations in every state will, if no attention or protest is entered, wake up to the fact that the market for their stocks or bonds has been restricted and depressed to the extent that each state will have to supply the market and the money for its own growth. New enterprises must be started, ventures must be undertaken, old bond issues will mature and must be refinanced, but bad laws make it both difficult and expensive. A good "Blue Sky" law is in the interest of productive business as much as it is in the interest of an investment dealer who sells the securities. A bad law no one wants and no legislation should pass.

Indiana rejected its measure because it had a fault common to the half-digested measures of the Kansas type which many other legislatures are inclined to enact. This fault was that, in the attempt to punish the evil-doer, great injustice would be done to well meaning, legitimate business. It is to be hoped that Indiana's neighbor states will copy its precedent rather than that of the Kansas act, and refer this question to a commission to consider and report at the next legislative session.

Legislators can serve the business and banking interests of the country in no better way than by calling before them the legitimate investment bankers of the financial centers. No harm, but only good, can come of it. Legislation virile enough to accomplish just what is hoped for, but not drastic enough to cripple legitimate enterprise is entirely possible.

JAMES B. FORGAN GIVES VIEWS TO CANADIAN PARLIAMENT

This week President James B. Forgan of the First National, at the invitation of the parliamentary committee at Ottawa having in charge a revision of the bank act, presented to that body his views with respect to certain changes proposed to be made in the Canadian banking law.

Briefly stated, the following are some of the things recommended by Mr. Forgan:

1. Sees no need for further system of local banks with small capital.

2. Believes banks should be permitted to issue new stock on such terms as are fixed by the directors; provided that in no case shall a rate be fixed which shall make the premium, if any, payable on the stock allotted exceed one-half of the percentage which the rest or reserve fund bears to the paid-up capital, nor shall such rate of premium in any case exceed 100 per cent of the new stock so issued.

3. Advises Canadian government to keep its hands off bank supervision or anything approaching it. Believes suggestion for a shareholder's audit is what is needed. Believes that right should be given to the minister to direct and require the auditors to make special

4. Advocates establishment of central gold reserves against which the banks may issue their notes in excess of the amount of their unimpaired capital.

5. Does not believe in proposal that banks be taxed for their privilege of note issues and on moneys loaned by them in foreign countries.

DIRECT ELECTION OF SENATORS

Ratification by Connecticut of the proposal to amend the federal constitution so as to provide for the direct election of United States senators made certain the adoption of an amendment to that effect.

This is a reform which has been advocated for many years by public-spirited people and its final realization will prove of incalculable benefit to the nation in the securing of senators truly representative of the will of the people instead of—as has been the case in some instances in the past—those subservient to the will of special privilege and the predatory interests. No more shall the country witness such a spectacle as was staged at Springfield recently when the legislature wrangled for days in an endeavor to elect two senators. That there should have been any difficulty in the accomplishment of this occasions the greatest amazement, for the people of this state previously had expressed their preferences in that behalf; and if the members of the legislature elected by the people had tried faithfully to discharge the duties of their positions and to heed the will of their constituents as expressed at the polls, the election of two senators would not have proven such an arduous task.

There never has been any valid objection to direct election of federal senators and any opposition thereto can be attributed only to sinister motives.

JOHN E. BLUNT, JR., ADDRESSES BOND MEN

At the weekly meeting of the Bond Men's Club at the Hotel La Salle on March 27th, John E. Blunt, Jr., vice-president of the Merchants Loan and Trust Company, gave a short informal talk, touching upon the subject of "Blue Sky" legislation. He said in part: "The so-called 'Blue Sky' legislation has reached a stage where it demands the attention not only of all investment bankers but of all parties who are in any way interested in securities. Up to a short time ago I think most of us were inclined to treat the whole matter as a joke. We heard that some kind of a 'Blue Sky' law had been passed in Kansas, but as neither bond buyers nor bond houses are particularly numerous in that state, very little attention was paid to it. I understand that the provisions of the law have very properly been enforced only against dealers in wildcat securities, and legitimate investment houses have been let alone. When, however, it is known that bills restricting the sale of investment securities have been introduced in no less than thirty-six states, the matter assumes serious importance. Most of these bills are offered apparently with the best of intentions, and have for their object the protection of the innocent investor, but their authors seem to be entirely ignorant of the subject in hand and do not take into consideration the different conditions prevailing in a state like Kansas and states like Illinois, New York and Massachusetts, where hundreds of millions of securities are sold each year.

"The suddenness with which this wave has swept over the country has made it a difficult matter to handle, and it is very fortunate that the Investment Bankers Association was organized in the nick of time, as through its control it has been of great assistance to its members in various states in handling the opposition to these unwise measures in an intelligent manner.

"The Indiana legislature recently passed a very hastily drawn act, obnoxious in many ways, which was vetoed by the governor. I have no doubt that the manner in which this subject was presented by the Indiana members of the Investment Bankers Association and its counsel enabled him to view the matter in its proper light.

"As legislation of this kind seems inevitable we should lend our efforts to prevent the passage of hasty and ill-advised measures and endeavor to secure the enactment of laws which will really protect the investor and prevent the sale of fraudulent securities."

GRAHAM & SONS WILL FINANCE HOTEL

Graham & Sons, bankers, are financing the new Morrison Hotel, to be built in the very heart of the Chicago loop district and to contain more than 2,000 rooms with baths. The initial loan of $2,000,000 was made by the Graham bank on Wednesday to Harry C. Moir, president of the Moir Hotel Company.

The loan is secured by a mortgage on the hotel property by a bond issue. The bonds, carrying interest at 6 per cent, will be issued on July 1st. They will be in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000 and the entire issue will be placed by Graham & Sons.

The first section, twenty-one stories high and complete in itself, will be erected on Madison Street just east of the present site of the Morrison Hotel. It will have a frontage of 67½ feet on Madison Street and will extend to the alley, a depth of 200 feet.

This section will be completed inside of two years. Three months later the old hotel will be torn down and the work of erecting the second section will be started.

When complete the hotel will represent an investment of more than $13,000,000. It will have a frontage of 167 feet on Madison Street, which brings it up against the Hartford building, and 200 feet on Clark Street, constituting the largest hotel in the world.

CANADIAN PARLIAMENT CALLS AMERICAN BANKER IN CONSULTATION

partment and are not made public, nor does any certificate based upon them emanate from either the department or the examiners for the benefit of anybody. The head of the department is governed entirely by the mandates of the law as interpreted by the courts and he is so hampered by legal technicalities that so far as taking action is concerned his hands seem practically to be tied until conditions become so bad that there can be no doubt of a bank's insolvency when he places a receiver in charge. The department assumes no responsibility for the accuracy of the statements which the banks are required to publish five times a year, although these statements are primarily made to it under oath, and although its official examiners make examinations and reports to it on the conditions in which they find the banks twice each year.

Everything considered, therefore, and basing my advice much more on experience than on theory, I would advise the Canadian government to keep its hands off bank supervision or anything approaching it. The minister's suggestion for a shareholders' audit seems to me to be what is wanted. With the excellent system of internal supervision now in force, including audits and inspections of practically everything outside of the head offices of the banks, it should, from a practical standpoint, be quite feasible for experienced accountants, given free and full access to all the books and records to make satisfactory audits, inspections and reports and to certify to the annual statements of the banks without going outside of the head office. They should of course have the power, as suggested in the bill, to visit any of the branches when that is deemed necessary. The right given to the minister to dirct and require the auditors to make special examinations for his department when deemed necessary is also an excellent provision and seems to cover all that is necessary.

Section 61. The proposal to establish "Central Gold Reserves," against which the banks may issue their notes in excess of the amount of their unimpaired capital, seems a wise one. As I understand it, bank notes are the popular and practically the only circulating medium of five dollars and over in the Dominion. This being the case, there should exist some method for the banks supplying with safety the legitimate demand for them when such demand exceeds the limits otherwise placed on the amount of their issues. Public attention is unnecessarily, and it may be unwisely, attracted to the fact that the banks have reached the legal limits of their issues if in consequence thereof they must pay gold instead of notes over their counters. They may just as well deposit the gold in the "Central Gold Reserves" and continue to pay out their notes. There can of course be no over-expansion of bank-note circulation that is thus covered dollar for dollar by a deposit of gold.

The further proposals that banks be taxed for their privilege of note issues and on money loaned by them in foreign countries would seem inadvisable if not unwarranted.

I do not profess to be fully informed, but I doubt if their supplying the country with a satisfactory medium of circulation is not a "quid pro quo" for the privilege they have of so doing. I further doubt if their profit in that branch of their business is unreasonably large for the services they give, or large enough to warrant it being subject to special taxation.

As to taxing them on money loaned by them in foreign countries, I think such a policy would be narrow and shortsighted. Their proximity to New York, the financial center of the continent, enables them to loan money there on ample security and generally at low rates of interest which they can depend upon getting when they want it. This keeps them strong in immediately available resources which may be regarded as a secondary reserve, protecting the cash in their vaults against any sudden or unusual home demands on them.

I do not know enough about their other foreign branches to speak with authority, but I do know that at most of them they receive deposits as well as make loans. I presume it would not be thought advisable to tax them on the loans they make at such branches against the local deposits they receive, but only, if at all, on the average net balances, if any, due by the branch to the head office. This balance, it is quite conceivable, might turn the other way and the branch supply the bank with money to use at home.

The financial and banking relations existing among the great commercial powers are more and more uniting all the principal financial centers of the world into one great money market. It would seem to me ill-advised, in view of these conditions and of future possibilities, that the great Canadian banks which have made for themselves a world-wide and enviable reputation, should be handicapped by government interference, such as a tax on their foreign business would be. I think they may be fully trusted not to send money abroad to the detriment of their home markets.

Those remarks also apply to the proposal to permit a Canadian bank to establish branches and open agencies outside the Dominion only in so far as it can be shown that these are advantageous to its Canadian business. Canadian banks have been permitted to establish branches or agencies outside the Dominion and have thus, it seems to me, acquired vested rights in that connection which the government should respect and should consider well before they interfere with.

The only other new proposal on which I desire to express an opinion is that which places limitations on loans to companies or corporations in which bank directors or officers are interested.

This is a difficult matter to regulate by legislation. In some cases such restrictions might prove beneficial, while in others they would only place an unwarranted embargo on some of the best business done by the banks. We have a similar provision in the state banking law of Illinois. When its passage was under consideration, on the suggestion of some practical bankers, "directors" were eliminated from its operation, and the law as finally passed reads as follows:

"It shall not be lawful for any bank to loan to its president, or to any of its vice-presidents (note our presidents and vice-presidents are as a rule executive officers drawing the highest salaries paid), or its salaried officers or employees, or to corporations or firms controlled by them, or in the management of which any of them are actively engaged, until an application for such loan shall have been first approved both as to security and amount, by the board of directors."

After the passage of the law the attorney-general of the state construed it to include directors, claiming that they are officers who may or may not be salaried. Our experience is that the law works well in its application to the executive officers, but it has been found quite impractical to apply it to directors. As a rule our bank directors are men of large means, interested in the control and management of railroads and other large corporations whose credit is such as to induce the banks to enter into the keenest competition for it. If every time such corporations want to borrow money, a special meeting of the bank directors must be called to pass upon their applications simply because one or more of them are interested as stockholders or connected with the management of the applicant company, an almost impossible embargo would be placed on some of the very best business that comes to the banks. The banks would face the alternative of losing some of their best business or some of their best directors.

So far our government authorities have not attempted to enforce the attorney-general's interpretation of the law and we have been permitted to adhere to our own interpretation of it, knowing that the legislature intended, when it was passed, by striking out the word "directors," as they did, that it should not affect companies or corporations in which they were interested.

I would therefore strongly urge that if you adopt these restrictions at all you should eliminate from them companies or corporations in which bank directors are interested and limit them to those with which the executive salaried officers of the banks are connected.

NEW YORK'S GREATEST BANK BUILDING.

The Guaranty Trust Co., of New York, dates from 1864. At present it is exceeded in deposits and total resources by no other trust company in the world. To meet continuing expansion it has opened in its superb new home, the most complete bank in existence. Its building, a granite temple palace, with Ionic columns, on Broadway and Liberty Street, is twelve stories. The main room, three stories high, or 52 feet, is 93 by 135 feet, floored with Knoxville and paneled with French buff Hauteville marble, and ceiled in blue, gold, and marble. Building and room are Roman, but a wonderful bronze and marble counter screen are Renaissance. In the two materials are set disks copying famous antique Greek coins, symbols of banking and commerce. The pavements reproduce rare Pompeiian designs.

Second and third floor banking rooms have specially designed furniture and cork floors. Pneumatic tubes serve twenty-two departments. The ventilating, heating, lighting, and electrical equipment have solved many problems. Trough reflectors illuminate desk and counter surfaces, without glare. Lamp signals replace buzzers and bells.

The vault, two stories deep, the strongest in the world, has three-quarters of a mile of lineal shelf space. Telephone and light enable release of any one caught inside at closing time. Mirrors show space under the vault, which rests on its own girders. The vault is shock and drill proof. Combination locks require two people for doors, safes, and closets. All combination dials have shields with wings, so that only the operator directly back of the dial can see the combination. Burglar alarm protection is unique, since the cables are imbedded in the cement construction of the walls. Over thirty thousand feet of lead-covered wire was employed.

Interior and exterior service work on one telephone, which thus has two connections. An elevator from Island, a group of departments on the main floor, drops to the vault below. Cash and securities thus avoid passage through the public space. Security trucks have combination locks and are wheeled at night into the vault. A revolving case containing signature cards serves cages, and those outside. All wickets have counterweights and rise when unlocked. Every appliance for efficiency and comfort has been adopted, for customer and banking corps. A comprehensive news bureau and library are a feature. In a dining room on the sixth floor, the company daily furnishes luncheon to its 230 employees.

The Guaranty Trust Company is assured of a perfect banking plant, a physical and financial marvel. Western bankers are especially invited to call and inspect.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Until the crops are well advanced into April there always is great anxiety among the people of the agricultural Central West lest a late frost or continued drouth injure the buds and shoots at a period when they are unusually susceptible to damage. Most of the crop failures of past years as well as partial crop failures have been due to injuries occurring within the space of four or five weeks in the early spring. The crops having come to the middle of April under the most favorable conditions for the most part, there is general confidence among the people of this district that a year of prosperity will be enjoyed. Bankers are keenly alive to crop conditions, as they realize how much depends upon the success of the farmers, and it is pleasant to note the unanimity of feeling among these bankers that the season promises unusually well. "With conditions of trade and finance normal in other respects," said Thornton Cooke, vice-president of the Fidelity Trust Company, "I look for a record-breaking year in this part of the country. Of course there is a feeling of uncertainty at this time over tariff changes and other administrative policies that may exert a strong influence upon the country, but if an abundance of wheat, corn and cotton, fat stock and other farm products can keep things moving in the right direction, then I face the future with confidence. The Central West is prosperous and happy. Business is good and there is a favorable undercurrent in bank business that is a good criterion."

Kansas City Clearing House Elects

Kansas City Clearing House Association held its annual meeting last week and elected these officers: P. W. Goebel, president; George S. Hovey, vice-president; Jerome Thralls, manager and secretary, and W. S. Webb, treasurer. The directors are E. F. Swinney, J. W. Perry and Walton Holmes and the officers. Mr. Webb, as treasurer, succeeds H. C. Schwitzgebel. The clearing house is getting ready to move into its handsome home in the Missouri Savings Bank building, 920 Walnut street. The work of preparing offices has progressed rapidly and it is said that removal will take place not later than June 1st. The institution now is located at 921 Baltimore Avenue, where it has been for many years. The new location is more central and convenient for most of the members.

W. B. Planck Now a Vice-President

At a meeting of the directors of the Gate City National of Kansas City last week, W. B. Planck, former deputy state bank examiner under John E. Swanger in Missouri, was elected vice-president of that institution. He assumed the duties of his office almost immediately. Mr. Planck left the bank commissioner's office, where he had served four years as chief deputy in direct charge of the office, February 1st. John E. Swanger was the first bank commissioner of Missouri. While he was secretary of state, the state banks were handled through that department. After the banks were divorced into a separate department Mr. Swanger became commissioner and took Mr. Planck with him, as Mr. Planck had been in charge of bank supervision in the secretary of state's office. Previous to that time Mr. Planck was cashier of the Bethany (Mo.) Savings, where he had started many years before as office boy. He has a wide acquaintance in the Southwest and will be a very valuable acquisition to the Gate City National.

Kansas Bank Commissioner Has His Troubles

Charles Sawyer, the new bank commissioner of Kansas, is having a fresh lot of troubles. Before his appointment definitely was decided upon it was charged that Mr. Sawyer, as an officer in a national bank, would not be entirely impartial in his dealings with state banks. Few people really believed this, as Mr. Sawyer is a man of high character and ability. Opposition to him on this ground finally was quieted when it was shown that he also is interested in several state banks. But last week a committee of business men and farmers from the town of Gaylord, Kan., and vicinity made the accusation that Commissioner Sawyer had refused a charter for a state bank in that town on the ground that Gaylord already had a national bank fully equipped to handle all of the banking business of that community. Those who were trying to organize the state bank were wealthy and responsible and they have complained to Governor Hodges that in this instance it clearly is indicated that state banks will be refused charters to do business whenever their location conflicts or is in opposition to national banks. Concerning the matter Mr. Sawyer says: "The charter board refused the application for a charter because it was the board's opinion that there was not enough business at Gaylord for two banks. The talk that we turned it down in order to protect a national bank there is all poppycock. Why, we received an application to-day for a new state bank where there are now two national banks, and we intend to grant the application as soon as the board can get together. It is our policy, in the interests of sound banking, to refuse a charter for a new bank where it is our opinion there is not enough business for a new bank. This is the same way the comptroller of the currency does with regard to new national banks. If there is enough business and the application is made by home capital we always grant charters for state banks."

Condition of Kansas City Banks

Under the call of the comptroller of the currency for statements of national banks at the close of business April 4th, the fourteen national banks in Kansas City show that there has been a slight falling off in deposits since the last previous call, Feb. 4, 1913. On February 4th the total deposits of Kansas City national banks was $114,623,957, while on April 4th last, the total deposits were $111,069,465. Cash and sight exchange also fell off about $4,000,000; loans and discounts were a little less and total resources about $2,000,000 short of the previous statement. The deposits of the state banks and trust companies were $32,012,953 on April 4th, while on February 4th they were $29,819,225. Thus the state banks and trust companies have made a little better showing than the national banks. However, in all important banking items the state and national banks of Kansas City have shown decided improvement over the same

Governor Signs "Blue Sky" Law

Governor Major last week signed the new Missouri "Blue Sky" bill, which was passed by the recent legislature and patterned after the Kansas law to regulate the issuance of corporation stock. The Missouri law places supervision in the hands of the state bank commissioner and corporation stock can be issued only on his approval after the submission of statements and affidavits showing the assets upon which the stock is based. The governor also has signed the new Missouri corporation measure, which is one of the most stringent laws of its kind adopted by any state. It requires that all corporations shall submit statements once a year to the secretary of state, and pay a fee of $5 annually for "recording" the same. There is to be a strict examination of all corporations also. It is provided that all railroads doing business as carriers in Missouri must take out Missouri charters. It is believed that this law will be vigorously opposed in the courts.

"Blue Sky" Legislation in Nebraska

The attempt to formulate a "Blue Sky" law in Nebraska almost fizzled out after months of effort to put it in shape to meet the desires of all concerned. Last week, in the committee of the whole, the house recommended for passage the Cordeal bill, after amending the meat out of it. One of the amendments exempts from the operation of the bill those mining concerns organized for five years past in any state, providing the officers and directors are residents of Nebraska. Real estate men are exempt from the provisions of the bill, but the state conservation commission is to answer any questions regarding a real estate proposition, and pass on such proposition for the public. "That is," says the correspondent for the Omaha Bee, "Frank Odell and Dr. G. E. Condra will tell the public whether to buy or not. One is a bee expert, and the other makes his living as a member of the state university faculty."

Kansas State Bankers Convention

Several hundred state bankers were in Topeka to attend the Kansas State Bankers convention in that city Thursday and Friday, April 10th and 11th. Dr. S. S. Estey opened the convention in Representative hall of the capitol, with an invocation at 10 o'clock Thursday morning, and an address of welcome was delivered by Mayor R. L. Cofran, of Topeka. J. B. Adams, of Eldorado, made the response. The annual address of the president of the association, E. S. Chenoweth, of McCracken, followed, and then the convention got down to routine business. On the program was an address by J. J. Waters, president of the Kansas State Agricultural College, on "Forty Minutes of Intensified Farming." Governor Hodges also addressed the convention and others who spoke were Charles M. Sawyer, bank commissioner, George W. Hanna of Clay Center and John E. Wagner of Larned. One of the features of the convention was an address by John R. Mulvane, the pioneer banker of Kansas, on "Banking Reserves for Kansas Banks." W. E. Wilson of Washington and J. N. Dolley, former bank commissioner, made talks. Visiting members and their wives were entertained Thursday night with a theater party, and an automobile tour of the city was one of the pleasant features of the day following. Mrs. William Macfarran, assisted by the wives of the officers and ex-officers of the association, entertained with a musicale luncheon at one o'clock Friday.

Commissioner Gill Makes Examination Assignments

After the conference of the Texas state bank commissioner and his assistants in Austin last week, Commissioner Gill announced the following assignments of examiners for the state: Amarillo district, W. L. McFall; Dallas district, L. P. Kean; Greenville district, R. R. R. Cook; Calvert district, J. W. Hayes; Wichita district, J. O. Jackson; Fort Worth district, C. E. McCutcheon; Tyler district, W. H. Leftwich; Waco district, J. H. Cheatham; El Paso district, L. J. Davis; Houston district, John S. Wightman; Brownsville district, C. F. Goodenough; Pittsburg district, Paul G. Villaret; Beaumont district, E. F. Gossett; Austin district, Louie Cohn; Sherman district, C. S. Holderness; San Antonio district, L. R. Buchanan. Since the last assignment of examiners, the state has been redistricted, and there are now sixteen districts instead of fifteen, as formerly.

Central West Notes

A distinct variation in the style of bank designations was noted last week, when the Progressive State Bank of Winfield, Kansas, was organized. It will have a capital of $25,000, and these are the organizers: L. P. King, O. E. Mabie, J. N. Shackelton, G. T. Wright, F. R. Newton, W. S. Taylor and Z. B. Myer, all of Winfield.

Bank examiners have taken possession of the First National of Canadian, Okla. There is said to be a shortage of $20,000 in the bank's books, which it was alleged was used in promoting a townsite industrial enterprise. A majority of the stock is owned by Galesburg, Ill., citizens.

At a meeting of the stockholders of the First State Bank and Trust Company of Abilene, Tex., last week, it was unanimously voted to increase the capital stock from $100,000 to $200,000. The new stock has been taken at $120 a share.

J. S. Hurst and C. P. Lowery, members of the R. P. Derry & Co. Bank, of Wilmer, Tex., have associated themselves with the White Banking Company of that place, thus consolidating the two institutions.

Bind Jones, a farmer of Kamima, Okla., has been charged with robbing the Bank of Tamaha, Okla., of $3,400 on March 12th. Jones, it is alleged, belongs to a very active gang of safe blowers that has been operating in the Southwest for several months.

Fire broke out in the building occupied by the Bank of Worth, Worth, Mo., recently, and the bank suffered a loss of about $5,000.

A new bank is being organized in Lincoln, Neb., and a charter has been applied for. There will be about forty stockholders and the capital has been placed at $100,000. The officers will be Frank Parks, president, Don L. Love, vice-president, and I. H. Hatfield, cashier. The bank will be located at the northwest corner of Twelfth and O streets in the Ganter building.

John West, 27 years old, cashier of the American National at Muskogee, Okla., died last week.

A charter has been issued to the Miners National of Henryetta, Okla., with an authorized capital of $25,000. John Smith is president and J. W. Kincaid, cashier.

Joe Wren of Avant, Okla., has moved to Sperry, Okla., where he has organized the Guaranty State Bank of that place.

Wade Atkins, president of the Waurika (Okla.) National, has been appointed inspector general of Oklahoma for Confederate veterans.

These reserve agents have been approved by the Texas banking department: For the First Guaranty State Bank of Vernon, the American National Bank of Austin; for the Oakwood State of Oakwood, the Mechanics American National of St. Louis; for the Union Bank and Trust Company of El Paso, the American Trust and Savings of El Paso; for the First State of Streetman, the Union National of Houston; for the Guaranty State of Greenville, the First State of Dallas.

J. B. Betts, vice-president of the German-American State of Topeka, Kan., died last week.

The announcement was made at the Fidelity Trust Company in Kansas City that Charles Campbell, vice-president of that institution, who has been seriously ill, is recovering.

The First State of Dewar, Okla., has been organized with $10,000 capital.

The following out-of-town bankers were visitors in Kansas City's financial district last week: J. Fletcher Farrell, vice-president of the Fort Dearborn National, Chicago; E. E. Wilson, president of the State Bank of Manchester, Kan.; William Macfarran, president of the Topeka (Kan.) Savings; W. C. Lancaster, president of the First National, Marceline, Mo.; F. S. Spruck, president, and F. E. Battenfield, cashier, of the First National, Nelson, Neb.; D. F. Callahan, cashier of the Farmers State, Kingman, Kan.; Ben Elliott, cashier of the Farmers Bank, Odessa, Mo.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Bank deposits in Minneapolis at the last call were $11,248,708 more than a year ago, or $114,945,543. The figures are an increase of $2,448,813 over February. The high record in Minneapolis for deposits was $115,938,319, Nov. 26, 1912. Four savings banks report deposits of $22,579,128, which is the high record. In February the total was $22,073,969. The loans and discounts for April 4th were $71,844,090. In February they were $68,733,140, and a year ago, $62,751,472.

Geo. F. Orde Returns from South

Returned from Augusta, Ga., Vice-President George F. Orde of the Minneapolis First National objects to the buffalo nickel. He said it is a joke with the Indian carrying over his head the word "liberty." Mr. Orde saw former President W. H. Taft play golf all the time in all weathers.

"The South is looking for a good year and in New York money is a little easier, although in Chicago it remains firm," Mr. Orde said. "General business is reported fair. The Ohio and Indiana floods have caused unexpected demand for money, but the effect upon rates has not been material."

To Start Campaign to Prevent Crop Disease

A campaign among Minnesota farmers to prevent $5,000,000 loss from preventable crop disease each year will be started in a short time by the horticultural department of the university, under the direction of Professor E. M. Freeman. This loss is independent of the insect loss and is not included in the depreciation in values from wheat rust and like diseases that are only partly preventable. Wheat rust loss cannot be estimated with any degree of accuracy, according to Professor E. C. Stackman, who will have active charge of the work under the direction of Professor Freeman. It mounts into the millions each year and can be combated only by breeding varieties of wheat that resist rust.

Bank Conducts Writing Contests

Writing contests originated by the First National of Minneapolis are on again. The contest is open to pupils of the sixth, seventh and eighth grades of public schools, each grade permitted to put in two papers. Contest work is to be sent to the bank and must be in the hands of judges before May 15th. The prizes are a cup valued at $150 for the city winning the championship and a $75 loving cup for the next best sample of writing. The cities in the contest are: New Haven, Conn.; Oberlin, Ohio; Atlantic City, N. J.; Sioux City, Iowa; Fort Worth, Texas; Hartford, Conn.; Burlington, Iowa; Boone, Iowa; Spokane, Wash.; Washington, D. C.; Lafayette, Ind.; Cedar Rapids, Iowa; Des Moines, Iowa; Dubuque, Iowa; Salt Lake City, Utah; St. Louis, Mo.; Long Beach, Cal.; Lincoln, Neb.; and Minneapolis. The judges for the contest will be R. B. Millard, Little Falls, Minn.; D. P. Brandrup of the Mankato Business College, Mankato, Minn., and D. P. Blankenbiller of the board of education, St. Paul.

Chime Clock for Litchfield Bank

First National of Litchfield, Minn., has made a deal for the installation of a chime clock. The clock is being placed in front of the bank. The clock will have a dial on each side so the time can be seen up and down the street. The dials are thirty inches. Inclosed in the case with the dials is a set of pipe chimes, which will be rung every quarter of an hour. The first quarter of each hour will be sounded by four strokes on the chimes, the half hour by eight, the three quarter by twelve strokes, and the hour by sixteen, followed by striking the hour strokes.

The street case containing the chimes is about eight feet high and three feet wide and deep. Inside the bank is placed the master clock which runs the mechanism. The chimes are rung by an electric contrivance connecting the two clocks.

The bank never has had a chime clock before. In this case it is on Sibley Avenue.

Chase Finds Unnatural Bank Competition

In reply to the investigative questions by State Superintendent of Banks Kelsey S. Chase, started by the complaint of Minnesota farmers that it is hard to get buyers of their mortgages at reasonable terms, which has curtailed activity, he found that there is considerable competition among banks in the same section for deposits and the interest rates have increased from 3 per cent for six months to 4 or 5 per cent for the same period, and from 4 per cent for one year to 5 and 6 per cent, during the last ten years. This means that the banks are paying too much for their deposits, due to competition, says Mr. Chase, and are as a result not able to invest profitably in 6 per cent farm mortgages.

From the replies it seems most bankers would favor a 3 per cent rate on six months deposits and a 4 per cent rate on those running for one year.

If banks could get money at this rate they would be able to loan it to the farmers at from 5 to 6 per cent and make a fair profit. This now is impossible, as a banker paying 5 per cent on a deposit for one year cannot tie up his money at 6 per cent in a three or five year first farm mortgage. As a result there is little assistance rendered farmers from the rural banks.

Statistics obtained by Mr. Chase indicate that not more than 10 per cent of the resources of the banks reporting are loaned on farm property. This per cent should be doubled or trebled, thinks the superintendent, and if it should be, great benefit would accrue not only to the state at large but to the banks themselves.

Replies to inquiries show banking conditions in some communities are far from satisfactory. The increase in the interest rate in many sections is said to be due to the unnatural competition existing because of the establishment of new banks unwarranted by the economic or business needs of the section which they serve. This has led the older banks to meet the interest rate boost, and by necessity they have been compelled to seek more profitable sources of income from their deposits than farm loans.

Mr. Chase believes these letters to be good arguments in favor of the proposal for a state banking commission now before the legislature. Such a commission would have the authority to prevent the establishment of new banks in communities where there is no need for them and would serve to put the business on a more stable basis.

Under the anti-trust law it would be impossible for the banks of the state to enter into a mutual agreement in regard to interest rates on time deposits, but Mr. Chase says there should be some way in which the banks and the people as a whole could be made to understand the situation and see that it is remedied.

Banker Elected Mayor of Duluth

In Duluth the Minnesota banker is "recognized," as is indicated by the first election under the commission system. Although by six votes and under protest of his adversary, a labor candidate, W. I. Prince, former president of the Minnesota State Bankers Association, has been declared the first mayor. Mr. Prince was born in 1867 in Ohio. He lived in Escanaba, Mich., and Bessemer, Mich., before moving to Duluth.

Northwest Notes

Bank clearings in Duluth are on the gain. For the first quarter of 1913 the gain is $10,446,880. For 1913 the clearings were as follows: January, $19,731,402; February, $12,400,761; March, $12,958,489. The total for 1912 was $34,653,775.

That Carmi Thompson, former treasurer of the United States, may become a member of the Hill financial cabinet, possibly as president of the Northwestern Trust Company, is the talk among Twin City financial men. Haydn S. Cole, the president, will be abroad until summer. This is believed to indicate his possible retirement, because the Hill organization is still in the process of formation and initial development.

P. M. Kerst, interior examiner of banks for the two clearing house associations, is complaining about delayed mail. He has received a statement of service charges against him at the Commercial Club of St. Paul mailed eight years ago. Mr. Kerst immediately returned the statement in the inclosed envelope. It is not said whether Mr. Kerst was posted at the time. The letter was found the other day behind a mail chute in the Germania Life Building where the club recently vacated.

A. A. McRae, cashier of the South Side State Bank, has been elected to the Minneapolis park board to fill a vacancy. He represents the South Side, and replaces a man from the exclusive residence district of the West Side.

Governor A. O. Eberhart has to say of James C. Caldwell, president of the First National, Lakefield, Minn., representing the national commission to visit Europe to study rural conditions and co-operative methods: "Mr. Caldwell is an excellent man to represent Minnesota. He is a student of finance, as a matter of course, and has had a long experience in the relations of the banker to the farmer. I understand that he has made a careful study of rural co-operative finance and that he is regarded as an authority on the subject. It is exceedingly fortunate that Mr. Caldwell is a man of wealth and able to pay his own expenses, as otherwise Minnesota might not have been represented on this very important commission."

Bradley C. Bowman, secretary and general manager for the S. H. Bowman Lumber Company, has been elected to the board of the Commercial Bank to succeed the late J. S. Porteous. He is director of the First National of Odebolt, Iowa, and before coming to Minneapolis was vice-president. He is a member of the Commercial, Minneapolis Athletic, Minikahda, Lafayette and Automobile Clubs, and is a Mason.

A. P. White and W. L. Brooks, president and cashier of the Northern National, have become owners of the Beltrami County State at Beltrami, Minn. H. H. Herman has been appointed cashier. A. L. Morris, former owner, will devote his time to his farm at Gull Lake. The bank was organized in 1902 and became a state bank in 1906. Mr. White said the bank is now prepared to consider applications for farm and real estate loans and to be of assistance to settlers.

The Clay county bankers in Minnesota, after a talk, have ordered a mass meeting April 14th at the normal school, Moorhead, to organize a county better farming association. In the afternoon a preliminary meeting is to be held. H. E. Roberts, cashier of the Moorhead National, and L. A. Huntoon, president of the First National, are the committee.

Group 8 bankers of South Dakota at a meeting in Deadwood were addressed by W. G. Rice and Congressman E. W. Martin. Judge Rice advocated a form of guaranty which would appeal to banks and public alike, his system including a general taxation for the fund. Congressman Martin urged the bankers to get greater advertising for the scenic beauties of the Hills.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Optimism is the watchword in Spokane this spring. The last few weeks have cleared the financial skies to a remarkable degree, and everyone is enthusiastic over the outlook. The greatest single factor responsible for the change is the attitude of railroad companies and capitalists toward Spokane. Seven distinct projects, all but one of which are under construction at the present time, represent an outlay of $24,000,000. These projects are as follows: Entrance by concrete subway of Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad at a cost of $7,500,000; Washington Water Power's dam at Long Lake, to develop 90,000 electrical horse power, at a minimum cost of $6,000,000. This company already has developed power sufficient for the needs of its territory; New route of Oregon-Washington Railroad and Navigation Company within two blocks of business heart, with a union passenger station on the site of the present city hall, total cost estimated to be $4,000,000, including above items, right of way, and bridges in city and immediate environs; grade separation of Northern Pacific and new shops in east end of city, total cost, $3,000,000; building of thirteen-story Davenport hotel by Spokane capitalists, at a cost of $2,000,000. Work on this is progressing rapidly; Spokane, Portland and Seattle Railroad announces it will expend $750,000 in building new shops at Overlook, immediately west of city limits; Spokane capitalist and railroad contractor, Patrick Welch, buys property and is erecting nine-story building; cost, $750,000.

All these big development projects are under way excepting the S. P. and S. shops, announcement of which was made just this week.

The above items, together with splendid crop prospects throughout the farm and orchard districts of the Spokane country, are responsible for the feeling of optimism.

In making a loan of $200,000 on the new Welch building, bringing its total loans in Spokane to more than $2,000,000, William D. VanDyke, vice-president of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company of Milwaukee, said his company stands willing to place much more money on local property that meets security requirements. "We haven't a dollar of delinquent interest on our Spokane investments," said Mr. VanDyke, "and in fourteen years of lending money on property in this city we never have had a foreclosure. From a real estate mortgage view-point the situation here could not be stronger. The enormous amount of construction work being done in and about Spokane by railroad companies is one of the guaranties of stability that instantly impresses the visitor. The vast tributary farming country is another, and you have the Cour d'Alene mines and lumber industry in addition to that.

"It would be difficult to define anything of importance this country lacks in earning capacity, and our own experience has borne out every estimate we have made of it. Notwithstanding the depression in various parts of the country there has been no hesitancy in advancing loan money on Spokane security, where conditions upon which we operate are met."

After a fight of two years before the board of equalization and the superior and supreme courts for a reduction of taxes against its property for the year 1910, the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company was rendered a favorable decision by Judge W. A. Huneke, before whom the case was retried by order of the supreme court. In the suit, which was against Spokane county and former County Treasurer Zack Stewart, the plaintiff company won out in its contention that $4,995.94 is the proper amount of taxes on its property for the year in question, instead of nearly twice that much which the county agent sought to collect. For the year 1910 the county assessed the trust company, after deducting the proportionate value of its real estate holdings, on a basis of $804,450. In its complaint the company held that the assessment should have been made on a basis of only $409,503, ,and on a rate of 37.42 per cent, as had been done with other property within the county, while the county, it is declared, had actually fixed the levy at a 60 per cent rate.

EDMONTON NEWS

Substantial progress in all lines of business in Edmonton is reflected in the reports issued for March. Clearings for 24 banking days amounted to $16,360,216. Permits for $746,675 worth of buildings were issued, making a total of $1,238,978 for the first quarter, or $2,674,442 since the beginning of the fiscal year, November 1st. The increase for the first three months this year over the same period in 1912 is $43,000. Stamp sales at the post-office amounted to $14,680, an increase of $3,430 over March, 1912, while the value of money orders issued was $122,155 as against $73,422 the corresponding month last year. Money orders paid totaled $97,778, as compared with $72,227 a year ago. Customhouse receipts were $156,097, as against $117,771. The total for the fiscal year ended March 31 was $1,677,114, an increase of 100 per cent over the previous year. Three hundred and twenty-five homestead entries were granted and 157 applications were recommended. These figures show a small decrease over March, 1912, due to the fact that the federal government has since opened land offices in the north country and that many of the newcomers are purchasing lands instead of taking up homesteads.

Wholesale and retail houses show increases of from 15 to 25 per cent over March, 1912. Merchants report that collections are larger, owing to the bright prospects for big crops. The influx of homeseekers from the British Isles and Europe, eastern Canada and the central states is larger than a year ago, the settlers being of the better class. Indications are that the rush this spring will be the largest in the history of western Canada. Most of the newcomers expect to engage in farming in central and northern Alberta and other parts of the Edmonton district.

Police operatives working on a forgery case in Edmonton show that Henry Zellinsky, who was committed for trial several weeks ago, had plans for an extensive campaign. Thirteen checks, aggregating $1,600, drawn on the Imperial Bank and bearing the signature of P. Anderson, president of P. Anderson and Company, in whose employ he was, were found in the mattress of his bed. The police also found a large number of blank checks on various banks, and a large amount of bank stationary.

J. L. Cornwall, manager of the Great West Permanent Loan Company of Edmonton, was probably seriously injured in falling on the pavement the afternoon of March 30th. He had alighted from a street car when he turned his ankle, falling heavily and dislocating his shoulder.

C. Fergre, president of the Pacific Pass Coal Company, announced in Edmonton a few days ago that the company is developing its mines in the Brazeau branch of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway to ship 3,000 tons a day. The mine has been shipping for some time.

The Security National is to be a new bank at Mason City. Capitalists connected with the Mason City Loan and Trust Company are back of the institution, which is to be capitalized at $100,000. It is stated that the bank will be started July 1st. A permanent home is being contemplated and the institution will be of importance in financial affairs of northern Iowa.

Secretary P. W. Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association has been actively interested in the arrest of many forgers and bank swindlers since he first assumed his office, but none has resulted so much to his credit as the capture in Oklahoma of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Dunbar, alias Langford, alias Boyd. This pair have been sought in at least twenty states and fully 100 cities. They were traced by Mr. Hall through Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Allegheny, Pa., Philadelphia, New York, Cooperstown, Boston, Portland, Me., thence back through the South and West until they met their fate at Oklahoma City. Behind them they left a string of bogus checks drawn on the Iowa National of Des Moines. It was while trying to cash a check for $2,200 on the Des Moines bank at Oklahoma City that the couple got in bad. This naturally aroused suspicion. Telegrams were sent to Des Moines. Although they had assumed a different name, Miss Edginton, Mr. Hall's assistant, got a "hunch" that this was the couple the Iowa Bankers Association had been seeking. Accordingly consultations were held, telegrams sent and the arrest was made. Before they were captured the American Bankers Association had taken a hand and the Burns Detective Agency was on the scent. Charges filed at Cooperstown, Pa., have the right of way, Mr. Hall believes, and the couple have been taken East. This couple went by the name of Boyd in Des Moines. They secured only $85 in cash and a $75 dress suit in Des Moines. Des Moines detectives started to arrest them in a rooming house but Boyd and his wife escaped through an upstairs window by means of a rope. They left some of their clothing in their haste to get away. One of the nervy bits of work done by Boyd was at Portland, Me. When he was released from the penitentiary in Maine, after doing two years, he was furnished $20 by a Mrs. Straw, president of the Prison Relief Commission, who wanted him to get a new start in life. A year later, under the guise of thanking her, Boyd called upon the woman, gave her a bogus check for the $20 she had advanced and got her to endorse another bogus check for $75. He also secured indorsements from her husband. Secretary Hall has reports showing similar pranks all through the East.

Group Six Meets

By the time this is in print the meeting of Group Six at Des Moines will be a thing of the past. The program is of exceptional interest. Heretofore the group has met only in the evening, but this time a program was arranged for the afternoon as well. The registration was at Elks Hall beginning at 11 o'clock in the morning. At the 3 o'clock meeting, providing the schedule is followed, A. E. Hindorff of Newton called the Group to order. The program included the following: Address, "Conditions in the Live Stock Industry," John Fletcher, vice-president Drovers Deposit National, Chicago; "Co-operation in Bank and Mercantile Credits," R. S. White, credit manager American Steel and Wire Co., Chicago; "Iowa's Assets," Herbert M. Harwood, secretary of Associated Advertising Clubs of Iowa; reports of committees. The banquet was held at the Savery Hotel at 6 o'clock. J. A. S. Pollard, cashier of the Fort Madison Savings, was on the program to deliver the same address as that given by him at the Group meeting at Keokuk some weeks ago.

Slight Tax Increase

A slight increase in the taxes derived from the capital stock surplus and undivided profits of the Des Moines banks has been arranged by the city assessor. The total taxes will be approximately $73,853.98, excluding real estate. Assessments are made on the basis of $4,149,100.

Banker's Mother in Flood District

A. C. Miller, president of the Des Moines Trust Company and for years with the Home Savings, Des Moines, was greatly worried because of the flood at Peru, Ind., where his mother resides. A brother of the Des Moines banker, unable to get word from his mother, finally went to Peru. It was found that Mrs. Miller had escaped through a second story window when her house was flooded and found refuge in the Smith home, one of the few spots remaining above water.

Des Moines Visitors

Among the many Iowa bankers in Des Moines recently, exclusive of those attending the meeting of Group Six, were observed the following: President S. H. Blacknell, Afton Savings; Cashier F. Stickmost, Bank of Peterson; Cashier A. J. Steckel, Exchange at Bloomfield; Cashier C. J. Irish, Laurel Savings; President G. A. Lee, First National, Greenfield; Cashier J. H. Roberts, Farmers at Boxholm; Cashier Frank Van Erdewyck, Breda Savings; Cashier L. F. Parker, First National of Newton; President J. M. Norrborn, American Savings, Sioux City; Cashier G. W. Evans, Commercial Savings, Lohrville; President G. H. Thorley, Farmers and Merchants, Springvine, Neb.; Cashier M. F. Palmer, First National, Dexter; Cashier A.

Lonergan, Farmers Savings, Bancroft; Assistant Cashier E. H. Talbott; First National, Brooklyn; Cashier F. B. Kingdon, Monroe National; Cashier U. W. Walton, City National, Paton; Cashier A. C. Cyclone Unearths Certificate of Deposit

One of the curious freaks of the Omaha cyclone was the discovery near Pomeroy, Iowa, of a certificate of deposit for $10 on the Omaha Postal Savings Bank. Apparently the wind had carried the paper 150 miles. The certificate was dated March 10th and the depositor's name was S. L. Bush.

Iowa Program

Secretary Hall is finding it an easy task to make up the program for the state convention this year. This is because there is considerable pulling and hauling on the part of the Des Moines entertainment committee on one hand and the council of administration of the I. B. A. on the other. The Des Moines bankers had arranged to have the visiting bankers for guests at a base ball game between Denver and Des Moines the afternoon of the first day of the convention. The council of administration voted that the convention is to go to Ames that afternoon, at the expense of each delegate, to hear W. C Brown, president of the New York Central, and get an insight into the great agricultural college which Iowa maintains. The Des Moines entertainment committee thereupon began to send out postal cards to each member of the association asking him to reply whether he will be the guest of the Des Moines bankers at the ball game or whether he will go to Ames. The replies are coming back to H. T. Blackburn of the Iowa National, who avers that thus far two-thirds of the bankers seem to prefer the ball game. In either case it appears that there will be no afternoon program the first day, so that Mr. Hall has only to secure speakers for two forenoon sessions. It is not known as yet whether Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo will be here but James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern Railroad, has been forced to decline an invitation to take part in the program.

Iowa Notes

Des Moines, through the Greater Des Moines committee, is urging the bankers of Iowa to impress upon the farmers the importance of growing alfalfa in Iowa. Experts say that Iowa could vastly increase its wealth by adding alfalfa to its staple crops. The Greater Des Moines committee is seeking to work through the financiers in getting this crop started in the belief that once started farmers never will abandon it.

Interesting answers are being received to queries sent out by H. F. Patterson, superintendent of the South Dakota Better Farming Association, to farmers in various parts of that state asking about interest rates. The first question asks the current rate on long time loans on good real estate security, not including school money. The answers range from 6 per cent in the old counties to 12 in the new, the average being 8. The second question relates to rates on short time loans on collateral security. The answer shows the rate runs from 8 to 12 with an average of 10 per cent. The third question takes up loan agents' commission. This is stated to be an average of 1¾ per cent. The average time for which loans are made is shown to be five years. The average loan on a quarter section is $2,000 and the average value per acre in seventeen counties is $40. Banks and loan companies are listed as doing most of the loaning on farm property.

A bankers' baseball league has been formed at Davenport. There will be four teams and a schedule is planned. The Scott County Savings, the Iowa National and the German Savings each have a team of their own. The other team will be composed of players from the First National, Davenport Savings, Citizens Trust and Savings and Farmers and Mechanics.

E. J. Birchard, vice-president, and F. V. Morgan, cashier, both of the new Kellogg Savings, were in Des Moines on business. A. B. Craven is president of the new institution, which now is doing business with a capital stock of $25,000.

The Mahaska County Bank at Oskaloosa was a heavy loser in a fire in the business section of that city last week. The bank had stored its new fixtures in one of the structures which was destroyed by fire.

Roy Walters has been elected cashier of the Anamosa National at Anamosa.

The Bank of Brayton has changed its name to the Brayton Savings.

Grant McPherrin, president of the Drake Park Bank, has taken up his duties as cashier of the Central State, Des Moines.

The Stockmens Bank is the name of a new bank at Honey Creek, Iowa. Thomas L. Davis is president and Stella C. Davis, cashier.

South Dakota Notes

The state tax commission of South Dakota is planning to take some important steps in the direction of improving tax doings. The commission will make a special effort to get a correct listing of moneys and credits for taxation. It is believed that moneys and credits never have paid their proportionate share of taxation. H. C. Preston, member of the commission, in a recent address stated that he believed less than 5 per cent of the true value of moneys and credits was listed for taxation in 1912. The total that year was given at $1,719,882. Instead of this amount there should be fully $10,000,000, he says.

F. J. Welch has purchased the holdings of J. W. Bryant in the Ethian State at Ethian, and will succeed Mr. Bryant as cashier.

W. J. Frad has taken over the First State at Zell.

TENNESSEE MERGER

Union Bank and Trust Company, of Jackson, Tenn., has transferred to the Security National its entire commercial banking department, including the commercial deposits, savings deposits and certificates of deposit. The Union Bank and Trust will retire from the commercial field and will enter a trust company business, with enlarged capital and surplus. With this acquisition the Security becomes one of the largest banks in the city.

NEW TOLEDO TRUST COMPANY

Commerce Trust Company, organized in Toledo, Ohio, by interests connected with the National Bank of Commerce, recently began business in that city with a capitalization of 200,000. S. D. Carr is president.

THE ONE HINGE WITHOUT A FAULT

OUR Invisible Hinge is the only Hinge that has the same strength, the same thickness, the same writing and erasing qualities as the rest of the sheet.

The ordinary hinge is produced by reducing the thickness of the paper near the binding edge. This naturally weakens the paper. And this weakness comes at the point of greatest strain—near the binding edge.

Brown's Linen Ledger Paper can be obtained with or without our flexible Invisible Hinge. It is universally accepted as the best ledger paper. It is Uncle Sam's standard. It never deteriorates with age and its great strength makes it ideal for loose leaf ledgers.

ASSOCIATION OF RESERVE CITY BANKERS TO MEET

The first annual convention of the Association of Reserve City Bankers will be held in St. Louis, April 19th. Headquarters and convention hall will be at the Planters Hotel. A program replete with interesting and instructive features has been prepared for the occasion and it is greatly hoped that all of the reserve cities of the country will be represented at this important gathering. First session will occur at ten o'clock.

The address of welcome will be delivered by R. S. Hawes, vice-president of the Third National of St. Louis, and will be followed by the annual address of President G. H. Mueller, vice-president of the Fletcher-American National of Indianapolis. Reports then will be heard from the secretary and the treasurer of the organization, after which consideration will be given to proposed change in the constitution and by-laws.

Following an address by E. E. Gates, counsel for the association, on "The Personal Equation of a Banker in Business as Viewed by a Lawyer," will be the presentation of recommendations for the consideration of clearing-house arrangements in reserve city banks for the handling of country items, submitted by a committee consisting of C. R. McKay, manager of the transit department, First National of Chicago; Charles H. Marston, auditor National Shawmut Bank, Boston; J. S. McHenry, vice-president Fourth and First National, Nashville, Tenn.; J. W. Staley, vice-president First National, Detroit; R. S. Hawes, vice-president, Third National, St. Louis and George S. Moore, assistant cashier, New England National, Kansas City.

Afternoon session will commence at two and talks will be delivered by William A. Law, vice-president First National, Philadelphia, on the transit man's problem; F. A. Crandall, vice-president National City, Chicago, will speak of the loss occasioned by items in transit and L. F. Kiesewetter, vice-president and cashier Ohio National, Columbus, will describe some of the features of making loans by reserve city banks to country correspondents. George B. Harrison, vice-president of the New England National of Kansas City, is down on the program for a talk on "The Efficacy of Clearing House Collecting of Transit Items," and A. O. Wilson, vice-president of the State National of St. Louis, will tell of the benefits accruing from membership in the Association of Reserve City Bankers.

At seven o'clock a banquet will be held at which W. T. Abbott, vice-president of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, will be the speaker and R. S. Hawes will act in the capacity of announcer. The entertainment features are described as "Particularly interesting, decidedly novel."

The CHICAGO BANKER

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking and Financial Interests of the Middle West

APRIL 19, 1913 — Entered as Second-Class Matter January 15, 1903, at the Post Office at Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879 — 10 CENTS A COPY

NORTHWEST STATE BANK CAPITAL

A proposal to increase the capital stock of the Northwest State of Chicago from $200,000 to $300,000 has been approved by the board of directors. A meeting of stockholders has been called for May 16th to vote on the matter. The new stock, if approved, will be offered at par to the old stockholders and will be issued July 1st.

President Joseph R. Noel announces that the bank has declined an offer of $100,000 for the ground on which its building stands. Both the ground and building are carried on the books of the bank at a valuation of $70,000.

Deposits of the Northwest State now are about $1,660,000 and undivided profits $48,650.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS IN FINE FETTLE

Word comes from Pasadena that President George M. Reynolds is in fine health and spirits and, as always, anxious and ready to get back on the job. He will leave Pasadena April 30th for Chicago. Arthur Reynolds of Des Moines, who spent the winter in California, left there April 15th and is now at Des Moines. If the currency commission is called George M. Reynolds will go to the Briarcliff meeting. Otherwise not.

CHICAGO'S VISITORS

Among the out-of-town bankers seen in the financial district this week were William C. White, president of the Illinois National, Peoria, Ill.; Clay H. Hollister, vice-president, Old National, Grand Rapids, Mich.; George W. Boyden, vice-president, Farmers State, Sheffield, Ill.; Maurice H. Grape, vice-president and assistant treasurer, Continental Trust, Baltimore; Francis L. Hine, president First National, New York.

H. M. Merriam, cashier of the Illinois National, Springfield; Frank R. Wilson, cashier of the Old State National, Evansville, Ind.; Earl S. Givin, president Second National, New Albany, Ind., ex-president of the Indiana Bankers Association; M. P. Resch, cashier Benton Harbor (Mich.) State Bank.

F. A. Bach, cashier of the Lee (Ill.) State Bank, spent Friday in Chicago. The Lee State carries a line of deposits in excess of $200,000 and is located on the line between Lee and De Kalb counties in a thriving agricultural region.

DUNLAP NAMED FOR SUBTREASURY CHIEF

Milliard Fillmore Dunlap, president of the Ayers National and of Dunlap, Russel & Co., Jacksonville, Ill., has been nominated by Secretary of State Byran for appointment as subtreasurer at Chicago. It is understood he has the indorsement also of Senator Lewis. His appointment is expected.

HENRY M. CARPENTER BACK

President Henry M. Carpenter of the Monticello (Iowa) State, has returned with his family from Panama. He thinks the nation spent its money well in this great enterprise. Mr. Carpenter is a member of the A. B. A. executive council and will be on the Briarcliff Special along with ten or twelve other Iowans.

Tennessee Association Officials

J. N. FISHER, President
MORRISTOWN

F. M. MAYFIELD, Secretary
NASHVILLE

MR. FISHER is president of the City National of Morristown, and the past year has served as chief executive of the Tennessee bankers. During his adminstration a great deal of effective work has been accomplished, not the least of which may be said to be the enactment of a new banking law for the state, which was due largely to the organized effort in that direction made by the state bankers association.

Mr. Mayfield, the popular secretary of the Tennessee bankers, has conducted his office in such an efficient and intelligent manner as to win the universal approval of the membership. During his incumbency rapid strides have been made along progressive lines with a persistent effort to place the association on a basis of the greatest possible benefit to its members.

PUBLIC TRUST AND SAVINGS

The Public Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, which is being organized with a paid-in capital of $300,000 and a surplus of $60,000, will occupy the corner store in the Hearst Building, at Madison and Market streets. The temporary offices of the bank are 1314 Corn Exchange Bank Building.

FOREIGNERS ADMIRE U. S. PAPER MONEY

American paper money is so superior to that of most other countries that Germany, Greece and Brazil are reported to have lately considered or resolved upon the adoption of our methods in producing such money. China, under the new régime, is, it is said, actually having its notes printed in this country.

SAMUEL H. LOCKIN FOR TREASURER

What promised to be a warm contest at the Duluth convention for the treasurership of the Minnesota Bankers Association resulted in a "peace agreement." The present treasurer, A. C. Wedge of Bemidji, will not stand for re-election but has come out for Samuel H. Lockin of Red Wing, which assures Lockin's selection. Mr. Lockin is popular and deserving and in all respects an ideal candidate.

ARKANSAS CONVENTION

The executive council and members of the Little Rock Clearing House Association are sending out invitations for the twenty-third annual convention of the Arkansas Bankers Association to be held in Convention Hall, Hotel Marion, Little Rock, April 23d and 24th.

KENTUCKIAN NAMED BANK EXAMINER

Joseph P. Kennedy of Burnside, Ky., has been appointed a national bank examiner.

William F. Boomslitter is under arrest on a charge of forging checks on Milwaukee banks and passing them on merchants and saloon keepers in the city.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

OUR good friends, the secretaries of the state associations, will be alarmed to know that a large packet of the official correspondence of the Secretaries Section was washed away by the recent floods as Secretary-Treasurer W. B. Harrison was "beating it" across Ohio.

HE was en route to New York to confer with Col. Farnsworth as to the coming Boston program for the annual conference.

LUCKILY the bundle was fished out of the Mississippi at New Orleans and promptly identified by Sol. Wexler, who forwarded it to THE CHICAGO BANKER.

MR. WEXLER thought the "stuff" too good to be lost. First there was a much-corrected copy of a form letter sent out by Harrison, reminding his brother secretaries to pay up their dues. Other letters were replies from the able secretaries.

HARRISON, after requesting a remittance, facetiously notes that there barely is enough in the treasury to pay the president's salary, and then there is a paragraph or two on the Boston program.

"WE solicit suggestions regarding the program for the Boston meeting. The following addresses are under consideration: Secretary Bowman, Kansas, 'The Suffragette Movement'; Secretary Henry, New York, 'Barbarians Beyond Buffalo'; Secretary Colburn, California, 'Chinatown'; Secretary McFadden, Georgia, 'The Panama Canal and the Darkey.'"

"SECRETARY BROWN, Michigan, 'A General Review of the Currency Systems of all European and Asiatic Countries, together with a History of each, and the Underlying Causes of the Idiosyncrasies Developed in Practical Application of the Individual Propositions Promulgated by Personal Peculiarities of the Peoples Pertaining thereto.'"

"NO one has yet been selected to talk on the 'Non-existence of Matter or the origin of the Cosmos,' these subjects being specifically reserved for Boston and vicinity. As stated above, your suggestions will be appreciated."

SECRETARY BROWN'S topic looks like a "lift" from the recent Chicago conference program and the estimable lady secretary therefore would be immune.

MCLANE TITON wrote, "I am particularly interested in the encyclopædic and ubiquitous report to be brought in by Mrs. Brown."

HAYNES McFADDEN wants light on his subject, not being clear whether "the darkies are to be deported to the Zone or to be regarded as alien craft and forced to pay toll."

A FILE note on the McFadden letter indicates that Harrison thinks they should be "assigned to dredge the bottom of the canal after the water has been turned in."

HASCALL S. HALL is a little puzzled to know the kind of a calendar they use in Oklahoma, since he received the cunning letter according to the Maine almanac "the day before it was written at Enid."

MR. HALL regrets that "Mr." Brown is to speak on a topic he had selected for himself.

THEY have a question up in Mr. Hall's home town—"Who will 'water' Waterville when the Webb bill wrings it dry?"—that he would like to have assigned to Mayfield, who lives in an "experienced" state.

THE Maine secretary advises all who will assemble at the "Costly-Plaza hotel to bring their Browning and Emerson along, and to post up on witchcraft, the Pilgrims and the Puritans, but be sure to come."

ONE facetious secretary suggested topics for Hughes of Nebraska and Platt of South Dakota almost in a class with Mrs. Brown's famous assignment.

S. B. RANKIN dictated his reply to his stenographer in an adjoining tree top. He will be "delighted to hear Neighbor Brown on her interesting topic."

J. E. SHEPARD of Utah proposes a metaphysical question for "Fred" Hoopes on the program and predicts "all the secretaries will be there to hear it."

NOTE in lead pencil on J. E. Platt's letter, "draft not enclosed." Platt proposes this question for general discussion:

"THE Proper Mixture for Better Results in Secretarial Work, Including the Psychological moment for Letting in the Clutch," he thinks "Dean" Keyser could handle.

HOOPES is "amazed that such a small man (as Harrison) should have so many titles," and makes a few suggestions.

THE famous Texas secretary wants Bowman to "wear a lavender Mother Hubbard when he unloads his Suffragette talk." He prescribes "long side whiskers" for Henry when he talks on the "Barbarians beyond Buffalo."

COLBURN, he would have "transfer his beautiful chin whiskers to the back of his head where there is so much room" to give a cue-like effect.

MOST of the foregoing will be enjoyed by the secretaries, at times serious folk, and by their friends, the association bankers.

BY wireless we learn that John Burianek is nearing Cedar Rapids on his globe girdling tour with several new Paris costumes in his Indestructo trunk. He should be on the Des Moines program in a travel-talk.

H. G. MOORE of Wellman is in the running for the treasurership for the Iowa association. "Papa" Heintsheimer is to have a no-contest run for the presidency. J. H. Ingwersen pulled out in his favor, which ought to be remembered at the proper time.

SECRETARY P. W. HALL reports 55 new Iowa banks in the fold. There are a few more to go, being in all 1,760 banks in the state.

DES MOINES has four new bank buildings to show the visitors.

IT'S a funny thing how a man, even so good a man as George F. Orde, can spend a month playing golf at Pinehurst and yet give out upon his return home, not the score, but a financial and money market interview. We shall have to see S. H. Burnham for the real story.

WHAT'S in a name? The new assistant cashier in the First National at Omaha is Myles Standish and a new private bank in Iowa has been started by a man named Sinke.

EVANSVILLE, IND., banks are sending out hurry-up calls to get business headed that way again. The principal flood losses at Evansville were on account of the cutting off of rail connections with the rest of the world.

BOSTON CLEARING HOUSE has a copy of the report of the "Bank Corporations" for Massachusetts, rendered January, 1813. There were but eighteen in the state. Capital was but $8,285,500, with deposits a half million less.

SEVEN of the eighteen paid dividends. Five had undivided profits on hand to the total of $10,353. Those were the small days of banking in the Bay state.

NOW the Boston banks alone have capital of $44,000,000 and deposits of over a half billion. Consolidation will cut down the clearings as it has in Chicago, relatively.

THE Boston mergers, the past year, show the Fourth National merged with the Atlantic National under the title of Fourth-Atlantic National; the State National consolidated with the Merchants National, and the absorption of the Eliot National by the National Shawmut. The present capital of member banks is $27,600,000; surplus, $33,325,338; deposits, $256,254,957. The deposits reached the highest point in 1912 on February 3d, when they were $294,214,317; and were lowest on December 28th, at $250,013,720.

ONE ought to know better than to believe any unfavorable thing one reads in the daily papers about banks or bankers Note the following two paragraphs from James P. Hackett, cashier of the McLean County Bank at Bloomington.

"UPON reading your last issue I noticed Mr. Aisthorpe's article regarding the unjust advertising which the city of Cairo received through the Chicago papers. I would like to say one word also in defense of the McLean County bankers

"I NOTE in this issue you state that the 'Banker's Love Letters,' which appeared in recent issues of Chicago papers, did not give any credit to the banking profession and bankers of McLean county I would like to know through what source the Chicago papers received the information that the gentleman referred to, as writing these letters, was in any way connected with a bank. We wish to state positively that he is not and that the banking profession so far as McLean county is concerned is still maintaining its clean record and high standing."

VERY likely the amorous citizen of old McLean passed himself off upon the susceptible (?) widow as a banker. Our thanks to Mr. Hackett for his prompt defense of his county and of the profession.

THE demand of the Waage bank investigating committee that Chicago bankers make public the names of certain of their depositors is expected to bring about a stubborn conflict between the senators and financiers.

YOU may expect all kinds of retaliatory investigations of incorporated banking until the pro-supervisionists either pass a bill or drop the reform.

THINK of a committee in large part made up of saloon keepers, or habitues of such places, putting on a professed serious air in such a farcical proceeding.

SECRETARY HUGHES of Nebraska is warning against the bogus purchaser of real estate, particularly farms, where the swindler pays in checks on distant banks and collects his commission in cash. He calls upon bankers to guard the farmer.

IF the time comes, if ever it does, when bank supervision gets before the Illinois legislature on its merits you can look out for squalls and for jokers.

BANK regulation in Ohio is in the same mire as it is in Illinois and the present legislature is struggling with the question at Columbus, with the governor and his attorney-general actively on the side of regulated banking.

THE new Ohio constitution puts all banking under supervision but the retiring attorney-general decided there should be additional enabling legislation. The constitution went by the board just as the Hurd statute was nullified in Illinois.

THE Hurd law positively forbids the use of a corporate title by an individual or firm, yet we have "trust" companies and "National" and "International" banks in plenty which are not incorporated.

WELL, over in Ohio the individual bankers are a political power and on Wednesday came within a minute of passing a joker supervision bill.

THE joker was making supervision apply to private banks "hereafter established." This not only exempted the going banks but made private banking a monopoly.

THE Ohio governor is behind the Zmunt bill and the private bankers lobby is behind the Kennedy bill. The former has passed the senate and the latter has passed the house, so the issue is in doubt yet.

THE joker bill as introduced by Representative R. L. Kennedy, a lawyer and banker of Allen county, instead of carrying out the intention of the constitutional amendment, allows private banks to continue to handle the people's money without restriction. It protects the bankers, but not the depositors.

KENNEDY succeeded in sliding the bill through the house. In the senate it was referred to the committee on banks, along with a bill by Senator Zmunt of Cuyahoga county properly devised for the same purpose.

THE committee reported the Zmunt bill without recommendation, the Kennedy bill with a recommendation for passage. The bankers, in their eagerness to kill the Zmunt bill and pass the Kennedy bill, overreached themselves and showed their hand.

THEY tried to have both bills taken up out of their regular order and put on passage immediately, with the purpose of killing the Zmunt bill and passing the Kennedy bill. Nineteen senators voted for the motion, it lacking only three votes of carrying, a two-thirds vote being necessary.

SO far as the Kennedy bill is concerned it applies primarily only to persons who HEREAFTER may engage in private banking, whereas it is doubtful if any new private banks will be started.

IT provides that the state banking superintendent may examine any officers or agents of the bank under oath, but is silent on power to examine the owners or persons interested.

IT allows the superintendent to take possession of the bank only when it's insolvent or being mishandled, and when "the owners are unable to make good the assets of said bank," something which he is not empowered to ascertain.

IT requires reports only once a year, although quarterly reports are essential to good banking.

IT fails to give the superintendent adequate power to liquidate the affairs of an insolvent private bank, does not require such banks to maintain a reserve and limit loans, lacks regulation, and is full of "jokers."

THIS and a whole lot more went on at Columbus and will go on at Springfield as soon as supervisory legislation is introduced.

IT will not be done by or with sanction of the committee appointed by President John D. Phillips to look after legislation. It will be shot out of the "Blue Sky," as it was in Ohio.

THESE paragraphs are intended to be informative to those concerned. Legislators already are being bombarded with pro-private banking literature and it may be the entertainment will start soon.

THE rebels in Ohio have introduced bills taking the power to close insolvent banks from the banking commissioner and investing it in the courts, just as they are looking for "lost deposits" in Illinois.

ANOTHER Ohio rebel bill provides for the "recall" of bank officers and directors by the stockholders at any time.

AT last reports the promise was for an entirely new supervisory bill which the new constitution of Ohio makes mandatory.

Prof. William A. Scott on Banking Reform

Eminent authority from the University of Wisconsin points out to the Louisiana bankers some of the glaring defects of our antiquated currency system. Emphasizes necessity for remedial legislation

The advocate of reform is in duty bound to show cause for action. The presumption is always in favor of the status quo. I must therefore begin my address with an account of the defects in our present banking and currency system.

One of these is our independent treasury system. Nearly three quarters of a century ago, the government of the United States decided to transact its financial affairs without the use of the banking institutions of the country. It was impelled to this action by the loss and inconvenience which it had suffered in consequence of the failure of many of its depository banks in the crisis of 1837, and the suspension of specie payments by all.

The chief defect of our independent treasury system at the present time is the fact that it places the money market under the direct influence of the secretary of the treasury. He has complete freedom at practically every point in the administration of this system. It is he who decides whether or not funds accumulated in government vaults shall be deposited in national banks. It is he who decides which ones of the national banks of the country shall serve as public depositories. It is he who decides in which ones of these depository banks he will place the funds which he decides to take out of the treasury, and how much he will give to each one. It is he who decides when funds already on deposit with the banks shall be removed and returned to the treasury, and how much shall be taken from this institution and how much from that.

The result of all of this is that the banks are obliged to speculate in regard to the action of the secretary of the treasury in the administration of the independent treasury system. That is to say, they must make the best guess they can as to what he is likely to do, and if they guess wrong, harm is certain to result. If, for example, they conclude, as a result of their best judgment, that he is likely to increase his deposits with them and act accordingly, i. e., increase their loans in the expectation that their reserves are to be increased from this source, and the secretary fails to do as they expected he would, they find themselves in an overloaded and over-expanded condition. On the other hand, if they conclude that he is likely to withdraw from them funds already on deposit and act accordingly, that is, cut down their loans in the expectation that their reserves are to be depleted, and the secretary fails to act in accordance with their prognostications, then they have interfered unnecessarily with the industry of their customers—unnecessarily disturbed industrial conditions.

To make a long story short, here is an institution which came into existence nearly three quarters of a century ago, and as a result of circumstances which could not possible occur again in our history, an institution which from the beginning has been a disturbing influence to the commerce and industry of the country, and we still have the institution with us. Must we keep it always?

A second defect in our currency system is bond-secured national bank notes. We owe these notes to the financial exigencies in which the Washington government found itself soon after the outbreak of the war between the states. Additional revenues had to be provided and that suddenly. It had tried the expedient of inconvertible notes and their rapid depreciation suggested the necessity of some other revenue device. It was not possible apparently at once largely to increase revenues by means of taxation. There was no market for government bonds, because the very existence of the government itself was threatened. On the suggestion of the secretary of the treasury, therefore, the device of forcing the banks of the country to purchase government bonds as a condition of issuing notes was adopted, and our national bank system was the result.

Ever since that time we have had a currency which has been absolutely unresponsive to the varying currency needs of the country. It consists of four main elements, one of gold, one of silver, one made up of the legal tender notes which were issued in the early part of the war, and one of national bank notes. The gold element of our currency fluctuates constantly in volume. It increases with the output of our gold mines, and when our imports of gold exceed our exports. It decreases when the output of our gold mines declines, and when our exports of gold exceed our imports. There is not the slightest connection, however, between these fluctuations in the volume of the gold elements of our currency and the fluctuations in our currency needs.

Taking our currency as a whole, therefore, consisting as it does of two elements which constantly fluctuate in volume, but from independent causes, and of two which are stationary, as a whole it completely fails to adjust itself to our varying currency needs. In fact in its fluctuations it is just as apt to aggravate as it is to alleviate those needs. We are just as apt to have the maximum volume of our currency at the time of minimum need, and the minimum volume at the time of maximum need, as we are to have the maximum need correspond with the maximum volume, and vice versa.

The consequences of this failure of our currency to adjust itself to our needs is that with great regularity during the seasons of greatest demand, notably in the fall of the year, the volume of our currency is inadequate to meet our needs. The result is that the persons whose business it is to finance the moving of our crops are unable to command the resources necessary for that purpose. A depression of prices follows, accompanied by enormous losses on the part of those who are obliged to bring their crops to market at that particular season of the year.

In the seasons of minimum need we have more currency than is required. It finds its way into local banks through the process of deposit. Finding no use there, it is transferred to the reserve centers and by them to the only market in the country where funds can be loaned at call, i. e., to the stock exchange of New York City. The necessary effect, therefore, of a currency like ours, which fails to adjust itself to our varying currency needs, is the retardation of the legitimate industry of the country during the period of maximum demand, with resulting great losses to the producers of the country, and during the seasons of minimum demand the stimulation of that industry, which we would all agree least deserves and needs stimulation, namely, speculation on the New York stock exchange.

A third serious defect in our currency system is our present method of administering bank reserves. We have in this country in the neighborhood of twenty-five thousand bank institutions, each one of which is obliged by the conditions under which it operates, as well as by law, to keep locked up in its vaults an amount of currency varying from six to twenty-five per cent of its deposits. In the aggregate the amount of currency all the while under lock and key in the vaults of our banking institutions is in the neighborhood of a billion and a half of dollars. This enormous sum is absolutely removed from any possible use of the agriculture and industry and commerce of the country. Our banking laws provide that when the reserve of a banks falls to the minimum prescribed, it must immediately stop discounting, which means that it cannot loan a dollar to any person, no matter how great his need, how important the industry he may represent, or how good the security he may be able to offer.

This enormous sum of money is not even available for use in times of stress. In fact it can be used only after banks have gone into the hands of receivers and the process of financial liquidation has begun.

This system of administering our bank reserves chiefly is responsible for the bank panics, or financial panics as they sometimes are called, which so frequently afflict this country. This and every other great commercial country is subject from time to time to commercial disasters caused by the failure of commercial or banking institutions or both. When such failures occur, banks and business concerns commercially connected with the failed concerns necessarily are embarrassed. In this country under such conditions a bank panic is likely to result. It is certain to result if the disturbance is of considerable magnitude, for the reason that the amount of reserves held by the banks immediately affected are inadequate to meet their demands, and there is no means provided under our system by which they can increase their cash resources by the sale or discount of their portfolios. The result is that when such an event occurs the banks in the affected region speedily call in their balances from their reserve agents, collect loans from this customers as fast as they fall due, and throw upon the stock market such bonds as they may possess and as are salable. Banks in their vicinity, instead of coming to their assistance, fearing that the pressure will come upon them, hoard their reserves, call in their balances, and cut down their loans to customers. This transmits the pressure in a greatly aggrevated form to the reserve cities, the banks of which are obliged to adopt the same practices, and these centers in turn transmit the pressure to the central reserve cities. Thus the banks of the whole country are thrown into a panic, the result of which is failure of thousands of perfectly sound business concerns and frequently the temporary closing of the doors of perfectly sound banks and the general suspension of specie payments throughout the country.

IN offering our service to banks and bankers, we place their advantage first. This principle is the foundation of the growth and success of this bank.

Another feature of our reserve system is worthy of consideration in this connection. In addition to the six per cent of its deposits which every country bank is obliged to keep locked up in actual cash in its vaults, it must keep there nine per cent more in actual cash or it is permitted to keep this amount on deposit with its reserve agents in the so-called reserve cities. Likewise the banks in the reserve cities, in addition to the 12½ per cent of their deposits, which they must keep under lock and key in actual cash in their vaults, must keep 12½ per cent more there, or may keep that on deposit in banks in the central reserve cities. The general practice of banks is to keep this portion of their reserves on deposit elsewhere because they get a small rate of interest upon it in that case, whereas if they kept it locked upon their vaults, they would get nothing from it at all.

Another defect of our system consists in the constant confusion of commercial with investment banking. Both of these forms of banking are not only legitimate but absolutely necessary in a great commercial nation like ours. The function of commercial banks is to furnish the greater part of the country's medium of exchange and to distribute and administer that portion which is derived from other sources. The function of investment banks, on the other hand, is to serve as an intermediary between those who have capital to invest and those who wish to employ it in industrial enterprises of a permanent character. Obviously the funds which are available for the use of investment banks are the savings of the community and the capital which comes to us for permanent investment from foreign sources.

Very few bankers in this country realize the distinction between these forms of banking, and most of them carry on both, sometimes without being conscious of it. The ordinary bank arranges with its customers for a certain line of loans, and so long as the customer keeps within the line established does not inquire carefully into the purpose for which the borrowed funds are used. In establishing the line, the banker will make certain that the customer is good for that amount, and so long as he has that assurance considers his loan perfectly safe. He does not realize that when a customer, however great his property may be as compared with the amount of his loan, receives a current checking account against a loan, the proceeds of which he invests in a permanent form, he is endangering the bank. The ability of a commercial bank to carry deposit accounts to from four to six times the amount of cash that it keeps on hand depends entirely upon the offsetting of credits on its books; in other words depends upon the use of the funds which it loans in the processes of current commerce, which will each day bring back into the bank in the form of cash or checks, a large proportion of the amounts which it credits as the result of its loans. If the banks of the country, as a whole, on a considerable scale grant checking accounts against investment loans they are certain to have demands made upon them which they are unable to meet except by forcing liquidation through the sacrifice upon the market of their own securities or by forcing liquidation upon their customers. They usually manage their affairs in such a way as to be able to force liquidation upon their customers, because they usually refuse to grant loans for longer periods than from thirty days to six months or a year, even though they expect and do normally renew these loans when they fall due so long as the customer keeps within his line. When these periods of liquidation come, therefore, they are able to refuse the renewal of paper which they ordinarily would renew without question, and thus to force the liquidation upon the customer.

We have heard much in recent times of a "money trust" which some claim exists in this country. Whether or not this is the correct term to describe it, a condition exists which deserves the serious attention of the country. Within the last fifteen years a process of concentration in the control of our great industries of national scope has been in progress, which has resulted in the condition which most of our people have in mind when they talk about the "money trust." Fifteen years ago there were in this country in the neighborhood of two thousand independent railroad corporations operating about two hundred thousand miles of track, capitalized at about fifteen billions of dollars. These railroad companies are to-day practically all controlled by a small group of financiers in New York City. While this process of transformation in our greatest transportation industry was taking place, practically the same thing was happening in all our other great industries of national scope. We ordinarily refer to it as the trust movement, which is but another way of describing a movement by which, in all of our great industries of national scope, thousands of concerns which a few years ago were independently managed and in competition with each other are now under the control of these same New York financiers.

The execution of these gigantic enterprises created a financial problem, the magnitude of which never has been approximated in this or any other country at any time in history. For the solution of this problem our financial institutions proved entirely inadequate, and it became necessary for the financiers who were back of these enterprises to transform these institutions. They began by the construction of huge trust companies in the city of New York, which at that time were not subject to the same legal limitations as were the national and state banks. There followed a period of cutthroat competition between the trust companies, the national banks and the state banks, which resulted, as cutthroat competition alway does, in the combination of these institutions, and this combination was brought about by the very same men who had brought about the concentration of control in the railroads and in the trusts. We are therefore to-day confronted by two colossal confederations, at the head of one of which is the Na-

AN ALWAYS WELCOME CALLER.

One day last week George E. Taylor of New York walked into the Chicago Banker sanctum and said,"I want to place an advertisement in your paper."

Mr. Taylor is secretary of the New Amsterdam Casualty Co., No. 1 Liberty St., New York, a company already doing a fine business with the banks of Illinois and of the Middle West. Has 139 banker clients in this state, which is going some. Mr. Taylor travels all over, visiting agencies, and he says he "knows a good paper when he sees it" and likes it all the better when he finds "it to be the one the bankers read and talk about." This is a pretty fine compliment from high authority. The New Amsterdam has a Chicago and a St. Louis branch and issues Standard A. B. A. policies.

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

The high record in bank deposits was reported at St. Paul at the last call, or $50,814,294, a gain of $3,485,443. This is in the five leading banks. Deposits at the February call were $47,328,851 and in November the deposits were still $1,000,000 less.

"The cause of the splendid increase all around," George H. Prince, chairman of the board of directors of the Merchants National, said, "is the general increase in business in this section of the country. St. Paul should not only maintain what it shows to-day, but should also go further ahead."

"St. Paul has been getting a lot of new business," W. A. Miller, vice-president of the First National, said, "and the increase is well deserved. There is no reason why we should not continue to press right onward."

"All lines are away ahead of last year," W. B. Geery, vice-president of the Capital National, said, "and there has been a general and healthy expansion in this section."

"It is a natural increase above everything else," Ben Baer, president of the American National, said, "and we will grow bigger."

"We have more depositors than ever before," said J. B. Jensen, vice-president of the Scandinavian-American, "and more people are banking their money. It is an increase that came through a general building up all around."

Bank Deprecates Decrease in Cattle Supply

Stock Yards National of South St. Paul has issued the first number of a review, which it is to publish monthly, dealing with stock conditions.

"The whole nation has finally awakened to the fact that for the past few years our population has been steadily increasing and the cattle supply steadily decreasing," says the review. Opinions as to the cause and remedy are many and varied.

"During the year 1912, 523,768 head of cattle were received at South St. Paul and 130,708 of these, or 25 per cent, were calves, the majority of which were slaughtered. At six principal livestock markets of this country calves formed 16 per cent of the total receipts.

"Stop the wholesale shipping of calves from the farm by educating the farmer to hold them until their maturity, and, if needs be, legislate to prevent the sale of heifer calves until after breeding age. In Minnesota we have a law preventing the sale for slaughter of calves under four weeks old. This law is not enforced, and is practically a dead letter. This age limit should be raised and should be enforced in all states, and until it is we must continue to face a shortage of cattle."

Group Three Meets at Northfield

J. W. Wheeler, president of the Capital Trust Company, was one of the speakers at the annual meeting this week at Northfield of the Third district group of bankers. His subject was "Bank Taxation." Other speakers were D. C. Armstrong, Albert Lea, president of the Minnesota Bankers Association, "The Farmer and the Banker"; George H. Richards, secretary for the state association, "The Work of the Minnesota Bankers Association"; Kelsey S. Chase, state superintendent of banks; Curtis L. Mosser, secretary Citizens League of Minnesota; C. D. Brown, chief of protective bureau, "A Few Personal Experiences with Crooks"; L. E. Wakefield, Wells & Dickey Company. Other bankers there were E. J. Grimes, Minneapolis Trust; P. J. Leeman, assistant cashier Minneapolis First National; E. L. Mattson, cashier Scandinavian-American National; C. Palmer Jaffray, Bond and Goodwin; R. E. Macgregor, assistant cashier Northwestern National.

Mankato Banks Show Gain

Gains are shown by the banks at Mankato, Minn., at the last call.

The National Bank of Commerce has $613,100.07 deposits and loans amounting to $526,273.16. The National Citizens bank has a bond account of $155,465.11; deposits $1,686,757.01; loans, $1,336,887.37. The First National bank has $2,094,530.96 in deposits and loans amounting to $1,349,000. The Mankato State bank has deposits amounting to $581,994.20 and $424,566.10 in loans. The Savings bank have loaned $273,825.39 and have $306,794.82 in deposits. The German-American bank: Deposits, $382,576.72; loans, $346,966.21.

People's State bank, North Mankato: Deposits, $33,476; loans, $33,744.40; due from other banks, $5,417.52.

Northwest Notes

"Southern Minnesota has a fine outlook as spring opens," said Cliff W. Gress, cashier of the Citizens State, Cannon Falls. "There is abundant moisture." Wesley C. McDowell, cashier of the First National, Marion, N. D., said farmers are getting busy and that the state is in excellent condition as to moisture. H. C. Jewett Brothers, Aberdeen, S. D., said the country promises well.

Bills authorizing $300,000 sewer and special improvement bonds by Minneapolis have been signed by Governor A. O. Eberhart. Bonds already authorized are to be sold May 8th. The bonds are as follows: High school, $300,000; city hospital and workhouse, $152,500; filtra-

Ten towns on the new Soo line extension in Northern Minnesota want dentists, eighteen want physicians, six want lawyers and one wants a banker. One asks for a motion picture house, seven want newspapers, nine electric light plants, eighteen hotels, four want shoemakers and five desire tailors. Four towns want telephone plants and two desire waterworks.

Crop prospects surpassing results of 1913 are to be found in Minnesota, the Dakotas, northern Iowa and eastern Nebraska, according to A. H. Poehler of the Chamber of Commerce, Minneapolis. He said corn promises to be a bigger crop, and North Dakota will put in more of this crop. The people of the state are proud of what they did last year in this line, said Mr. Poehler, and some of the finest corn was raised. Wheat will cover a larger acreage and many thousands of new acres will be sowed to this crop, but diversification of crops will balance this to some extent.

Application has been made for the organization of the State National of Eufaula, Okla., with a capital of $25,000, to succeed the First State of Eufaula.

W. E. Briggs, cashier of the Stock Yards National at South St. Paul, represented that city at the annual meeting of the Montana Stock Growers' association April 14th-15th at Miles City, Mont. He was accompanied by William Magivny, president of the stockyards company.

STRONG BATON ROUGE INSTITUTIONS

Louisiana National and Louisiana Trust and Savings are affiliated institutions of Baton Rouge. The former has a capitalization of $150,000 and the latter $50,000.

JOE GOTTLIEB
President Louisiana National, Baton Rouge

Both institutions have surplus and undivided profits of $112,400. Deposits are $1,375,600.

Officers are as follows: Joe Gottlieb, president; D. M. Reymond, H. L. Fuqua and R. J. Hummel, vice-presidents; W. H. Bynum, cashier and Thos. B. Williams, assistant cashier.

CITIZENS NATIONAL'S DIGEST OF TRADE

Citizens National of Baltimore in its regular monthly letter of trade conditions says: "There has been, during the quarter now closing, a noticeable recession in business. This fact might be disturbing were it not for the further fact that business steadily increased in volume month by month from November, 1911, up to and including January, 1913. Never before have we witnessed a continual and consistent expansion without a pause for so long a period. The most notable feature of the steady business growth during 1912 was that we passed through a presidential campaign and election and knew for the last three months of the period mentioned that we were to have a change of administration and that a new party would hold the reins. After a few weeks under the new administration a confidence seems to pervade the general business situation which indicates that no serious disturbance of business is expected."

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION CONFERENCE

Chairman B. F. Harris of the committee on agriculture and vocational education of the Illinois Bankers Association was expected to address the members of the twenty-fifth annual conference with secondary schools to be held at the University of Chicago, Saturday, April 19th. A previous engagement will prevent Mr. Harris from attending this meeting, but he has suggested that Secretary W. G. Edens be invited to present the bankers' point of view on vocational education.

George E. Keys, assistant cashier of the Farmers National of Springfield, was in Chicago last week on his way home from Washington, D. C., having accompanied Senator L. Y. Sherman from Springfield to Washington, to witness the swearing in of Mr. Sherman when he was presented to the United States senate.

By C. C. Burford

With the coming of a season of favorable farm weather the farmers are hard at work in the fields and unless there is a change in weather conditions within the present fortnight a large part of the oats acreage will have been seeded. Farmers have been held back by a season of unusually wet weather and the coming of more favorable sowing opportunities has been anxiously awaited. But little grain will be moved to market within the next month as the entire attention of farmers is in the field. Business has quickened with the coming of fairer weather but banks report a heavy demand for funds. There is some tendency to caution and waiting in certain lines and the absence of general speculative tendencies is marked.

First Bank of Fithian

The First Bank of Fithian, Vermilion county, has been using for a number of months one of the best appointed country bank buildings in the state. The bank has been established since 1895 and the new building makes it possible for it to do a larger and better business than before. O. B. Wysong, cashier, is county treasurer of Vermilion county and secretary and treasurer of the Peoria Life Insurance Company of Peoria. George A. DeLong, the president, has been prominent in various lines of business in Fithian for a number of years. The correspondents are the Corn Exchange National of Chicago and the First National of Danville.

Mr. Wysong enjoys a large acquaintance in his country and is making an efficient county treasurer. He attended the last meeting of the Illinois Bankers Association in Peoria and met many Illinois bankers.

New Bank Building in Charleston

The First National of Charleston will erect this year a large and commodious bank building on the site which it has occupied for many years. The new building will be a credit both to the bank and to the city and will include the latest ideas in exterior and interior bank architecture and the vaults will be entirely modern throughout. Fred G. Hudson, the cashier, is a member of the executive council of the Illinois Bankers Association. W. J. Kenny is the president. The directorate includes many of the best names in the territory. The bank has enjoyed a large and growing business for many years and there is a bright future before it.

Echo of Bank Robbery

Mrs. Gertrude Gordon, daughter of Alex Pate, banker at Wellington, and wife of Charles U. Gordon, formerly postmaster at Chicago, has filed a suit in chancery in the circuit court at Kankakee which involves $33,000 and the title to a thousand acres of land in Kankakee county.

In 1908 Charles U. Gordon bought the land and gave notes aggregating $33,000 to the Chicago Title and Trust Company together with a trust deed to the land to secure the notes. For the convenience of all concerned the notes and deed were placed in the custody of the Pate bank at Wellington. In May, 1911, the bank was robbed and the papers taken, and they have never been recovered. Mr. and Mrs. Gordon executed new papers, which have all been paid off. The Chicago Title and Trust Company, in view of the missing papers, which may or may not turn up in the hands of innocent parties, has hesitated to execute a release, and the aid of the chancery court has been invoked to clear the title. It is not apprehended that there will be any trouble about the matter other than the necessary court proceedings.

Danville Banks

Danville, one of the best industrial cities of the state, has six banks, four national and two state. The nationals are the First, Second, Palmer, and Danville, and the state banks are the American Bank and Trust Company and the Commercial Trust and Savings. The First National is the oldest in the city, having been established in 1857, and the Second National began business in 1873. All of these banks are prosperous and doing a good business. At the last call (April 4th) deposits were reported as follows: First, $1,293,120; Second, $979,529; Palmer, $719,552; Danville, $686,989; American, $433,024; Commercial, $713,435.

Illinois Notes

Isaac D. Urquhart, assistant cashier of the First National of Tuscola and mayor of that city, is a candidate for re-election.

The Joliet National is another Illinois bank which is carrying on an active campaign in the thrift educational idea and some very effective advertising is being done by this large and progressive institution. The bank makes an urgent appeal to the people of Joliet to save money and offers the best of security for these savings to the people. R. T. Kelly is the president and C. G. Pearce is the cashier.

Carmi Thompson, former treasurer of the United States under President Taft, and John H. Carroll, a prominent railroad attorney with headquarters in Washington, have been recent

THE PARAMOUNT ISSUE—SAFETY

FIRST and foremost the careful investor should consider the safety of his invested funds and should satisfy himself that the securities he purchases are thoroughly safeguarded before he even considers any other feature. ¶ Under present conditions many investors give too much attention to the interest rate and too little attention to the vital principle of safety. It is the established policy of this House to sell none but safe investments, and we emphasize the soundness of the securities we offer rather than the attractive interest rate they bear—5½ to 6 per cent. ¶ We will be pleased to submit offerings of First Mortgage Bonds directly secured by absolute first liens on the highest class of improved, income-producing, centrally-located Chicago property, in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000, maturing in two to ten years. Each bond issue is simply a large mortgage divided up into parts, each bond having its share in the mortgage. ¶ The soundness of these investments is best indicated by the fact that no investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us since this House was founded, thirty-one years ago. ¶ Call or write for "The Investors' Magazine," which we send free to investors, and for Circular No. 50-D.

Group 6 of the Illinois Bankers Association will meet in Mattoon June 3d.

J. A. Corbett, president of the Citizens National of Decatur and president of the Decatur Chamber of Commerce, J. M. Allen, secretary of the same commercial association and formerly assistant cashier of the National Bank of Decatur, and T. A. Fritchey, secretary of the Jacksonville Business Men's Association, were among the visitors at the dedication of the new Commerce Building of the University of Illinois April 16th and 17th.

W. H. Schubert, vice-president of the Charleston Trust and Savings of that city, reports deposits of about $155,000 at the April 4th call. April 20th is the first birthday of this young and energetic bank. Deposits on the opening day were $28,470, which had grown to $125,879 February 4th and to $154,906 at the last call. This bank pays four per cent on savings deposits and pays especial attention to thrift among its customers.

Mercantile Trust and Savings of Quincy reported deposits at the time of the last call of $1,150,000 and loans and discounts of $1,157,084. Harvey G. Riggs, well known to Illinois bankers as a good roads advocate and a wide-awake banker, is the cashier of the bank. While not the largest bank in Quincy, an unusually strong banking city, the Mercantile is exerting a wide influence and has a host of satisfied customers.

C. H. Schurman, for thirty-one years an employee of the Farmers National of Havana, has been placed on a pension by the directors of the bank. Mr. Schurman has been in poor health for some time and the directors took this plan of taking care of their aged employee. The annual stipend will be $600.

Andrew Russel, the well-known Jacksonville banker, has been elected to the office of Noble Grand of Illini Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Jacksonville. Mr. Russel was elected from the floor to this office. The membership of Illini Lodge is 515 and its degree team is one of the best in the state. With the magnificent new temple about to be dedicated the Jacksonville Odd Fellows are among the strongest lodges of that order in the state.

Sangamon Loan and Trust Company of Springfield, with capital and surplus of $450,000, is doing some able work in promoting the thrift campaign and some very effective publicity work is being done in the newspapers by this bank. The accounts of conservative people of slender means and those who must save carefully are desired by this strong and prudent bank. The thrift campaign is making rapid strides over the state.

D. H. Burnham and Company of Chicago have submitted plans for the erection of the new building of the Central National of Peoria. This ten-story bank and office building, at the corner of Main and Adams streets in Peoria, will be one of the most beautiful and most costly bank buildings in the Central West. The general contract for the new structure of the National Bank of Decatur also has been let. Extended mention of these two buildings previously has appeared in THE CHICAGO BANKER.

A number of the stockholders of the First National of Canadian, Okla., which failed recently, reside in Galesburg. There is said to have been a shortage of $20,000 in the bank due to unwise investments in a town site and an industrial enterprise.

At the time of its annual statement, December 31st, it had deposits well over the million-dollar mark, being the first bank in the state to attain that distinction. Resources at that time amounted to over $1,325,000 and surplus and undivided profits to over $59,000. The bank is less than nine years old, and since its organization has enjoyed a steady, consistent growth. The high place which it occupies among the financial institutions of Mississippi is indicative of the confidence reposed in it by those who appreciate conservative banking methods.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

That co-operative employees consumers leagues such as are being instituted by The Milwaukee Electric Railway and Light Company are bound to come sooner or later in the more progressive of large corporations, is the opinion of Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association with regard to the much mooted question. Mr. Bartlett returned this week from the national conference on marketing and farm credits at Chicago.

"The consumer is paying too much for what he buys," said Mr. Bartlett, "and it was evident from the discussion at the conference that such plans as contemplated by the street railway company for reducing the cost of living to its employees are bound to come with all the large manufacturing plants."

Relative to other questions discussed at the conference Mr. Bartlett said: "There are fewer farmers in Wisconsin who are tenants than in any other state in the country, as shown by the reports at the conference. Wisconsin was complimented because its farmers were not charged with an excessive rate of interest, as charged in Texas and Oklahoma."

Other members of the Wisconsin Bankers Association who attended the conference were Alex Baker, New Richmond; Earl Pease, Grand Rapids; and J. R. Wheeler, Columbus.

Bank Experiences Difficulties in Building Construction

This week has been a disastrous one at the new First National Bank building, now in course of construction. Sunday morning one of the hoisting cranes, dislodged from its base, crashed from the twelfth floor of the steel structure to the basement, with considerable damage to the skeleton framework, although occasioning no loss of life, the building being deserted at that time. Monday morning 200 laborers employed by the contractors, the Sterling Engineering Company, walked out on strike, following the alleged refusal of the contractors to employ only union men on the work. The difficulties had not been adjusted on Wednesday and a tieup in the work is threatened.

Kloes With First National 36 Years

Wednesday marked the thirty-sixth anniversary of Henry Kloes' connection with the First National Bank, of which he is now cashier, and friends made the day the occasion of an informal reception. Mr. Kloes entered the service of the bank in 1877 as messenger. He went through the grades of assistant bookkeeper, bookkeeper, receiving teller, and assistant cashier, assuming his present position in 1906.

Wisconsin Notes

James R. Daggett has succeeded J. E. Jones as manager of the bond department of the Marshall & Ilsley Bank, Mr. Jones having been made assistant cashier. Mr. Daggett was formerly with the First National Bank.

Hats off to the man behind the advertising gun of the Second Ward Savings of Milwaukee. Within the last week Milwaukee citizens at large have been favored through the mails with the bank's "Digest of Trade Conditions," its "Statement of Condition" and a leaflet setting forth the advantages of its safe deposit vaults. One can't forget that the Second Ward Savings is decidedly on the job.

Patrick Donohue was elected president of the Milwaukee Chamber of Commerce at the annual election. Other officers are: First vice-president, A. K. Taylor; second vice-president, James A. Mader; secretary and treasurer, Harry A. Plumb; directors, Thomas M. Corcoran, Frank J. Phelan, H. H. Peterson. New officers were installed Monday with the usual ceremonies.

E. E. Rogers was re-elected head of the Milwaukee Real Estate Board at the annual meeting in the Hotel Pfister recently. Other officers are: Vice-president, Otto Schenk; secretary, Frank Boardman; treasurer, John M. Schneider.

S. A. Schindler, state assemblyman, is a bank cashier at New Glarus, Green county. He succeeded in getting a republican majority in a district that formerly had gone democratic and so earned his way to a seat in the assembly. For a time he was president of the New Glarus town board and held a position on the county board for several years.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, April 16th.—Bank clearings during the past week have been larger than those of the corresponding period last year, which indicates that business at the financial institutions fully has regained its former activity, which partially had been hampered by the floods in the South. The demand for money was fair and came from all classes of customers, while the rates ruled firm at 5½ to 6 per cent on call and time loans. New York exchange was in fair offerings and demand, and the premium rate between banks was advanced slightly. Commercial paper was discounted at 6 per cent.

Bank Conditions Better

Marked improvement in the condition of the financial institutions of St. Louis was shown in the statements given out last Friday by the clearing house. During the nine days that intervened between the statement of April 4th, called by the United States comptroller of the currency, and that of March 26th, called by the state bank commissioner, the deposits increased by $3,534,971, the cash and sight exchange by $8,663,142 and the loans and discounts decreased by $2,450,604.

Mechanics-American Bank Letter

Mechanics-American National of St. Louis, in its monthly financial letter, says:

"There is a good demand for money throughout the Southwest, and it looks as if the inquiry would continue strong during April. This is the season of natural readjustment in many branches of business, and the activity in the money market is not unnatural for this time of the year. The condition of winter wheat in Missouri and adjoining states continues to improve, as weather conditions have been, for the most part, highly beneficial. This means a great deal for this section, where prosperity is always governed largely by crop conditions. The tone to business is still good and the merchants and manufacturers of this city are conservatively optimistic.

One reason for the relative firmness in money rates has been the unusually large amount of grain held in farmers' hands. The recent figures given out by the government showed that from the crop of 1912 the corn reserves amount to 1,289,000,000 bushels. This is the largest on record, being some 405,000,000 bushels ahead of what was shown at the same time last year. The seven surplus states which furnish the country with the bulk of the commercial supply of corn, show 783,000,000 bushels on hand, which is 277,000,000 bushels ahead of last year, and 64,000,000 bushels more than were reserved out of the great crop of two years ago. It is evident, however, that the Central West has very little, if any, wheat on hand, owing to the failure of the winter wheat crop last year.

Bankers Trust Adds Capital

Two new assistant secretaries were appointed by the Bankers Trust Company at a directors' meeting on Monday, following a meeting of the stockholders at which the capital was increased from $1,250,000 to $2,500,000. The new officials are T. F. Sexton, who was cashier of the First National of DeWitt, Ark., and D. S. Coleman, who was cashier of the Citizens Bank of Vian, Okla. Mr. Sexton is a graduate of the University of Missouri and a native of Columbia, Mo. He at one time was cashier of the Merchants and Miners Bank at Webb City, Mo. Mr. Coleman is a native of Springfield, Mo., and a graduate of William Jewell College, Liberty, Mo. At one time he was connected with the Bank of Brinkley, Ark. The capital increase was authorized by a vote of 11,000 out of the entire stockholding of 12,500, not one adverse vote being polled. The new stock is to be taken pro rata by the present stockholders at par. The surplus of the company is $2,500,000.

High Bids For State Funds

During the next four years the Mercantile Trust Company of St. Louis will be the depository for 54/80ths of the state's funds, and will pay to the state on daily balances an average interest of 3.87 per cent. The state's daily balances range between $2,000,000 and $5,000,000. The Mercantile Trust, in competitive bidding against thirty-seven other institutions, secured all but 6/80ths of the funds awarded by the State Board of Fund Commisssioners on Monday. Following are banks which will be state depositories and the amount of funds taken and interest to be paid by each: Bank of Marshfield, one-eightieth at 4.10; Schuyler County Bank, Lancaster, one-eightieth at 4; Mercantile Bank of Kansas City, one-eightieth at 3.82; Bank of Charleston, one-eightieth at 3.65; Banking House of P. J. Lycan, Edina, one-eightieth at 3.65; Merchants National Bank, Springfield, one-twentieth at 3.61; Central National Bank, Booneville, one-twentieth at 3.35; Central Missouri Trust Company, Jefferson City, one-twentieth at 3.30; Exchange Bank, Jefferson City, one-twentieth at 3.29; First National Bank, Jefferson City, one-twentieth at 3.30. The five last mentioned were selected under the old law requiring the funds to be let by twentieths. The Mercantile Trust will pay 4.05 per cent for 30/80ths, 3.70 for 10/80ths, 3.80 for 10/80ths and 3.61 for 4/80ths. The state received for its funds during the past four years 3.29½ per cent on daily balances. During the next four years it will get 3.62 per cent, approximately.

On Tuesday of last week yeggmen blew the vault in the Bank of Mansfield, and escaped with $2,000. Despite the fact that the vault was blown open about midnight, the robbery was not discovered until the next morning, when bloodhounds were put on the trail. The vault was completely wrecked.

THE NON-MEMBER BANKS

With forty more members in the American Bankers Association, Illinois would outrank even Pennsylvania and would gain another member of the executive council, a valuable asset to Illinois banks. The members of council in Chicago, official and ex-officio, are Ralph Van Vechten, F. A. Crandall, W. T. Fenton, and W. G. Edens. Primarily it is their duty to do the recruiting. Generally it is the duty of any good A. B. A. member to bring the outsiders into the fold.

For the information and convenience of those interested we print the following list of non-member banks, as furnished by Col. Farnsworth: Jefferson Park National, Jackson Park Bank, Irving Park National, Inter-State National, Hyde Park State, Hyde Park Bank, Halsted Street State, Guarantee Trust and Savings, German-American Bank, Garfield Park Trust and Savings, Garfield National Trust Company, Edgewater State Bank, Dressel Commercial and Savings, Dauphin Park Bank, Cuyler National, Cottage Grove Bank, Commonwealth Savings, Commercial Savings, Chicago Title and Trust Company, Bowmanville National, Bank of Nova Scotia, Avondale Savings, Austin National, Auburn State Bank, Archer Avenue Savings, American State Bank, Zelezny Savings Bank, Washington Trust Company, Washington Park National, Tabor National, Swedish American State, State Bank of Italy, Southwest Trust and Savings, South Side Savings, Security Trust Deposit Company, Rogers Park National, Ravenswood National, Pioneer State Savings, Park State Savings, Oakwoods Bank, Oak Savings, North Side State Savings, North Shore National, Mid-City Trust and Savings, Merchants Bank, Market Trust and Savings, Madison State Trust and Savings, Lincoln State Savings, Liberty Trust and Savings, LaSalle Street Trust and Savings, Kedzie Trust and Savings, and Kedzie Savings.

The members of council named above will be glad to furnish blank applications and full particulars. Col. Farnsworth is making concessions on first dues, so now is the time to join. The benefits are tenfold in direct results and a hundredfold in indirect business conveniences, safety provisions and in co-operative strength.

WISCONSIN SETS LEGISLATIVE STYLES

Technical papers devoted to state and municipal government as a science have placed Wisconsin at the top of the list as having the most salutary and up-to-date laws of any state, not in America alone, but in the world. Her corporation and banking laws are the envy of the reformers in every other commonwealth. Now comes Wisconsin, leader in legislative styles, with an act up for passage licensing the drinkers of intoxicants as well as the vendor.

Under the bill as prepared those desiring the right to inbibe must obtain licenses from the chief of police, but he cannot grant them unless the applicant has been examined by a physician and found to be in good physical condition, and must, in addition, produce evidence that he is of good moral character. Even then, however, he is not assured of quenching his thirst, because if the police chief thinks it best for the applicant, his family or the community to withhold his license he can do so. To make such a far-reaching law efficient the mode of selecting the chief of police will be the starting point. Many of them are selected by the organized brewing interests, masquerading as personal liberty associations and societies. We predict that if such a law is passed in Wisconsin it will spread to other states as rapidly as did J. N. Dolley's famous "Blue Sky" law.

SAME OLD STORY TO-DAY

It is now eighty years or so since Daniel Webster was the great electromotive force in the United States senate. The powerful New Englander was opposed to all forms of public clamor, which he thought demagogic or unwarranted. For several years we have been hearing just such outbreaks as Webster described in a great senate speech in 1833.

There are persons who constantly clamor. They complain of oppression, speculation and pernicious influence of accumulated wealth. They cry out loudly against all banks and corporations and all means by which small capitalists become united in order to produce important and beneficial results. They carry on mad hostility against all established institutions. They would choke the fountain of industry and dry all streams. In a country of unbounded liberty, they clamor against oppression. In a country of perfect equality, they would move heaven and earth against privilege and monopoly. In a country where property is more evenly divided than anywhere else, they rend the air shouting about agrarian doctrines. In a country where wages of labor are high beyond parallel, they would teach the laborer that he is but an oppressed slave.

This quotation is worth filing away. In a public address it would attract attention repeated before any assemblage of intelligent Americans. Webster had the genius of argument and the directness of statement rare even in an age of talented public men. Every word quoted is just as applicable to present day conditions as to those of 1833.

GETTING A BANK'S MONEY

Way out in California they are trying to find a way to punish brokers who permitted—perhaps encouraged—a bank official to speculate under an assumed name, and, unfortunately, with the bank's cash. There were forty counts in the indictment of the banker and the brokers showing that the so-called conspiracy to get the bank's money was continuous. The shortage, the sum lost to the San Francisco brokerage houses by the banker, is more than a quarter of a million and still climbing. Experts are working on the books. So far as the banker is concerned, he's already doing time, there being no question of his guilt. While he was in the very act of pleading guilty, the federal grand jury was handing in indictments against the brokers who got the coin. They are the first of their kind in history and the outcome is particularly important. The charge is "conspiracy to abstract the funds of a national depository." Quite neat and to the point. A conviction will be the beginning of a safer era in banking.

WANGEREIN MADE PRESIDENT

H. C. Wangerein was elected president of the Oberlin Bank Company at a meeting of the newly elected board of directors to succeed E. P. Johnson, who retires as a member of the board. The directors elected to serve for the year 1913-1914 are F. H. Angle, M. G. Dick, W. D. Hobbs, G. W. Morris, J. S. McClelland, O. E. Peabody, A. Straus, F. W. Tobin, H. C. Wangerein. G. W. Morris was elected first vice-president; A. Straus, second vice-president; A. M. Loveland, cashier and M. B. Laird, assistant cashier. The bank has been established twenty-four years. It has had a steady growth, largely due to the efforts of Cashier Loveland, who has been with the institution since its organization.

ST. PAUL BANK SHOWS GAIN

With Chicago and New York banks showing deposit losses at the last call there is justification in the chesty feeling which has come over the American National at St. Paul.

Between February 4th and April 4th the American National jumped from $2,222,708.18 to $2,474,842.82. The Northern Savings, an allied institution, gained $100,000 in the same time.

SIOUX CITY NATIONALS MAKE GOOD SHOWING

Sioux City national banks come up strong with an increase in deposits of $4,000,000 for the April call as contrasted with the total at the time of the February call. The total deposits are shown to be $16,474,180 in the five national banks with available cash on hand of $5,351,786. March in Sioux City was likewise a splendid month with an unusually heavy circulation of money and many real estate transactions completed.

THE NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL BANK
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

THE FOUNDERS of this bank, in 1872, looked far afield and called the new institution The Northwestern. ¶ This wide vision has been steadfastly maintained and the resulting public responsibilities have been fully met. ¶ That its responsibilities to stockholders have been abundantly discharged is shown by the fact that its dividends have averaged over eight per cent since its organization. Its deposits have nearly quadrupled in ten years.

tional City Bank of New York, and at the head of the other, the National Bank of Commerce, each one controlling its share of the railroads, the trusts and the financial institutions of New York City. On matters of great financial importance to them these two groups act in substantial harmony.

This condition has brought with it a serious problem. The bank reserves of the country which find their way to New York City for investment in call loans on the stock exchange are deposited in, and invested by, a small group of banks, every one of which belongs to these two groups. The bonds in which the secondary reserves of the banks of the country are invested are for the most part bonds issued by the enterprises which these financiers control, and they must be sold, if at all, upon a stock exchange which to a very considerable degree these financiers control. It is this condition of things that has placed the banks and other financial institutions and the railroads and trusts of the country in a state of semi-vassalage to a small group of men in Wall Street, and it is this condition of things that is responsible for the money trust investigation and for the deep concern which the people of our country feel over this matter.

We are also suffering from the confusion of investment and commercial banking. The problem here is to draw a sharp line between the two, so that every banker will recognize it, and every business man as well. It is not necessary that we should separate into different institutions these different kinds of banking. There is no reason why both should not be performed by the same institution, provided the distinction is kept clear and the two lines of business are carried on in such a way that no more than the savings funds of the country are put into investments of permanent form.

We are also suffering from the control of our banking reserves and through them to too large a degree of our financial institutions through a small group of men, whose interests are primarily not in the agriculture, industry and commerce of the country, but in the carrying out of projects for the consolidation and centralization of control of our great industries, and in stock market speculation, which is the necessary accompaniment of such operations. The problem here is to take our banking reserve out from the control of these hands or the hands of any other private interests and to put them into the control of the people of the United States.

These problems are not peculiar to the United States of America. They have been met in one form or another in all the great commercial countries of Europe. Everywhere except in this country their solution has been found in just one way, and that is in the central bank. The Bank of England, the Bank of France, and the Imperial Bank of Germany, in their respective countries, perform precisely the functions which I have just said ought to be performed here. In each one the central bank holds the bank reserves of the entire country. In each one the central bank acts as depository and disbursing agent for the government. In each one the central bank furnishes a national market for commercial paper, in which any commercial bank that conducts a legitimate business can at any moment turn into cash the greater part of its resources. In each one the central bank is permitted to issue notes against these commercial securities and thus to furnish the country with a currency which is automatically elastic. In each one the control of the central bank is of such a character that its services are at the disposition of the commerce, industry and agriculture of the country, and without discrimination are available on the same terms to all sections and to all classes of people.

The problem which confronts us now is a peculiarly difficult one. The world's experience and the judgement of the best expert talent which we have, indicate that the central bank is the proper solution of this problem. That, however, we cannot have. What shall we substitute in its place? Some solution must be devised. We cannot drift; we must not permit this country to pass through another great commercial crisis before our banking machinery has been radically modified.

Within the last few months much thought has been given to the solution of this question along the lines marked out by the democratic platform, and I believe that one has been found. It is possible, I believe, to organize regional banks, which in their respective sections shall be authorized to hold the reserves and rediscount commercial paper for the banks. These regional banks can then be provided with a central organ, located preferably in the treasury department, which can serve them as an agent in the issue of notes against commercial assets, and in the co-operative employment of the bank reserves in their custody, and in performing such other services as are national in their character and beyond the power of regional institutions.

It is not necessary that this central board shall itself have a capital or engage in the banking business. It could be purely an agent of the regional institutions, exercising a large degree of control over them. In no sense, therefore, need it be a central bank, but through its agency, acting with the regional institutions, the various functions which I have outlined and the performance of which are absolutely essential for the future prosperity of our country may be performed.

At a recent meeting of the National Chamber of Commerce, held in Washington, the chairman of a sub committee of the banking and currency committee of the house expressed the opinion that the speedy accomplishment of banking reform in this country depends upon the attitude of its business men and bankers. He expressed the fear that the will and desire of the business men of the country had not yet made themselves evident in Washington in such a way as to convince congress that speedy action on this question was needed or desired. If that statement is correct, gentlemen, it behooves us to give heed and speedily to make known to our congressmen and senators the sentiments which we hold on this subject. I believe that if every business man and banker in this country who feels that banking reform is a necessity, and that it should not be delayed, should make that fact known to his representatives in congress, we should have an adequate banking law placed upon our statute books before this special session has come to a close. Will you not do your share in bringing about this result?

W. C. Gordon on Bankers Interest in Agriculture

Chairman of the Missouri Bankers Association committee contributes a valuable paper to the banker-farmer literature of the day

In the last few years an intensely serious movement has been started among the bankers of the country which has for its practical object the conversation of the soil and the general improvement of agricultural conditions. Such a widespread interest in the cause has been engendered that nearly every state bankers' association now has a carefully selected committee of its members working along very definite lines toward the accomplishment of the purpose in view. Much good already has been achieved and the immediate future is bright with promise that a new era is dawning in our country touching agricultural conditions and methods.

Every reform movement or effort to change long existing conditions must, inevitably it seems, meet with opposition of some kind. It is but natural, therefore, that there has been an expression of adverse criticism and a manifestation of unjustifiable resentment against the movement which the bankers have inaugurated. They have been advised to "mind their own business,"—to "clean house themselves,"—and, in a spirit of scornful raillery, gratuitous suggestions have been made to allow the farmers to solve the currency problem and other perplexing matters of banking. Unfortunately some of the prominent farm papers, laboring under a false impression of the motives which inspire the bankers in this work, have joined in thus criticising the movement and have helped to create sentiment unfavorable to it. Such an attitude is very much to be deplored. The desire for a better agriculture neither is an hallucination nor a will-o'-the-wisp, but rather the result of a well grounded conviction, born of a sane and serious consideration of existing conditions. The movement has come to stay and the impetus which it has acquired through the practical results already obtained will not be checked until the laudable purpose underlying it all has been fully realized. It is well, therefore, that false and mistaken notions of the motives which are instigating the bankers in this enterprise, be cleared away at the outset. From the reasons which shall hereinafter be explained, it is hoped that a proper conception of the activity of the bankers for a better agriculture may be gained and that due credit will be given for sincerity and common sense in their commendable undertakings.

The banker is interested in a better agriculture, because of a conviction that there is an imperative need of it.

Owing to the nature of his occupation, the banker is, or should be, a closer student of the trend of the times, of conditions relating to both finance and industry, and of defects in the existing arrangement of things generally, than any other business man. His hand constantly is on the pulse of the nation's prosperity and adversity. While dealing with the present he must of necessity look to the future and plan accordingly. Hence it is expected that certain bald and startling facts relating to agricultural conditions will give him pause. The rapid and almost undreamed-of advance in the price of farm lands during recent years ought properly to have been accompanied by a corresponding increase in crop yields from those lands. Such, however, has not been the case. The average yield of corn, wheat and other farm products in Missouri and other states has remained practically the same during the last decade and is far below what it should be. The last census reveals the fact that the population of our country is increasing rapidly. The law of supply and demand teaches that in order to feed this growing populace our lands must be made to produce more, else in a not far distant future America will become an importing instead of an exporting nation. The census also indicates that the urban population steadily is increasing while that in rural districts is decreasing. This tendency must be counteracted by the improvement of rural conditions, both social and educational, by the betterment of highways and by the making of farm life more attractive and profitable. The live stock situation, as seen in the scarcity and resulting high price of cattle, demands that more farmers shall become actual producers instead of mere feeders of these. In view of such conditions as these in a country like ours, the foundation and backbone of whose wealth and continued prosperity is agriculture in all its branches, it is absolutely necessary that not only farmers, but bankers and other business men as well, shall take counsel together regarding the perpetuity and improvement of this basic industry.

The banker is interested in scientific and improved methods of agriculture because they have been demonstrated to be entirely practical.

The conservative business man wants to produce results and is willing to engage in an enterprise provided there be sufficient assurance of its success. Scientific agriculture is no longer a theory but an actually demonstrated fact. "Book farming," so-called, has practical merit, despite its disparagers, and needs no defense judging from what it consistently accomplishes. Were it not a success, the United States government hardly would maintain a department of agriculture expending vast sums of money annually for research and demonstration work. Nor would the various states support colleges of agriculture and experiment stations for the same purpose. The wonderful results produced by the government through its demonstration work in the South are sufficient to justify the adoption and practice of scientific methods of agriculture generally. The cases of Denmark, Germany, and other foreign countries which, with lands naturally inferior to our own, yet, through the employment of scientific methods, consistently produce much larger crop yields than we do, should cause us serious thought. Methods in use a generation or two ago should not be adhered to merely through sentiment, provided there be others which are admittedly superior. This is an age of "scientific management" in business and its principles are equally applicable to agriculture.

The banker is interested in a better agriculture because of the peculiar relationship existing between him and the farmer.

Generally speaking, the farmer makes a confidant of his banker. The latter is a repository of all the hard luck tales as well as the successes of his customers. They come to him for advice and frequently consult with him on matters of policy and procedure. By reason of his position, therefore, the country banker particularly has good opportunity to know of and interpret agricultural matters in his community. Moreover, through his close association with the farmer he is in better position to assist in the improvement of conditions touching the latter than any other business man. It may be, also, that the banker has a direct personal interest in the question. Statistics gathered in Missouri about two years ago by the committee on taxation of the Missouri Bankers Association revealed the fact that nearly 50 per cent of the stockholders of the banks of the state were active farmers. If one adds to this the number of them who, while not actively engaged in farming, are nevertheless the owners of farm lands and vitally interested in the subject, the per cent will be increased considerably. This in itself is a sufficient ground for the interest manifested by bankers in the new gospel of better farming, for what is true of Missouri banks in this connection is doubtless equally true of all other states in the agricultural section of the country.

The banker is interested in a better agriculture because it is good business.

This might be called the selfish or utilitarian motive; and yet it is not altogether so, for the farmer must first be benefited before the banker can reap any advantage. Briefly stated, better farming means greater and better crops and that in turn means larger deposits for the banks and more business for the merchants. It is a matter of common knowledge that all lines of business are made to boom when there is an abundant crop yield. What makes a prosperous year if it be not a bountiful harvest? Pessimists may declare that larger crops make lower prices for the products and are therefore not desirable. Granting, for the sake of argument, that such a contention has merit and truth in it, still it is not to be denied that even a contingency of that kind has direct advantages. However, it is hardly to be believed that lower prices for crops would completely offset the large degree of prosperity which a splendid agricultural year brings.

The banker likes to see dividends and assets grow. The same should be true of the farmer and will be possible to a greater extent when he seeks out and adopts methods that are better than the old ones. It is entirely feasible to double the crop yields of Missouri with practically the same expenditure of labor. There need be no depleted soils if proper rotation of crops and fertilization of one kind or another are resorted to. It is good business for both the banker and farmer to take thought of these things and, if there be virtue in them, to join hands in seeing that they be adopted generally, to the end that both may be benefited.

Finally, it is not the purpose of the banker to tell the farmer what he shall do in certain emergencies. He will not presume to tell the farmer how to grow his corn and wheat. The purpose of the bankers in their campaign for a better agriculture is one of encouragement and conversion only. There is a great mass of scientific agricultural knowledge available which has been gained through research and experiment and which is immensely practical. These facts have been largely unused heretofore and if the bankers by their encouragement can induce the farmers to investigate them seriously, it confidently is believed that the next few years will witness a decided betterment of agricultural conditions throughout the country. Ours is a noble heritage and as stewards of the benefits we enjoy we must have consideration for the generations yet to come and transmit them to our descendants undiminished in their power for enjoyment and support.

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Between-season dullness has been reflected in moderate bank clearings in the Central West states during the past few weeks, but the condition causes no uneasiness as it is usual at this time of the year. Bankers generally do not look for a marked revival for sixty days longer when farm operations are in full swing and early crops begin to move. Conditions are in every way entirely satisfactory from the bankers' standpoint and a sound prosperity everywhere is manifest. Crops have done exceedingly well thus far. In fact, even the most enthusiastic scarcely could suggest an improvement and a good year is predicted with anything like a favorable continuance of these conditions. Country bankers are in closer touch with farmers and stock raisers than ever before and in many communities the bankers are taking the lead in the employment of county farm experts who are aiding measurably in better and more profitable farming. Officers of the the Kansas City Clearing House Association predict that by the middle of June all of the Central West cities will resume their former places in the national clearing house list.

Kansas State Bank Deposits Up

Deposits in the state banks of Kansas have increased 8¼ million dollars in the last three months, according to the compilation of Bank Commissioner Sawyer made public last week. The compilation covers the returns from the 908 state banks in business March 11th, when a total of $113,742,844 of deposits was shown. This is an actual increase of $8,200,000 in deposits since the last statement, December 4th, and is one of the largest increases in deposits shown by the bank statements for any period. The local deposits are now nearly 4 million dollars larger than ever before. The statement shows total loans and discounts of $94,036,429, an increase of $1,000,000 in three months. The cash and sight exchange item shows an increase of $6,300,000 and the rediscounts and bills payable by the banks have decreased more than half a million dollars. The state banks show a surplus of 7½ million dollars and undivided profits exceeding 2 million dollars, and the undivided profit account was liquidated by the banks only a few weeks before the statement was called by the bank commissioner, showing how the banks have been transacting a vast amount of business in the early part of the year.

Kansas State Bankers Hold Convention

Kansas state bankers to the number of nearly 500 gathered in Topeka last week in annual convention and an unusually comprehensive program was carried out. The more important addresses were delivered by Bank Commissioner Sawyer, Governor Hodges, John R. Mulvane, J. N. Dolley, former state bank commissioner, President H. J. Waters of the state agricultural college and Walter E. Wilson of Washington. By resolution the bankers favored legislation that will make it mandatory on the part of state officials to place the funds of the state in guaranteed state banks only, and that when funds are so placed, the depository shall not be required to furnish additional security as at present. It was declared that currency reform is needed. "But we strongly insist," said the resolutions, "that any changes made in our financial system shall include state banks in its provisions, and on the same terms as our brother national banks."

The bankers adopted resolutions of condolence for the widow and children of R. P. Brown, cashier of the Barnes State Bank, killed recently while defending the bank against attempted robbery. It was decided to raise a fund of $5,000 to be presented to the widow and children, not as a matter of charity, but as a token of respect to the brave man who lost his life while defending a bank's property. The association also voted to have medals struck for L. D. Spence, leader of the posse that killed the bank robber, and for the members of the posse.

The association elected the following officers: President, William Macfarran, Topeka; first vice-president, J. E. Wagner, Larned; second vice-president, M. A. Householder, Columbus; secretary, Walter E. Wilson, Washington; treasurer, F. G. Bergen, Summerfield. The district vice-presidents are: First, J. L. Raines, Topeka, L. A. Libel, Walthena; second, J. B. Foss, Baldwin, H. H. Daniels, Kansas City, Kan.; third, R. J. Grover, Arkansas City, J. T. Denton, Grenola; fourth, William Wayman, Emporia, A. R. Wallace, White City; fifth, Alvin Gates, Riley, G. W. Hanna, Clay Center; sixth, J. E. Gleason, Norton, A. Watson, Jewell; seventh, C. M. Branch, Hutchinson, Carl Newcomber, Brownell; eighth, G. W. Robinson, Wichita, J. J. Ruth, Mound Ridge.

Urges Bankers to Take Interest in Agriculture

State Bank Commissioner Charles M Sawyer of Kansas made his formal bow to the state bankers at their convention in Topeka last week. He urged that Kansas bankers should take part in promoting scientific agriculture in the state and the conservation of soils. "This is essentially an agricultural state," said the commissioner, "and the bankers should waken to the vast importance of the widespread movement for increased yields of grain through scientific cultivation and careful selection of seeds. The bankers are the most influential of any single class of business men. How many of you take any interest in the meetings of the farmers' institutes in your counties? How many of you even take enough interest in these meetings to attend them? Do you know that the same percentage of increase in yields of grain in Kansas as have been made in Iowa, Illinois and other states would mean hundreds of thousands of dollars increased wealth to the state, to say nothing of the increased value of the land? The banker will share in this prosperity through increased deposits, and I hope that you bankers will rise to the occasion and help keep Kansas in the front rank as an agricultural state."

Dolley Presented With Victrola

That J. N. Dolley, former bank commissioner of Kansas, is extremely popular among the financiers of the state was indicated in many ways at the state bankers' convention in Topeka last week. Before the convention adjourned Mr. Dolley was called forward and presented with a handsome Victrola as a token of the members' appreciation of the services he had rendered the banking business in Kansas while in office. E. S. Chenoweth, president of the association, who made the presentation speech paid a high tribute to Mr. Dolley and his work.

W. D. Vincent on Benefits of Group Organization

W. D. Vincent of the Old National got off a fine "speech" with some trepidation, being more of a worker than a talker, at the organization of Group 3, Washington bankers, recently. He said:

The clearing house association is the local organization from which has grown all bankers' associations. It is the group of bankers that is best known. It comes in closer contact with the public and is spoken of with less understanding on the part of the public than any other form of organization. Twenty years after the first clearing house was established in this country, the American Bankers Association was organized. It is a peculiar thing, but a fact, nevertheless, that as a nation, we sometimes build our structures from the top down. In the year 1875, 300 bankers of the United States met in convention and put the roof over the banking business of this country. To go a little further with the simile, and considering each banker at that organization meeting as one shingle of the roof, the 300 have increased in numbers until there are now 13,500 shingles in the roof that protects and aids the banking business, and when the roof is completed by the full membership in the American Bankers Association of every banker in the United States, there will come the complete co-operation that eventually will bring about the many needed changes that our banking system so badly needs.

The American Bankers Association stands for the best principles in business. It stands for the punishment of criminals, for the enactment of uniform laws. Its endeavors are toward efficient service and intelligent effort. Out of the growth of the larger group have come different groups known as the Clearing House Section, the Trust Company Section, Savings Bank Section, American Institute of Banking Section, State Secretaries Section. You are familiar with the work done by these different sections, and I have mentioned them simply to call your attention to the benefits of group organization. The group of bankers whose work appeals to the greatest number of members is that of the state bankers' association. Without it where would we as a body of bankers stand to-day? Your own answer to that question justifies the existence and importance of the state group. The bankers of the state of Washington have reason to be proud of the splendid work that has been done by the secretary, who, through his intelligent co-operation with the officers and members, has made our association one of the best in the United States.

Group organization, as it commonly is known and, as I believe, more properly called, district organization, is one of the strongest factors in making state association work more effective, and is at the same time the means by which the individual banker receives the most direct tangible benefit; for in district organization meetings you come in contact with the man that may be your next town neighbor, but whom you never have seen. A personal contact, the face-to-face and heart-to-heart opportunities at a group meeting have a value that cannot be calculated. Once I was sitting in a lodge with a United States senator. He looked around at the men present and remarked, "There is not a cull in the lot." So it is at a group meeting: there are no culls—and this is not intended as a reflection on the bankers who do not attend the group meeting.

What are the benefits of group organization, what do we learn through group meetings, can we make any more money or can we become more successful citizens by being active in group work? I think we find out that a bank charter gives our bank competitor the same privileges and right to the pursuit of happiness that the charter gives to us, and we learn that the gold standard of our monetary system is no different than the golden rule in our business relations. We find that meetings of the national and state associations are of necessity somewhat formal in character. We listen to addresses given by men of prominence on national and state problems, and we feel that we have been benefited by listening to their expression of their views, but we do not have an opportunity to discuss the local application of those views, or the local solutions of those problems.

At group meetings this is different. Here we can come together in small numbers, face to face, and discuss more or less informally those local problems which are pressing for solution in every part of the banking world. At group meetings we meet those who have endeavored in every way to solve such local problems, and we exchange views with them, meeting them on common ground and getting the benefit of varying points of view, all of which have some direct bearing upon our local questions. We find in conversation with them how they minimize their expense account and how they increase their profit account. We discuss the best methods of advertising, and that is a subject on which much can be said. Exchange charges and overdrafts, the two features of banking that have made more bald-headed bankers than any other kind of trouble, come in for their share of discussion. The rate of interest on deposits, which in many cases is governed by local conditions, also can

A finely equipped café will be a feature of the Johnson County Bank of Iowa City which is completing a handsome new bank building. It will be one of the handsomest restaurants in Iowa.

The German-American State, capitalized at $100,000, is being planned at Fort Madison.

No group meeting in Des Moines was ever more successfully pulled off than that last week. Certainly no meeting of the group was ever so well entertained. Three brilliant addresses in the afternoon were climaxed at night when J. A. S. Pollard, the popular cashier of the Fort Madison Savings, spoke, following the banquet, upon "Corn and Conservation." Mr. Pollard had been sought by the officers of the group for years but he always lost his nerve until this year. That he did justice to his high reputation as an orator goes without saying and before he could get out of the city Secretary Hall had secured his promise to speak at the state convention in May. To those who never had heard Pollard, it might be whispered that his address alone will be worth your attendance at the state convention.

John Fletcher of the Drovers Deposit National, Chicago, discussed the importance of cattle growing in his speech at the afternoon session. He went into statistics to show that a beef shortage would be a startling disaster for the American people. Mr. Fletcher is at home in discussions of this sort and he was given most cordial attention. From his former residence at Cedar Rapids he is personally known by many bankers who were present.

R. S. White told of the relation between the banker and business man. As credit manager of the American Steel and Wire Company he was able to get down to tacks in discussing credit.

H. M. Harwood of Iowa City gave his illustrated lecture upon Iowa's opportunities and resources. Mr. Harwood has a splendid lecture, meaty, yet interesting in the extreme. He is becoming a much sought for attraction by bank meetings and similar conventions.

The banquet at the Savery was enlivened by the singing of songs of all sorts, ranging from "America" to "Every Little Movement." A. O. Hauge, president of the Des Moines Bankers Club, presided and led the singing. A quartette of Des Moines vocalists added also to the pleasure. Then Mr. Pollard was introduced. The banker-orator put his audience in good humor before beginning his discussion of the importance in Iowa of intensive farming. Then he pointed out the tremendous necessity in the Middle West of more science in the tilling of the soil. The wealth of the corn crops of the Middle West was extolled and the tribute paid to corn was one of the most eloquent bits of oratory ever heard in the city. The bankers were enrapt and time and again Mr. Pollard was forced to cease talking because of the applause.

At the business meeting, Chairman A. E. Hindorff, president of the Jasper County Savings at Newton, was re-elected. So was Secretary S. J. Pooley of the Grinnell Savings, Grinnell. A resolution endorsing John Carmody of the Perry Savings for treasurer of the Iowa Bankers Association was passed.

Well Known Banker Dead

A sad feature connected with the session of Group Six was the death of Albert Davidson, president of the Poweshiek County Savings at Brooklyn, who was taken suddenly ill at the Rock Island station while waiting for a train to convey him to his home. Mr. Davidson, in company with a few other bankers who were going east, left the banquet at the Savery early. His friends observed at the station that he was leaning against the depot apparently unconscious. They called an ambulance and physicians but before he could be conveyed to a room in Mercy Hospital, he died. The deceased was 63 years old and well known in central Iowa banking circles. His health had been of the best throughout the day, so far as was noticed. The body was taken to Brooklyn for interment the day following.

Lively Contest for Treasurership

It is apparent that there is going to be a struggle for treasurer of the Iowa Bankers Association. There are two candidates in the field at this writing and they are in the field for blood—figuratively speaking. John Carmody, cashier of the Perry Savings is one, and H. G. Moore of the Wabash Wellman Savings is the other. It is expected that there will be more candidates later and doubtless some of them are already working in secret.

A. G. Miller Resigns From Clearing House Committee

The Des Moines Clearing House Association has accepted the resignation of A. G. Miller from the clearing house committee. J. A. McKinney, vice-president of the Capital City State, has been chosen in his place. Mr. Miller is no longer connected with the Home Savings, but instead is president of the Des Moines Trust Company and his resignation was because of his charge.

Group One Meets

Details of the meeting of Group One at Holstein, April 17th, have been slow in reaching Des Moines. Waterloo Banker Addresses Bank Clerks Bankers from Waterloo who attended the meeting of Group Six in Des Moines tell of a most interesting and instructive talk given by F. J. Eighmeny, president of the First National of that city, to the Waterloo Bank Clerks Association. Mr. Eighmey told of the experiences of a bank clerk, of his trials and tribulations, and gave some mighty helpful suggestions. Ray Cable read a paper on "The Organization and Laws Governing Savings Banks." Ned Wyant, George Wentland and H. H. Cordes discussed the laws governing trust companies, mutual savings banks and nationals. J. J. Miller president of the organization presided. The club is said to be in a splendid condition. Des Moines bankers express much regret that the chapter which formerly was maintained in Des Moines never has been reorganized.

Des Moines Nationals Show Up Well

The national bank call for condition of business on April 4th found the four national banks in Des Moines in tiptop condition. Deposits in the four institutions are shown to be $1,179,867.32 more than they were at the call February 4th. The Iowa National shows a decrease, but this institution has increased its loans $1,500,000 since the last call. The Des Moines National shows a gain of $118,758.92. The Valley National has a gain of $95,584.26. The Citizens has an increase of $225,685.67.

However, the clearing house report shows falling off in deposits and cash. The clearing house report issued in March showed total deposits of $34,436,065.85, while for April the report showed $32,122,279.93. Cash at the time of the March report was $10,782,035.38. For the April report it was $8,591,575.31. Bankers say that this falling off is to be expected, as March was an abnormal month. The fact is the conditions in Des Moines could hardly be more satisfactory.

JAMES J. HILL ON NORTHWEST CONDITIONS

James J. Hill is quoted in New York as saying: "General conditions in the Northwest are better than at this time last year. The season is a week late, and plowing is somewhat behind. Our banks are in a strong condition, and farmers are generally better off than they were a year ago. Money is high in the East, and I believe railroads should exercise extreme caution in making financial commitments. The outcome is not altogether favorable. Everyone wants money and everyone is paying high prices for it."

Louisiana Convention.

The 1913 convention of the Louisiana Bankers Association was held in Alexandria at the Hotel Bentley on Thursday and Friday of this week and brought out the attendance of a large number of bankers. A program of interesting and instructive addresses and entertainment which it would be difficult to surpass contributed largely to the pleasure of those present. Alexandria bankers proved themselves thoroughly competent to act in the rôle of hosts and did everything in their power to render the visit of their guests enjoyable.

That Louisiana bankers appreciate the importance of the agitation now on to better the condition of the American farmer and to make his environment such as will give to rural life the attractiveness which it once possessed, is evidenced by the devotion of a portion of their excellent program to a discussion of the relations existing between the farmer and the banker, by Dr. Bradford Knapp of the United States department of agriculture.

Banking reform also came in for its share of consideration in an especially able address by Prof. William A. Scott, director of the course in commerce and professor of political economy at the University of Wisconsin, whose talk will

The Hon. R. A. Hunter delivered the address of welcome to the visitors, which was responded gracefully to by R. H. Miller of Ruston, after which Dr. L. H. Jastremski of Houma, president of the association, delivered his annual address. Reports then were heard from Secretary L. O. Broussard of Abbeville and Treasurer L. M. Pool of New Orleans, followed by those of committees and group chairmen.

After the election of officers for the ensuing year a meeting of members of the American Bankers Association for the purpose of selecting a state vice-president and member of the executive council was held.

Entertainment features consisted of a barbecue at the country club at two o'clock on Thursday and a smoker at the Hotel Bentley at eight o'clock. Friday evening there was a reception and dance at the Bentley.

Officers of the association for 1912 were: President; Dr. L. H. Jastremski, president of the Peoples Bank and Trust, Houma; vice-president, H. D. Apgar, cashier Union National, Monroe; secretary, L. O. Broussard, president Bank of Abbeville; treasurer, L. M. Pool, vice-president Hibernia Bank and Trust, New Orleans.

RICHMOND (VA.) CHAPTER NEWS

By J. S. Haw

As the chapter season is nearing its close, and we look back upon chapter activities, we can say confidently that the year has been more successful than the previous one. The programs have been excellent ones—due to the untiring efforts of Henry G. Proctor—and the attendance at the meetings has been good.

Our weekly class in banking and finance is progressing nicely. While not very large, the class has been a most interesting one and has been productive of much good to its members.

The one regrettable condition that exists and has been the thorn in the flesh of those who have the interests of the chapter close at heart is the small proportion of the membership who are actively engaged in chapter work. However, we are not singing our swan song. With the impetus given us by the presence of the big convention next September we feel that this can be rectified.

Convention matters already are picking up. Geo. H. Keesee, chairman of the general committee, is handling quite a bit of correspondence, and the Jefferson Hotel, which will be the headquarters for the convention reports that it has booked more than fifty reservations already.

J. N. Fisher on Banking Conditions in Tennessee

The president of the association at the Memphis convention comes out strong for new currency law. In accord with President Wilson. Tells of long campaign for the new Tennessee banking law, the crowning effort of the organization. What he thinks of farm loan conditions

It would be sheer presumption on my part to attempt to enlighten Tennessee bankers on any of the many financial questions of the day. All these questions are discussed fully and ably in the press and on the platform, and you are as well informed on these matters as I am. You have not the patience to hear if I had the time to enter into a discussion of these things here and now, as important as they are, and I am going to have compassion on you and spare you from such an ordeal.

However, I cannot refrain from expressing an ardent wish and a firm hope that the members of our national congress may be duly impressed with the well-nigh unanimous demand for a speedy enactment of a suitable banking and currency measure. No well-informed person doubts the necessity for such a law. Our present antiquated currency and banking system "does not need to be indicted; it already stands convicted." The business world should make it plain to congress that prompt action in this matter is demanded. There already has been too much dallying with this question.

"A revision of the tariff may be desired, but the inauguration of a new banking and currency system is a necessity." Under our present defective, panic-provoking system, the country does business under the "constant menace of a panic."

The work of our association during the past year has been of a progressive character, as usual, and its affairs have been faithfully looked after with rare tact and ability by our worthy secretary, to whom are due our thanks for these duties well performed. The most important of these matters will be brought to your attention by the chairman of the executive council, the secretary, and the various committees in their respective reports. I would not anticipate these reports by making mention of any matters belonging to them. I do not think, however, I am stepping outside of my province in making reference to one very important thing accomplished during the year, and if I should do so, its importance will be sufficient excuse for so doing.

The association but recently has brought to a successful termination a vigorous and long-drawn-out campaign for the enactment of a banking law for our state. This campaign has been waged persistently for more than a dozen years. During its more than twenty years of honorable achievement, the Tennessee Bankers Association has not accomplished any other one thing of so far-reaching and supreme importance to the banking and general business interests of our state, as the placing, by their efforts and influence, upon the statute books the law creating a banking department and providing for the examination and supervision of all state banks by an official to be known as the superintendent of banks. This I regard as its crowning work.

This law is distinctively an association measure. To it belong all the honor and credit for its preparation, introduction, and passage by the legislature. During all these many years, almost from its organization, through the tireless and diligent efforts of its legislative committee, this campaign of agitation and education has been pushed with great vigor, skill, and ability. Strong opposition was encountered at first, and this mostly from bankers. Many obstacles were thrown in the way; prejudice against any state supervision developed, but all these were overcome—gradually, but completely—and finally disappeared. The work of this committee, especially during the last four years, has been so well and satisfactorily accomplished that the measure prepared by it and presented to the legislature was accepted with but a few minor changes, and was passed on final reading with but two votes recorded against it, and is now a law.

All honor and thanks to each member of this legislative committee, during all these years, who had any active part in the production and enactment of this law, for his faithful and efficient work, and for the energy and ability displayed in securing for Tennessee the best banking law of any state in the Union. I feel that the present committee especially should be commended for the successful efforts put forth to have this law passed before the legislature took its recess. The departure since the recess of part of the legislature to Kentucky and Alabama shows the wisdom of this committee in pressing its measure to a final vote when it did.

But, important as the enactment of this splendid banking law is, of far greater importance is the selection of a proper man to execute this law and make it operative. This fact cannot be stressed too greatly, for tomorrow this association must select or elect five men, one of whom shall be appointed by the governor as the superintendent of banks. This privilege of practically—and in effect—appointing the superintendent, by permitting the association to name five men from which number the superintendent must be chosen, shows great confidence in it by the legislature. No other state bankers' association, so far as I know, has been granted such a privilege, and this should be, and doubtless is, greatly appreciated by every member of this association.

So it now is squarely up to this body of men at this time to meet the responsibility placed upon it in this matter. It is not necessary for me to urge upon you the importance of this duty, but I cannot but express the hope and belief that you will measure fully up to this high privilege by naming five men each of such marked and unquestioned qualifications, of such pre-eminent fitness and ability from every standpoint, that no possible mistake can be made by the chief executive of the state in his final appointment.

We cannot afford to make a mistake in this election. We must make good here, for we will be held responsible for the success or failure of the man who executes this law. This responsibility cannot be evaded. We have the men, many of them, who can fill this position with credit and distinction; let us, then, name them with discrimination and discretion, and then stand by the superintendent in every legitimate way, giving him our hearty support and encouragement in the performance of his important and delicate duties.

Agricultural development and education for the betterment of all phases and conditions of rural life, and especially looking to the increase of all farm products, are receiving increased prominence from year to year, and earnest consideration and attention by governmental, educational, industrial, and business institutions. The present high cost of living and the startling fact that food productions have not, during the last decade, increased in proportion to the increase in population, have convinced all thinking people that agricultural methods must be improved and soil fertility increased so that the products of the farm will supply the demand. There is no other solution to the question of the high cost of living.

Practical, scientific methods of land cultivation are being introduced rapidly. The bankers are doing their part in this campaign of agricultural development and education, so far as they are able, in supplementing the work being done by the federal and state authorities, all state educational institutions, railroads, and county officials.

But as these problems of agricultural education and introduction of new methods are being solved, to put them into successful operation by the average farmer, so that the increased fertility of the soil required to produce the desired increase in production, resulting in the desired development of the country and supply the present urgent demand for more food, largely increased capital than the average farmer now has within his reach under present financial conditions and methods, is necessary. To supply ways and means for obtaining this capital is as important a factor in the farmer's success as the inauguration of the new and improved methods of soil culture. He must have the needed capital successfully to put into operation these new and improved methods, and the supply of capital must be within easy reach on easy terms as to time and interest rate. He cannot make farming a business success without this. Under our present financial methods the average farmer cannot obtain this ready money on suitable terms.

"It is said that Germany and France lead the world in farming methods and results, and that this is due in great measure to the high development of the agricultural and educational systems, and to the ease with which the farmer is enabled to borrow money with which to carry forward his business, at extremely low rates and on long-time mortgages." The difficulty and in many cases the impossibility of obtaining this needed money at low rates of interest and on long time with easy annual payments, to my mind, is now the greatest hindrance the American, and especially the southern, farmer has to overcome before his success is assured.

These European systems of co-operative farm loans or rural credits, which long have been in successful operation, and to which are largely due the agricultural development and success of those countries, now are being investigated by some of our most able men, and it is hoped that the information secured by these investigations may form a basis upon which to work out some practical system of farm loans suitable to the needs and conditions of our farmers, which will bring to them the same measure of success and be the means of developing and making profitable and attractive our farm life, just as those systems have brought it to these foreign countries.

There is no known limit to the possibilities of our natural resources. Their development really is just beginning. But their full realization will not be enjoyed until the new agricultural methods now being introduced are combined with sufficient capital at easy command, thus making this development possible. These changed conditions so much desired and aimed at never will be brought about unless this financial aid is given to the business of agriculture. This fact is now just being realized, and

Tennessee Convention

Convention of the Tennessee bankers was held on Wednesday and Thursday of this week in Memphis and was enthusiastically attended. Addresses of great interest to the banking fraternity had been included by Secretary F. M. Mayfield in his most admirable program. Entertainment features provided by the Memphis bankers were of a high order of excellence and were greatly enjoyed.

Addresses of welcome were delivered on behalf of the city by Mayor E. H. Crump and for the entertaining banks by J. C. Ottinger, president of the Mississippi Valley Bank and Trust; the response was made by R. D. Marshall, cashier of the Bank of Sevierville.

After the annual address of President J. N. Fisher, head of the City National of Morristown, Prof. H. A. Morgan of the University of Tennessee entertained his auditors with a discussion of some of the desirable features possessed by his state.

After reports from the chairman of the executive council, Secretary Mayfield, report of protective committee and appointment of committees for the ensuing year, a paper on the new banking law and its probable effect upon business and banking conditions in the state was read by the winner of the contest among the state chapters of the American Institute of Banking.

A meeting of the State Bank Section then was held and reports listened to from President J. M. Gaunt, Secretary-Treasurer N. L. Flourney, W. A. Sadd of the legislative committee, followed by general discussion and election of officers.

The second day Chairman Fred Collins reported for the executive committee and was followed by Vice-President William A. Law of the First National of Philadelphia, who talked on banking growth.

In the afternoon five names were selected to be submitted to the governor from which he will choose the superintendent of banks as provided in the new banking law.

On Wednesday there was a reception for the ladies at the Gayoso Hotel at 12:30 P. M., which was in charge of the ladies' committee of Memphis, after which they drove to the Country Club where luncheon was served. Wednesday night the entire lower floor and boxes of the Orpheum Theatre were reserved for members of the association and their friends. Following this there was a supper and informal dance at the Gayoso.

Thursday, from 4 to 6 P.M., a trip was taken on the Mississippi river around President's Island on a specially chartered steamer. Music, dancing and refreshments were features of the trip.

The annual address of President J. N. Fisher of the association will be found elsewhere in this edition of THE CHICAGO BANKER.

A. F. Dawson, president of the First National at Davenport, has been chosen vice-president of the Davenport Commercial Club. J. H. Hass, president of the Scott County Savings, has been elected treasurer.

CINCINNATI CHAPTER

The annual inter-city debate with the Pittsburgh bank men was the most important event of the year—over 300 were in attendance. The subject for debate was, "Resolved, that the Existing Systems of Banks, Trust Companies, Savings Institutions, and Insurance Companies are Capable of Properly Financing Agriculture in the United States." This subject was chosen by Mr. Allen, the educational director. Those who prepared for the debate found it to be the most interesting and timely topic that could be chosen. Many bankers are giving their best thought to this subject in connection with proposals for changes in the banking system.

T. J. Davis, vice-president First National and chairman of the executive council, A. B. A., presided.

The judges were as follows: F. L. Cook, vice-president Second National; Fred A. Crandall, chairman executive council, A. I. B., Chicago, Ill.; Prof. Benj. Carlton Van Wye, University of Cincinnati; Rev. John W. Langdale, Avondale Methodist Episcopal Church; Griffith P. Griffith, president Citizens National.

Pittsburgh supported the affirmative and was ably represented by the following gentlemen: Albert T. Eyler, Union National; George Rankin, Central National, Wilkinsburg, Pa.; John A. Price, Iron and Glass Dollars Savings; Donald A. Mullen, Real Estate Savings Bank and Trust Company; and Cincinnati defended the negative and was represented by the following gentlemen: George Schraffenberger, Jr., German National; John P. H. Brewster, German National; William Beiser, Western German; William Hogan, Fourth National.

The decision was unanimous in favor of Pittsburgh chapter. The team deserves considerable credit, for they had the more difficult side to support and handled their arguments in a methodical and skillful manner, which was the result of only such preparation which should be used in an inter-city affair.

HIGH RECORD IN BANK DEPOSITS

The twenty-eight national banks of Pittsburgh have established a new high record for deposits. In response to the call of the comptroller of the currency, they reported total deposits of $233,181,128, an increase of nearly $6,300,000 over the best previous record, made February 4th last, and more than $16,000,000 over the total reported April 18th last year. The gain reflects the continued activity of local industrial and commercial affairs. The surplus and profits of the banks amount to $31,628,880, a decrease of $528,018 compared with February 4th last and a decrease of $420,638 from the statement made a year ago.

INTERSTATE TRUST AND BANKING COMPANY

Interstate Trust and Banking Company of New Orleans has capital stock of $750,000. At the time of its annual statement, December 31st, it had surplus of $400,000 and profits, less taxes and expenses, of over $54,000. Deposits are well over four and one-half millions. The bank pays a dividend of 12 per cent annually. In addition to the banking and savings departments, trust, bond, commercial paper, insurance and safe deposit departments are conducted.

Officers are as follows: Lynn H. Dinkins, president; Sam Henderson, Jr., and I. C.

Mr. Dinkins is well known in banking circles, having been conspicuously identified with A. B. A. work. He has taken an active interest in the trust company section of the association.

be taken up. Are we paying too much? if so, why? Cost accounting is a subject which is demanding more and more attention, and if there is one subject that is almost entirely governed by local conditions, it is this one. It certainly can be taken up with great advantage at group meetings. Have we found out how much it costs us to do business or are we just like old Uncle Phil Trammel who was county treasurer at my old home town in Missouri? In explaining his bookkeeping, he said, "What I takes in I puts down thar, and what I pays out I puts over here, and the difference 'twixt them is what I ought to have in the bank." Is his method the only way we can explain our profit and loss account? Do we believe some of the stories that are told us about the other banker when we are told that he gives drafts without cost, does not charge on escrows, prints check books free and collects everything in Christendom without cost? If the man that tells you these stories wanted to borrow money, you would ask him for a statement of his affairs, and then would investigate that statement. Would it not be wise to investigate his statements as to legitimate charges being refunded, going directly to our competitor and hearing his side of the affair? Action of that kind would often save money as well as bring about a closer co-operation between bankers.

It is co-operation which we must strive to seek. Co-operation is the goal to which all business is striving to attain in this generation. The clearing house organizations are co-operating in many instances in the way of employing a clearing house examiner, and it is quite possible that groups of bankers will find it profitable to have group examination. Already one group in New Jersey has a group examiner. Another question that is receiving more and more attention is the routing and collecting of out-of-town items. Boston, Atlanta, Kansas City and other cities have uniform methods of clearing such items. Is it not possible that eventually a method may be devised by which a group will route and remit for items in its district? I am not in any way suggesting a plan to restrain trade, but only trying to show where there is an opportunity of building up your business by working together as a group.

There is another vital question which I believe may be properly taken up by group organizations. In this western country credit is too cheap. Frequently credit is granted upon false statements or misrepresentations, or merely because the loaning bank is not in possession of all the facts upon which to base accurate judgment. Is it not possible to have a district bureau of credit information? Certainly the advantages of such a bureau would be many, and the benefit which bankers in the group served by it would receive would be of tremendous value. I believe that there is now a state law regarding making a false statement to secure credit. Can a group co-operate to punish violations of this law? Do we as bankers appreciate the possibilities of our business? To what extent do we realize our responsibilities? Time has brought about conditions that make us more than mere money changers. Redirected education is bringing the banker into a better understanding with his fellow countryman. Agricultural education has been established in this state through laws enacted at the combined request of the Grange, the Farmers Union, the Labor Organization and the State Bankers Association. Can there be a better illustration of the benefits of group organization?

two pounds; in fact, he had caught a great many of them. Professor Agassiz said that it was impossible, as he had written a book on that particular species of trout and that he knew that they did not grow to be larger than one pound each. The next time Senator Frye was out with his fishing tackle, he landed a number of the trout in question, all large beauties. He expressed them to Professor Agassiz and received an immediate acknowledgment saying: "The theories of a lifetime have been kicked to death by a stubborn fact." Is it not possible that the theories of some of our bank methods that we have practiced for a lifetime are to be kicked to death by the stubborn facts of a new system that no doubt will be established? We all know there is going to be some kind of a change in our banking system. How can we receive the most benefit when the change comes? The answer to me is simple—through group organization. I am not a prophet, but I believe that future financial legislation is going to bring about concerted action among bankers and the best results for all concerned will be arrived at through local groups. A labor paper in discussing legislation at Olympia recently printed in big headlines, "Labor Legislation is Useless without Organization." It appears to me that that teaches bankers a lesson that is as valuable to them as it is to labor organization, and it sums up in a few words the condition of our national monetary legislation. I believe that the legislation that will be enacted during the present administration will be along the line of legalized group organization action and in all probability will result in a regional reserve institution with a group as the basic unit. It is quite possible that there will be 8 or 10 regional reserve centers in the United States. One of necessity must be placed at either Portland or Seattle. These institutions will be under the supervision of a treasury board, but the responsibility and management will come from the region or district in which the institution is located. In short it will be the Aldrich-Vreeland bill extended to legalize clearing house note issue, requiring specific reserve against issue and specific collateral in case of issue. There must come about a change in our monetary system, and every indication to me is that the change will be along the lines suggested. Bankers who do not now realize that there must be a change in banking methods in bringing about a changed banking system must, in my opinion, investigate new conditions as they are arising, and there is no better place to discuss the banking system as it affects individuals, state, or nation, than at group meetings.

DAYTON BANKS OPENED

The banks of Dayton have been re-opened and business is fast becoming normal. Banks in Cincinnati, Cleveland, Columbus and Springfield have had representatives there offering assistance. All offers have been declined, as the money was not believed to be needed. A monetary panic has not followed the flood and none is expected. Only one of the twenty-one building and savings associations is doing business. The offices of all the other associations were flooded and the books and records are being prepared for business. The financial situation at present and in the future is very promising, regardless of the surroundings of wrecked homes and impaired business conditions.

Frank T. Ransom, president of the Stock Yards National, Wichita, Kan., made an address to the Wichita Commercial Club recently on the general financial situation with special reference to the proposed currency legislation.

PROMPT CURRENCY LEGISLATION PROMISED

Washington, April 25th.—President Wilson has urged prompt currency legislation, believing it to be quite as important as a lower tariff.

Although no authoritative statement has been issued, the general features of a banking and currency plan under consideration by the men who hope to control congressional action are these:

The organization of fifteen districts throughout the United States, in each of which the banks shall be formed into one association, which shall organize a district reserve bank as a bank of discount for the other banks of the district.

The creation of a central body which shall perform no banking functions, but which will supervise and exercise a measure of control over the district reserve banks. The issuance of asset currency by the banks, and the gradual retirement of the present bond secured currency, with an increase in the interest rates of outstanding government bonds to prevent them from going below par when the note issuing privilege is withdrawn from them. It is generally proposed that the central organization shall be composed of representatives of the banks and representatives of the government, and it is urged that commercial paper shall be recognized as the basis of such bank currency as may be issued. The plan stops short of the central reserve bank, which was the capstone of the Aldrich scheme.

FIND HOW FACTS LEAK OUT OF U. S. TREASURER'S OFFICE

Washington, D. C., April 24th.—The investigation of what Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo terms irregular methods of giving out information in the treasury department, which is being continued by Assistant Secretary Williams, disclosed to-day that during the last year the Merchants National Bank of Richmond, Va., has been supplied with information concerning a select list of 109 banks.

These represent, it is understood, all national banks of Virginia, all of the leading national banks of the South, and several of the larger banks in New York and other northern cities.

The information has been supplied by the Riggs Bank, its Washington correspondent, from the statistics obtained in the comptroller's office by the woman clerk employed by Milton E. Ailes, vice-president of the Riggs Bank and personal Washington representative of the National City of New York.

IN WISCONSIN TRUST COMPANY BUILDING

Milwaukee, April 24th.—After more than twenty-five years in the Milwaukee National Bank, the Milwaukee Clearing House Association has transferred its quarters to the offices of the Wisconsin Trust Company, Pabst Building, a central location. F. C. Best, Wisconsin Trust Company, will be the new manager. J. W. P. Lombard, National Exchange Bank, and James K. Ilsley, Marshall and Ilsley Bank, will continue as president and vice-president, respectively.

Association Officers of Arkansas Bankers

CHARLES G. HENRY
NEWPORT

ROBERT E. WAIT
LITTLE ROCK

CHARLES G. HENRY, president of the Arkansas Bankers Association the past year, is cashier of the Arkansas Bank and Trust Company of Newport. He always has been an enthusiastic association worker and his official connection with the state bankers organization has been reflected creditably, not only to himself, but to the association as well.

¶ Robert E. Wait, the secretary, also is president of the Citizens Investment and Security Company of Little Rock. As secretary of the Arkansas bankers he has succeeded in keeping that body prominently before the public, and has been responsible to a considerable degree for the accomplishment of the salutary reforms advocated and secured for Arkansas by the bankers.

¶ Both of these enterprising officials are entitled to a great deal of credit for the enactment of Arkansas' new banking law, which was secured only after much patient effort. It is believed that this law will prove to be thoroughly adequate for the needs of the state, and that a similar statute could be used profitably by other states not so fortunate as Arkansas.

SUPERVISION AMMUNITION FOR ILLINOIS

A circular letter "to those interested in the supervision of banking in Illinois" has been issued by B. F. Harris of the First National, at Champaign. It's good reading and brings down to date the arguments used by Mr. Harris as president of the Illinois Bankers Association in his agitation for supervision. He will be glad to send a copy on request.

INVESTMENT BANKERS TO MEET

The next meeting of the board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America will be held in St. Louis May 16th and 17th, at which time the legislative committee of the organization will present its reports.

Frederick Kasten, vice-president of the Wisconsin National, is recovering slowly from a serious illness that has confined him to his home for several weeks, although he is unable still to resume his duties at the bank.

A. B. A. LEGISLATIVE COMMITTEE CALLED TO MEET IN WASHINGON

Chairman E. F. Swinney of the federal legislative committee of the American Bankers Association has called a meeting in Washington, just prior to the Briarcliff meeting. It is expected that currency legislation in Congress will be under way by that time.

ROGERS PARK NATIONAL ELECTS DIRECTOR

Henry Wittekind, a prominent Rogers Park architect, has been elected a director of the Rogers Park National to succeed Harry C. Snell, who resigned. The Rogers Park National recently was organized with a paid-up capital and surplus of $60,000. James J. Barbour is president; T. T. Snell, vice-president and W. H. Creber, cashier.

The Northwestern State of Cloquet, Minn., is to break ground for a bank at Brookston, the first in the village.

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

TWO things in this issue you should read. First is Ellsworth's Little Rock address on the American Institute of Banking. Second is President Allen's talk at Jacksonville on the financial growth of Florida.

IN Paris they chopped off the heads of four auto-bandits. Can't think of anything which might be done to an auto-bandit that more nearly fits the case.

E. F. SWINNEY of Kansas City says: "The outlook for business in this western country is good and if crop conditions continue as they are, there is no reason why there should be any particular let-up, even with the uncertainty of the tariff proposition hanging over business. Money is in strong demand but grass cattle will begin to come to market earlier than usual, which always gives the western banks a lot of ready cash. It will be with the East to look out for themselves in order that they can supply money next fall to pay for the crops, which we will sell to them and foreign countries."

COMMISSIONER A. E. KUOLT reports a twenty-five million deposit gain for the Wisconsin banks between calls.

A. R. SMITH, cashier of the "two-year-old" Ramsey (Ill.) National, is feeling pretty good over results. On $25,000 capital this bank already has deposits of $131,383.19. They can't beat that much, not even in Iowa.

TEXAS has two brand new amendments to her excellent banking law. First is the one giving authority to the commissioner of banking and insurance to issue and deny state banking charters. This power now is vested in the secretary of state.

THE other provides that in towns of over 20,000 people, no bank and trust company or trust company shall have a capital stock of less than $100,000, abolishing the provision allowing trust companies to do a surety business and fixing penalties for failure to respond promptly to bank calls; prohibiting any officer, clerk, teller or bookkeeper or other employee acting as proxy in any election; fixing rule for titles of banks consecutively.

OTHER bills passed by both houses provide for the incorporation of rural credit unions and for rural banking associations.

WE learn that President M. Lena Riddle of the Texas Womens Bankers Association, seeing that Secretary Bowman of Kansas is to speak at Boston on "The Suffragette" has invited him to speak at her convention at Galveston, May 14th.

SEVENTY-THREE public utility companies whose securities are dealt in by the Harris Trust Company, this city, report a growth of earnings for 1912 over 1911 of an average of 8.6 per cent. SECRETARY ARCH. B. DAVIS of Kentucky notifies that his convention has been set for September 17th and 18th at Louisville.

THE Indiana Bankers Association is concentrating its energies in promoting a state conference on agriculture and country life in Indiana, the most important movement of public character that organization has undertaken. There is deep interest in the matter among bankers in all states.

THE program committee will send invitations to a number of men who will be invited to speak at the conference. The headquarters of the whole movement will be the offices of the Indiana Bankers Association in the Chamber of Commerce building.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS, in writing to a friend this week, in Chicago, said: "I am very well—the best in years." He will arrive in Chicago Satulday, May 3d, from his winter's sojourn in southern California.

WELL, the bill to regulate private banks passed both houses in Ohio, the result being in a small way a compromise.

IT contains most of the restrictions in the Zmunt bill, whipped through the senate last week under the administration lash. Unlike the Zmunt bill, it does not make the state incorporated bank act applicable save in a limited manner.

TWO very important provisions of the Zmunt bill omitted are a capitalization requirement of at least $10,000, of which not to exceed two thirds is to be put into real estate, furniture and fixtures, and the limitation of the amount that may be loaned by a private bank to any person.

THE bill as amended requires private bankers to file information with the secretary of state by January 1, 1914, showing name of owner or owners of the bank and statements as to individual responsibility and net worth.

THE superintendent of banks may take possession of any private bank upon information showing violation of the law or jeopardy to depositors, who are given first lien on all property, thus cutting out the heirs and the probate court. There is a requirement of a 15 per cent reserve.

PRIVATE banks may receive deposits of public money as state and national banks. One of the new features added to the banking laws is one making it a crime for anyone in the banking department to borrow money from a bank inspected by the state. This provision is the outgrowth of a scandal in the department recently brought to light.

THE above private bank regulations are quite an advance even if the more radical features were eliminated. Now for Illinois.

THESE charts illustrate graphically: (a) increases in securities outstanding, (b) fluctuations in earnings, (c) net earnings per $100 of securities outstanding, and (d) relative security of capital.

THE safety of capital invested and the rate of net earnings on the investment are two of the most important factors, giving to a security its intrinsic value. As these charts illustrate these factors quite clearly they will be useful in the bank's credit department.

THE chart, having three sections, shows in section one the way the capital issued by three groups of companies has increased during a period of ten years. The second chart shows the way the net earnings on this capital have increased and decreased during the same period.

FROM the data of the first and second sections the net earnings per $100 of securities outstanding were calculated and are illustrated. As these figures include all of the railroads of the United States, all of the large industrials listed on the New York Stock Exchange and most of the large gas and electric companies, they warrant detailed consideration.

IT is not the present intention to do a regular banking business but to handle investment securities and farm loans.

BANK stocks and commercial paper will be a part of the business and bank mergers and consolidations will be financed.

MR. JOYNER, as is well known, has sucessfully managed three banks and will be the president.

VOLUME XXXIV CHICAGO, APRIL 26, 1913 NUMBER 17

Fred. W. Ellsworth of New York at Little Rock Convention

His subject is "The American Institute of Banking and the Banker" and he covers the matter historically, theoretically and practically. His paper is a fine addition to the best of chapter literature. Bankers, both junior and senior, will be interested and informed

The subject which is announced for me on your program seems to assume that there is some relation between the American Institute of Banking and the banker. That this assumption is a correct one can be readily confirmed by a brief recitation of the genesis and early history of the Institute.

A Little History

About a dozen years ago the impression was borne in upon certain prominent members of the American Bankers Association that the bank men in this country, because of the necessarily specialized nature of their work, were not in sufficient numbers receiving the training essential to the development of well rounded, efficient, intelligent bankers. The reason for this impression was the fact that relatively few of the men in our banks were really familiar with the fundamental principles of banking and finance and that most of them, especially in the larger institutions in the big cities, knew very little concerning the "why and wherefore" of their daily tasks. As soon as this impression had grown into a conviction, the American Bankers Association began to look around to see what could be done to remedy the situation. After some little investigation it was ascertained that the logical thing to do was to organize an educational institution for the theoretical and practical education of bank men in the principles of banking, economics and kindred subjects, and so the American Institute of Banking—or the American Institute of Bank Clerks, as it first was known—was founded. This was back in 1900.

City Chapters

Since the greatest need for this movement lay in the cities, the initial program provided for the organization of local chapters in the principal centers. So successful has this been that there are to-day chapters in more than eighty of our large cities, the total membership exceeding 14,000 men.

Correspondence Chapter

Soon after the organization of the city chapters was well under way, provision was made for that still greater army of bank men who are employed in the smaller cities and towns, where, because of lack of numbers, local chapters are not practicable. This was accomplished by the formation of what is known as the correspondence chapter. This is, in fact, a nation-wide school which takes up by correspondence the same identical courses as are studied in most of the city chapters. It also enables bank men in the smaller cities to come in direct contact with the American Institute of Banking and to secure the same instruction as is offered by the national body. Members of the correspondence chapter also are entitled to a seat in the national convention which, by the way, besides being entertaining and interesting to the bank man, also is a most valuable feature of Institute activities.

The Relation Shown

All of the preliminary work of this significant educational movement was inaugurated and carried out by the members of the American Bankers Association. It was done for the double purpose of benefiting both the banker and the bank man. So it is that a definite relation, and a most important one, exists between the American Institute of Banking and the banker.

FRED W. ELLSWORTH
Guaranty Trust Co., New York City

Some Early Objections

In the early days of the Institute there were some men in the banking profession who looked askance at a plan which involved the banding together of their clerks, feeling that it might lead to something akin to a labor union. For this reason the idea did not at first meet with enthusiastic favor in some quarters. Gradually, but nevertheless inevitably, however, this false notion was driven into the background, for after the Institute began its actual work it soon became evident that its sole purpose was the betterment of its members, to the co-operative benefit of both the bank men and their employees. In other words, the Institute never has and never will create anything but the very best feeling between employer and employee, and the only benefits that will come to its members will be those benefits which the members by their own hard work and study have earned honestly.

Still another objection, and a valid one, was offered by some who feared that the organization would become not so much an educational one as a promoter of social functions. Unfortunately this objection was justified in some instances in the early days, but to-day this also has been set aside for the very good and sufficient reason that the bank men themselves realize that the one and sole object of the Institute is education and not burnt-cork entertainments. For the purpose of making a bank man more proficient in his vocation a minstrel show is about as useful as a whipsocket on an automobile, and because of this the minstrel show era in the American Institute of Banking fortunately has taken its proper place in the ancient history of the organization.

What Has Been Accomplished

We all are ready to admit that there was a definite need for the American Institute of Banking. Likewise there is no disputing the fact that the purpose of this organization is a good one. There exists to-day the machinery necessary for the accomplishment of this purpose. As we have indicated, there are chapters in the cities which reach approximately 14,000 men. The correspondence course is available to all the rest of the bank men in the United States. Thus there is no excuse for an American bank man, no matter where located, remaining ignorant of the principles and practice of his profession, and, if you will pardon a little facetious slang, the sooner the man begins to saw wood the quicker will he cut more ice.

Let us consider for a few minutes whether or not, with all this opportunity, anything has been accomplished. I believe it is safe to lay down the general assertion that enough has been accomplished to justify the founding of the Institute. There is no question that the standard of efficiency among bank men has been materially and noticeably raised during the past ten years. For instance, bank men in all parts of the country continually are contributing to magazines and the financial and daily press able, intelligent and learned disquisitions on financial and economic subjects that cannot fail to mold public opinion and assist in the correct solution of our national financial problems. Prior to the organization of the Institute it was a rare thing to run across a serious article in print by a bank man.

Some of the very brainiest men in the American Bankers Association to-day—the very body that gave birth to the younger association—are Institute men; and some of the committees in the parent organization that have become conspicuous because of things accomplished are made up largely of Institute graduates.

Without wishing to indicate at all that it is necessary to be elected an officer of a bank in order to achieve ultimate success, let me nevertheless offer as evidence that since the Institute was established thirteen years ago nearly one thousand Institute men throughout the country have been elected to official positions in their respective banks. It is very obvious that many of these men would have become bank officers without the assistance of the Institute, but the fact remains, nevertheless, that these men who have been made bank officers are Institute men, and it is reasonable to suppose that many of them still would be doing clerical work had it not been for the inspiration and education received from the Institute. Ex-Congressman Fowler told me not so very long ago that in his judgment when the banking and currency questions are settled in this country the solution will be furnished, not by business men, not by our representatives at Washington, but by the men in the American Institute of Banking.

In 1911, in Rochester, N. Y., the Honorable Edward B. Vreeland, who probably has as clear an understanding of the late lamented Aldrich bill as any man in congress, spoke on that subject before the annual convention of the Institute. At the conclusion of his address he invited questions from the delegates, and in conversation with him afterwards he assured me that the questions which were asked of him on that occasion were more searching and more intelligent and more significant than any that had been asked at any gathering of bankers that he had been privileged to attend.

All of this merely shows that the men in the Institute are studying, they are learning, they are doing things. Institute men in the city of New York, in co-operation with the Board of Education of that city, have conducted this season in historic old Cooper Union a series of lectures on "Thrift." The audiences at these meetings are made up from the very people that need lectures on thrift—they come from the East Side, almost exclusively from the working classes who not only are unfamiliar with banks, but in many instances are positively suspicious of them. These meetings, which have been held every Wednesday evening during the winter, are tending to remove this unfounded suspicion and to put knowledge in place of the ignorance which before existed. And Institute men are doing this thing.

What It Can Do for You

Thus far we have discussed the Institute from a more or less remote standpoint. You are interested more especially in just what the Institute can do for you and for the bank men in your banks. There are now in the correspondence course, which is the department of the Institute work which will more especially appeal to you, nearly one thousand men. It is interesting to note that approximately fifty per cent of these men are bank officials. As a general rule the students are the "live wires" in their respective communities. Practically all of them have definite ideas as to how a bank should be run, and these ideas are reflected in the examination papers that are submitted.

Course of Study

The course itself is divided into two parts, each consisting of a series of lesson pamphlets.

Part 1 is devoted to practical banking, and the subjects discussed are "Wealth and Banking," "Bank Accounting," "Loans and Investments," "Clearing Houses," "Trust and Savings Institutions."

Part 2 is devoted to banking law or such principles of law and economics as pertain to the banking business. The lesson pamphlets in Part 2 cover the subject of "Law of Contracts," "Agency and Trusteeship," "Sales and Bailments," "Partnerships and Corporations," and "Negotiable Instruments."

At the conclusion of the study of each part the student is required to pass a final examination which entitles him to the Institute Certificate and which gives him a title of "Institute Graduate."

In the language of Educational Director George E. Allen: "The Institute course of study thus arranged aims to provide elementary education for thousands rather than for advanced education for hundreds or less, and graduation, as evidenced by the Institute Certificate, therefore should be regarded as the beginning rather than the end of Institute activity. In other words, the Institute study course represents educational necessities rather than educational luxuries."

Concrete Results

The only way in which an enterprise of this kind can be measured correctly is not by what it thinks it can do but by what it actually does. Merely as an illustration of what may be accomplished by a sincere study of the correspondence course, let me cite the instance of a student in a middle western bank which came to my attention recently. This man studied the course and on his first examination received a mark of only 60 per cent. This naturally would discourage most men, but he went at it again and on his second examination some months later he received a mark of 78 per cent. This did not satisfy him, so after studying for another period he took the examination a third time and was given a mark of 85 per cent. Four months later, after a still further interval of study, he took the examination the fourth time and was marked 90 per cent. Perseverance evidently was this man's watchword, for he went at it a fifth time and on his final examination he stood 98 per cent. A few months after his last examination paper was turned in, a letter from him came to the Institute office in New York City written on the letterhead of his bank. It bore in rubber stamp his name as assistant cashier, which indicated of course that he recently had been made an officer. There isn't any doubt at all in my mind that this man never would have been given that official position had he not gained the knowledge which his "stick-to-it-iveness" insured for him. This, of course, is but one solitary instance but it shows that a man by hard work and healthful ambition actually can land what he goes after.

Conclusion

Now the American Institute of Banking has not accomplished all that was laid out for it. If it had it would have to go out of business. It is not reaching all of the men that are eligible. The work which it can do practically is unlimited. It can do just as much as there is to be done. However, a great deal already has been achieved. The bankers and bank men of this country know more about their own business today than they did ten years ago, thanks to the inspiration and stimulus afforded by the American Institute of Banking; they will know more about banking in 1923 than they do this year. This is an age of competition in spite of the insinuations of congresssional investigating committees to the contrary, and in competition the man who succeeds is the man who knows. There is an old Arabic proverb which runs something like this:

"Men are four: He who knows not, and knows not that he knows not—he is a fool, shun him;

"He who knows not, and knows that he knows not—he is simple, teach him;

"He who knows, and knows not that he knows—he is asleep, wake him;

"And he who knows, and knows that he knows—he is wise, follow him."

The American Institute of Banking rapidly is developing a race of men who belong to the fourth class. They are men who know and know that they know. They are men who are wise—follow them.

Wilton Snowden, who has been vice-president of the Central Savings of Baltimore for the past ten years, was elected president at a special meeting of the directors, to take the place of the late Robery K. Waring. Mr. Snowden is among the best known of Baltimore's financiers. He also is a lawyer in active practice and vice-president of the Mercantile Trust and Deposit Company, having especial charge of its trust department. He is the directing head of the Equitable Society of Fire Insurance, having become a director when only twenty-six years old and served it continuously for thirty-six years. He has been with the Central Savings for twenty years and during the greater part of that time has been a member of the executive committee and passed upon its investments.

IRVING NATIONAL TO OCCUPY NEW QUARTERS

The Irving National of New York will open for business in the Woolworth Building, Monday morning, April 28th. The new quarters at Broadway and Park Place overlooking City Hall Park are only a few blocks distant from the old home, which it has occupied for many years. Practically all of the two floors in the Woolworth Building immediately above the street level have been converted into a large banking room, which is reached by two stairways leading directly from the main entrance corridor of the building. On the fourth floor the board room is located, and the huge vaults are being located in the basement, both having private elevator connection with the main banking room.

The Irvings's new quarters are unique in that architecturally they express the Gothic tradition, harmonizing with the Woolworth Building which is a Gothic adaptation. The main banking room undoubtedly will be classed among the most beautiful in the country.

The interior arrangements of the main banking room are the result of two years' careful study and planning on the part of the Irving officials to offer their customers every facility for the handling of their business. Additional departments will be created to care for the bank's steadily increasing business and the organization in every department will be maintained and further developed to meet every requirement of modern commercial banking.

ROBBER OF CHICAGO BANK CAPTURED

Thomas Edward Waterman, wanted in Chicago for obtaining $37,000 from the Drexel State Bank by means of forgeries and thefts, was arrested Thursday night in New York. Two other men, said to be employees of the bank, are under police surveillance.

M. B. Cottrell, president of the Drexel Bank, admitted Waterman had obtained the money, but he said the bank was fully protected. Besides $16,000 in currency, it is said $21,000 in bonds was stolen.

ANTI-LOAN SHARK BILL PASSES

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Money in Minnesota banks earns more than ten years ago, but the banker does not realize as much. Summarizing reports from 650 banks Superintendent Kelsey S. Chase finds the average rate of interest paid on deposits for twelve months is 4.45 per cent. The average received by the banks for loans is 7.78 per cent.

While the banker appears to be doing business on a smaller margin than he did ten years ago, the loss is largely in the reduction of interest received, as the increase in rate paid on deposits is termed by Mr. Chase as insignificant. In 1903 the average rate paid on deposits was 4.43 and the average rate received by the banks 9 per cent.

The figures thus far tabulated show that the banks in Minnesota earn 7.1 per cent annually on their capital stock. Interest on deposits ranges from 3 to 6 per cent. The lowest rate is paid by banks in northeastern and southeastern sections of the state, and the highest in the far northwest while in the counties of the central section any rate between the extremes is obtainable.

"Citizens accustomed to receive 3½ and 4 per cent on deposits doubtless will be surprised to learn there are banks paying 6 per cent," said Mr. Chase, "but there are several that do so and they are not all in the northwestern counties either. Some banks in the southwest pay that much. I imagine the directors think their money costs them dearly and would like to reduce the rate if they could without creating too much trouble for themselves."

Minneapolis Chapter Elects

Lester Banks, paying teller, Northwestern National, has been elected president of the Minneapolis chapter of bank clerks. Other officers are: Vice-president, Walter Hall, First National; secretary, Arthur V. Smith; treasurer, Roy Rose, Northwestern National; executive committee, former President Frank J. Mulcahy, Minnesota Loan and Trust, and H. C. Libby, Northwestern National. The chapter will give a dinner to-night at the Minneapolis Club, when President Howard Elliott of the Northern Pacific railroad will speak on "Agriculture, Banking and the Carrier." National President Byron W. Moser, St. Louis, will attend. The Minneapolis representatives at Richmond, Va., will be Nye Armstrong, Lester Banks, James Blethen, L. N. Brenna, Walter Hall, Clyde Hill, F. J. Mulcahy, A. E. Liljehem, F. Noethen, H. Beray.

Anti-Loan Shark Association Formed

The Duluth Remedial Association has been formed to protect borrowers against loan sharks. Incorporators and directors are F. W. Paine, John T. Armstead, O. S. Andresen, Carroll F. Graff, T. W. Hoopes. Capital stock will be $50,000. The working capital will be $20,000. The stock will be sold to the public at $25 a share. The St. Paul Association plan of charging 10 per cent, a graduated cost for investigation, with loans from $10 to $200, will be followed.

Ninth District Bankers Meet

The ninth district group of Minnesota bankers met April 22d at Thief River Falls. On the program were Professor H. R. Smith, state university, "Live Stock an Important Factor in the Development of the Northwest;" W. J. Brown, Thief River Falls, "What Drainage Has Done for Northern Minnesota;" C. D. Brown, protective department, state association, "Personal Experiences with Crooks;" J. J. Ponsford, Watertown, S. D., "Unity of Agricultural, Commercial and Banking Interests;" J. W. Wheeler, Capital Trust Company, St. Paul, "The Uplifters;" Secretary G. H. Richards of the state association, "Work of the M. B. A." E. M. Stanton was toastmaster at the dinner.

Third District Group Holds Meeting

The tenth annual meeting of the Third District group of Minnesota bankers at Northfield was most successful. At the afternoon session J. W. Wheeler of the Central Trust Company, St. Paul, said the Minnesota tax commission is a fifth wheel, as up to this year no attention has been paid to its recommendations by the legislature. President W. C. Armstrong of Albert Lea advocated co-operation with the farmer and urged the bankers' organizations to consider experimental farm work as it now is being done by the state experimental station.

Secretary G. H. Richards of the Mninesota Bankers Association gave a talk. One of the vital topics was interest paid by bankers, introduced by Kelsey S. Chase, superintendent of banks. He called attention to the tendency to pay higher rates of interest on deposits and said that bankers favor steps to reduce them. He advised appointment of a committee to confer with committees from other groups in an endeavor to formulate plans for remedying the situation. He suggested dividing the state into zones in which varying rates of interest from 3 per cent to 4½ per cent should be uniform. Financial statements from borrowers was discussed by E. H. Dorsey of Farmington. Curtis L. Mosher, secretary of the Minnesota

Bankers and business men at a better farming meeting at Moorhead, Minn., formed a Clay County Better Farming Association, to affiliate with the West Central Development Association. Seven directors were empowered to go ahead: Alex Grover, Glyndon; C. R. Oliver, Barnesville; T. B. C. Evans, Hawley; Ed Schroeder, Dilworth; M. O. Valen, Rustad; H. P. Gunderson, Hawley; L. A. Huntoon, Moorhead.

E. S. Tyler and F. B. Chapman, national bank examiners for North Dakota, have resigned, and John Vallely of Grand Forks and A. J. Minkler of Knox are candidates for appointments. Messrs. Tyler and Chapman were eligible to continue in the service several months under their appointment by President Taft, but two weeks ago sent their resignations to Washington. Vallely and Minkler, well-known democrats, went to Washington seeking to land the offices. Mr. Vallely has been a deputy state bank examiner under Oliver Knudson four years, while Mr. Minkler has been engaged in banking, and was a candidate for congress in the second district last year.

"There is every good reason why the Northwest should have a good crop this year," said E. S. Powers of the First National of Medicine Lake, Mont. "We did not have as much snow in Montana as Minnesota had, but the ground is in excellent condition for seeding and the farmers are seeding all over the agricultural part of the state." Bankers from Courtenay, Devils Lake and Doyen, N. D., said that conditions were excellent and that the farmers have plenty of good seed this year. Bankers from Kasson, Minn., reported that plowing and seeding has been continuous since the first of the week.

Lake Harriet State Bank, soon to be organized with $25,000 capital, in one of the Minneapolis suburban districts, has bought a building site at Forty-third Street and Upton Avenue.

The St. Paul comptroller soon will be ready to start the annual bidding for city certificates of indebtedness to anticipate taxes. He will place on sale June 15th certificates aggregating $2,293,500, or about $384,000 more than last year.

The Bank of Sanborn, N. D., has been incorporated at $10,000. Incorporators are G. L. Isensee, Walter Coop and J. J. Earley, Valley City, N. D.

ILLINOIS BANKING NEWS

By C. C. Burford

Savings deposits in Illinois state banks increased $4,438, 044 between the call of February 5th and that of April 5th according to a statement made by State Auditor Brady a few days ago. Time certificates and cashier's checks both showed a decrease while the demand deposits showed a decrease of $1,486,-330 between the two calls. The significant thing about the auditor's summary was the heavy increase in savings deposits subject to notice which shows that there is a decided increase in the tendencies of the people to thrift and accumulation. Deposits in state banks totalled $710,083,631. Capital, surplus, contingent fund and undivided profits showed a total of $134,568,640, an increase of $1,432,301 over the same total sixty days previous. Demand deposits decreased $3,421,757, while savings deposits subject to notice increased $4,438,044.

Farmers in Fields; Trade Lighter

Banks and business houses throughout the agricultural portions of the state are as a rule not so busy as during the winter, as the farmers are busy in the fields. Very few farmers are "in town" now and to a certain extent trade will be light for a few weeks. "We want to see the farmers in the fields" said one banker. He was right, as the returns will come later. Illinois with its varied agricultural industries never fails to raise a fair to average crop and this can be depended upon this year. Consequently business proceeds along confident lines, even if money is firm and in great demand, as there is every indication for good times during the summer and early fall with the sure crop yields. There is a marked tendency toward caution and conservatism in certain lines of business but a general healthy tone is manifest.

Illinois Land; Its Value and Returns

Many bankers and landowners in portions of the United States where farm land values are uniformly lower than in the corn belt of Illinois often wonder why Illinois lands sell from $250 to $300 and even beyond when the net returns at that valuation from corn and oats cultivation make in a term, say of five years, a relatively small dividend. Many farmers state that their lands do not pay them over 2 per cent and some place the figures lower and some, naturally, above. It is manifest that the actual dividend earning power of Illinois corn lands is relatively low, yet when it is remembered that when the certainty of the crop and the security of the investment are considered it is not to be wondered that Illinois farmers are almost afraid to price their lands. In many cases Illinois lands are held by elderly, retired people residing in good towns or are owned as parts of estates held very largely because of their security. In such cases the farms are considered much as government bonds or other low dividend earning investments which are cherished because of their absolute certainty. The whole problem of high-priced farming lands with comparatively small dividends is an interesting one and causes much discussion. The entire matter rests very largely upon the view taken of the question, but suffice it to say that the average landowner is not anxious to sell his land or even place it upon the market at $250 an acre or thereabouts. The man who owns 240 acres of choice Illinois farm lands in the corn belt is about as independent as could well be imagined and there are hundreds of them who will smile and say, "My land is not for sale at any price; it will make me a sure living as long as I live and will be a valuable inheritance to my children." In all such cases it is very evident that notwithstanding the sale of cheaper lands elsewhere in the United States and Canada Illinois farm lands will continue to demand uniformly high prices as much for the security of the investment as for the per cent of its dividends figured on the actual selling value of the land.

New Banks in Illinois

State Auditor Brady has issued a permit to William H. DeLancey, Robert W. Cameron and Louis C. Wheeler for the incorporation of the Farmers and Mechanics State Bank of Averyville, a growing suburban town of Peoria. The capital will be $25,000.

The state auditor also has issued a permit for the incorporation of the Southwestern State and Savings Bank of Chicago with capital of $200,000, John M. Tananvicz, Frank J. Palt and G. D. Anderson being given the permit.

The comptroller of the currency has received an application for the incorporation of the Fithian National of Fithian, Vermilion county. Fithian is a good business town fifteen miles west of Danville. This new bank will be the second for the village, the First Bank of Fithian having been in business since 1895.

THE PARAMOUNT ISSUE—SAFETY

FIRST and foremost the careful investor should consider the safety of his invested funds and should satisfy himself that the securities he purchases are thoroughly safeguarded before he even considers any other feature. ¶ Under present conditions many investors give too much attention to the interest rate and too little attention to the vital principle of safety. It is the established policy of this House to sell none but safe investments, and we emphasize the soundness of the securities we offer rather than the attractive interest rate they bear—5½ to 6 per cent. ¶ We will be pleased to submit offerings of First Mortgage Bonds directly secured by absolute first liens on the highest class of improved, income-producing, centrally-located Chicago property, in denominations of $100, $500, $1,000 and $5,000, maturing in two to ten years. Each bond issue is simply a large mortgage divided up into parts, each bond having its share in the mortgage. ¶ The soundness of these investments is best indicated by the fact that no investor has ever lost a dollar of principal or interest on any security purchased of us since this House was founded, thirty-one years ago. ¶ Call or write for "The Investors' Magazine," which we send free to investors, and for Circular No. 50-D.

Since removing to Hoopeston Mr. Merritt has identified himself with church and civic matters and recently has completed a large and commodious home in that city. His many friends in the state extend congratulations. Hoopeston, paying but fifty cents a year salary to its mayor, has been widely quoted in many newspapers as "The Holy City" having been without saloons for many years before other communities voted them out. Mr. Merritt has planned a trip to the Panama Canal on the strength of his first year's salary.

Illinois Notes

Aledo citizens have planned an elaborate home-coming reception for former Congressman James McKinney, who has represented their district in the lower house for the past eight years. Mr. McKinney is well known to Illinois bankers generally, as he is a former president of the Illinois Bankers Association.

W. N. Denny, of the bond department of the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago, has been visiting in Galesburg with relatives and friends. Mr. Denny, who has been with the big Chicago bank for the past nine years, formerly resided in Galesburg, where he has many friends.

The State Savings, Loan and Trust Company of Quincy, of which S. B. Montgomery, vice-president of the Illinois Bankers Association, is the president, calls the attention of the younger men of that city to opportunities to start in business for themselves. The bank says that "starting a business of your own with enough cash capital and experience is better than a job higher up." In order to attain to this place in life which "is better than a promotion" the bank urges thrift and saving. "Get an account started, drawing compound interest at the State Savings, Loan and Trust Company of Quincy, keep it going and watch for your opportunity. It will meet you half-way or nearer."

A meeting of the stockholders of the St. Louis, Peoria and Northwestern Railroad has been called to meet in Chicago June 18th to consider the purchase of the Macoupin County Railway and the issuing of $10,000,000 in bonds to equip the roads. The purchase of the Macoupin County Railway will mark the extension of the Chicago and Northwestern lines south into the coal fields of Illinois.

Professor J. C. Duncan, who has charge of the work in accountancy in the University of Illinois, will teach some courses in that subject in the summer session of the University of Chicago. His courses will be in general accountancy and industrial accountancy.

James P. Hackett, cashier of the McLean County Bank of Bloomington and secretary of Group 5 of the Illinois Bankers Association, is pushing his savings accounts by some good advertising in the Bloomington papers. The banks in Bloomington are conducting general thrift campaigns and some especially good work is being done in that direction in that city. Bloomington is a growing city with varied interests and its business district is one of the best in cities of its size in the country. The Bloomington banks are keeping fully abreast of the progress of the city.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

Milwaukee took a day off Monday to join in the opening of the new Marshall and Ilsley Bank building on East Water Street, north of Wisconsin. At least that was the impression gathered along toward noon, when the crowd of well-wishers inside the spacious building became so dense that the great bronze doors had to be closed until a portion of those inside had departed.

While the bank's officials devoted the day to the reception of guests, the business of each department went on without confusion or delay, so completely had the removal from the old quarters been effected President James K. Ilsley, Vice-President John Campbell, and Cashier John H. Puelicher received the stream of visitors during the day, which included officers of other banks, merchants, manufacturers and professional men. All united in expressions of general admiration of the perfect arrangements and uniform beauty of design. The interior was decorated with flowers sent by friends and correspondents in all parts of the country.

The building reflects the efforts of the designers, B. Philip, and Cashier John H. Puellicher, both of whom traveled to all the large cities of the country seeking ideas for the new building. The exterior shows a powerful design of strict classic character, the predominating features of which are two immense Ionic columns. The molding and consoles about the main entrance are richly carved and embrace at the top the seal of the bank. The doors are heavy bronze of antique design. The main banking room, finished in light brown, occupies the entire first floor, with steel cages running along each side. An innovation has been introduced here in the form of steel, fireproof cases for the books belonging to each department, obviating long trips to and from the vault. The president's office is in the northeast corner at the left of the entrance and the officers' desks flank the entrance to this office. The vault is one of the largest in the country, constructed of steel armor plates 30 feet long and 3½ inches thick. The doors are air and water tight when closed and four clocks operate the lock mechanism.

The Marshall and Ilsley Bank was founded April 21, 1847, just sixty-six years ago Monday. It then was known as Samuel Marshall & Co., becoming Marshall and Ilsley two years later through the retirement of William J. Bell and the entrance to the firm of Charles F. Ilsley. For fifty-five years this association was continuous, broken in 1904 by the death of Mr. Ilsley. Mr. Marshall, though seven years his senior, survived Mr. Ilsley by three years. Gustav Reuss succeeded Mr. Ilsley as president and was in turn succeeded upon his retirement by James K. Ilsley, son of Charles F. Ilsley, who has been with the bank since 1877.

A quaint relic which figured conspicuously in the anniversary and opening of the new building is an extract from the bank's first ledger, written in the hand of Samuel Marshall and reading: "Opened office in Milwaukee April 21, 1847, in the name of Sam'l Marshall & Co." The bank was founded before the state of Wisconsin was admitted to the union when Milwaukee was a town of 10,000 population. The bank's growth has kept pace with the city, its capitalization increasing from $8,000 to $500,000.

The opening of the new building received the following apt editorial tribute from one of the Milwaukee newspapers: "The new edifice has a note of individual distinction that makes it a welcome departure from the usual forms of American commercial architecture, and a pervasive suggestion of the strength of simplicity and integrity of design that makes it worthily emblematic of the character and standards of the founders."

Likelihood of Guaranty Legislation Small

The probability of legislation by the state legislature on the subject of state guaranty of bank deposits is becoming small, according to advices of those who have followed events at Madison for the past few days. There has been quietly creeping through the legislature a bill which is said to have an important bearin on the subject of insurance of bank deposits in that it permits the insurance by mutual companies insuring bank deposits of a far larger hazard than is permitted for insurance in other lines. Other insurance companies are permitted to write insurance amounting to only three times the average hazard taken by the company. In other words, if the average fire risk is $10,000, the company can write no risk over $30,000. The bill in regard to companies formed for the purpose of insuring bank deposits, however, provides that any mutual company organized for this purpose shall not be limited as to the amount of its single risks. It is said that this bill was necessary before the plan which the W. B. A. is evolving could become effective. It is considered probable, therefore, that state guaranty bills now pending before the legislature probably will be laid over until the average hazard law for insurance companies is so amended as to give the bankers opportunity to complete their own arrangements for guaranteeing bank deposits.

Bartlett Appears Before Taxation Committee

Secretary George D. Bartlett of the W. B. A. appeared before the assembly committee on taxation at Madison on Tuesday, stating that Wisconsin bankers do not object to the Gulickson joint resolution asking Congress to change the national banking laws so that the income from stock in national banks may be taxed under the Wisconsin law, providing that the income tax is to be wholly substituted for the present personal tax. The present state law does not operate as to state banks. In fact it provides that it shall be substituted for the personal property tax except as to state banks.

Wisconsin Notes

The city of Milwaukee this week accepted a bid of 100.29 per cent for an issue of $300,000 tax-exempt 4½ per cent bonds. Estabrook & Co. of Chicago, New York, and Boston, was the purchaser. Normally the city would have expected a premium of 2 per cent or more on bonds of this nature but investment bankers agreed the price was liberal in the present state of the money market.

distinction. Resources at that time amounted to over $1,325,000 and surplus and undivided profits to over $59,000. The bank is less than nine years old, and since its organization has enjoyed a steady, consistent growth. The high place which it occupies among the financial institutions of Mississippi is indicative of the confidence reposed in it by those who appreciate conservative banking methods.

COLES COUNTY BANKERS MEET

The organization meeting of the Coles County Bankers Federation was held Friday evening, April 18th, in the Elks rooms in Charleston. About twenty bankers from Charleston and Mattoon and other towns in the county were present. Although there are but fourteen banks in the county, seven of these being in Charleston and Mattoon, there was considerable interest shown and it was decided to hold quarterly meetings, the first one to be held May 23d. Mattoon will entertain Group 6 June 3d, and great interest was taken in the approaching meeting of the group. Agricultural topics especially were discussed. Officers were elected as follows: W. H. Schubert, vice-president Charleston Trust and Savings, chairman; G. W. Kirkpatrick, president Citizens of Oakland, vice-chairman, and W. T. Osborne, cashier Central Illinois Trust and Savings of Mattoon, secretary-treasurer.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, April 23d.—Business at the financial institutions during the past week has been quite fair, as was attested by the bank clearings, which were quite large and greatly in excess of those of the corresponding period last year. The demand for money was of more than fair proportions but was no more than normal for the season of the year. Rates held firm at 5½ to 6 per cent on call and time loans, while commercial paper was discounted at 6 per cent. New York exchange was in fair offerings and light demand.

Lafayette Bank Stock Soars

The stock of the Lafayette Bank yesterday was bid up from $1150 a share to $1205 a share, without offers eliciting acceptance. Ten shares were offered at $1500 but found no takers. The stock is the most valuable of any bank stock in St. Louis, the capital of the bank being only $100,000 and its surplus is $987,922. The stock draws semiannual dividends of 20 per cent, the last having been paid in January.

State to Get 3.78 Average for Funds

Of thirty-five banks and trust companies that bid for the custody of the remaining surplus funds of the state of Missouri for four years from February 1, 1913, last week, seven were accepted. All the funds save what were let at the bidding in February were awarded. The state has $5,100,000 on hand. It will receive the highest interest for its funds ever paid, the average being 3.78, while during the last four years it only was a little above 3.29.

Bank of Edwardsville to Have New Building

Plans for the erection of the first five-story building in Edwardsville, Ill., have been announced by W. H. Krome, president of the Bank of Edwardsville. The building will represent an expenditure of approximately $100,000 and it is expected to have it under way early in June. The first floor will be used for the bank and the upper floors for offices.

R. S. Hawes Reserve City Bankers' President

Richard S. Hawes, vice-president of the Third National, Saturday was elected president of the Association of Reserve City Bankers, at its first annual convention. Mr. Hawes has been a member of the clearing house committee, chairman of the local general arrangements committee and an active member of the association. The body was organized a year ago in Chicago and Mr. Hawes was one of the group who launched it. He is treasurer of the Missouri Bankers Association. L. S. Kiesewetter of the Ohio National of Columbus, was elected vice-president, together with the following directors: F. A. Crandall, National City, Chicago; L. P. Talley, Lumbermens National, Houston; Charles H. Ayres, Peoples State, Detroit; G. G. Moore, New England National, Kansas City, Mo.; J. S. McHenry, Fourth and First National, Nashville, Tenn.; Victor F. Palmer, First National, San Francisco; and W. B. Taylor, Boatmens Bank, St. Louis. Cincinnati was selected as the meeting place for next year. The convention was closed with a banquet in the Planters Hotel at which dignified presidents and other officers of banking institutions from all parts of the United States served as waiters and chefs. Nearly three hundred bank officials were attired in the conventional garb of waiter or chef and mingled with the hotel attachés assigned to the convention feast. A smoker and entertainment followed. William T. Abbott of the Central Trust, Chicago, spoke. Many of the delegates arrived on Friday and were entertained at country clubs in the afternoon. Many were guests of Mr. Hawes, chairman of the committee on general arrangements, in the St. Louis Club in the evening; others attended the opera. A silver-mounted gavel, made of snakeroot wood, was presented to the association by St. Louis bankers.

National Bank of Commerce Sues H. C. Pierce

A suit has been instituted by the National Bank of Commerce against Henry Clay Pierce, of the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, to recover 10,000 shares of stock of the Nashville Terminal Company of Nashville, Tenn., or its equivalent, in the shape of a judgment for $1,525,000. In its petition to the court, the bank claims that the stock mentioned was pledged to it as security on a loan made in 1908, and that the stock is now in the possession of Mr. Pierce.

Make Rate Complaint

The St. Louis Cotton Exchange has filed with the Interstate Commerce Commission a complaint against the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe and connecting lines, which reach St. Louis from Oklahoma, charging that the rates on cotton to St. Louis from Oklahoma points are excessive, unreasonable and unjust and resulted in the loss of considerable business to the individual members of the exchange and the St. Louis market as a whole. The complaint charges that the railroads discriminate in favor of Memphis, Kansas City, Omaha, Chicago and other points.

Bankers whose customers have business at the St. Louis National Yards can realize full value of such business only through an account with this bank.

Rumored Retirement of B. F. Edwards

St. Louis, Mo., April 24th.—Ben F. Edwards, president of the National Bank of Commerce, has resigned, according to an announcement by the directorate late to-day. It is understood he will be relieved of active duty as head of the bank at once, and W. K. Bixby, chairman of the executive committee, will act as president. The bank, which is the largest in St. Louis, has upward of $50,000,000 deposits. The resignation of Mr. Edwards, it is stated, came as a climax to differences among the stockholders. Mr. Edwards began in the bank as a messenger. He became president five years ago. Mr. Edwards denied his resignation, saying "it is but the revival of an old rumor."

Banking Notes

In the delegation of Kansas City bankers who attended the second annual convention of the Association of Reserve City Bankers in St. Louis last week were: Eugene P. Davis and J. F. Meade, assistant cashiers of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce; George B. Harrison, vice-president of the New England National; Charles E. Waite, president of the Stock Yards Bank of Commerce; and H. L. Jarboe, Jr., president of the Drovers National.

OPPOSING THE NATIONAL GUARANTY

National guaranty of deposits is a financial ghost which will not down at the bidding of the banker or the expert. Banker opposition is scouted as of selfish origin, or over sensitiveness, or as a desire to keep the little fellows out of the game. The National Citizens League, nothing daunted, has come out with a quadruplet of reasons which ought to put sane, well-balanced members of congress in a thinking mood. The "reasons why we should not have guaranty of deposits" will be hard to answer and still harder to avoid.

The statement says the question of the guarantee of bank deposits has no place in the general problem of banking reform for the following reasons:

1. Losses from dishonest or incompetent banking are negligible.

2. It is unjust to ask the strong, well managed banks to guarantee the depositors of weak, badly managed banks against loss unless the former are permitted to supervise the operations of the latter. This would destroy the independent banking system.

3. There is always a guaranty fund for deposits. The capital and surplus of every bank, as well as the extra liability of stockholders, must be exhausted before depositors can lose.

4. The operation of guaranty laws is no longer a theory. Their inefficiency has been demonstrated.

The statement concludes with the following argument.

"If it were deemed expedient to provide any insurance against loss by depositors the orderly method would be to compel banks to take out policies. In that event the strong, well managed banks would get low rates and the others rates so high that they could not endure."

Senator Owen, at whom these "reasons" are aimed, is said not to contemplate a direct guaranty but the establishment of a fund out of which depositors in closed or failed banks can be paid at once. The senator thinks the use of this fund and of the visible assets of the failed bank would have a tendency to avert panics and to stop general bank runs which so often follow the closing of the doors of a single bank. The fund used for immediate payment would be repaid from the bank's assets as realized.

EVEN SUPREME COURT AFFECTED BY SPIRIT OF UNREST

That even the supreme court of the United States is not immune from criticism resulting from the public spirit of unrest was indicated by the remarks of one of its members, delivered recently at a private dinner in New York.

The spirit of reform and investigation is so prevalent nowadays that an arraignment of our courts and their methods of procedure excites but passing comment. Nevertheless, while there undoubtedly is an element of justification in the complaint against our judicial system, the consensus of opinion among intelligent people is that there are some extenuating circumstances to be taken into consideration before passing upon the indictment.

That there is maladministration of judicial offices in some instances will not be denied. Probably this can be traced to the control of those functions by outside interests having selfish ends in view. Occasionally it is due, perhaps, to incompetency.

Much of the popular clamor against court decisions can be attributed to ignorance of the underlying principles and conditions responsible for those decisions. Frequently the impulsive public is not fully cognizant of all the circumstances entering into the case and sometimes permits its judgment to be influenced by sympathetic considerations.

Many judicial decisions popularly believed to be erroneous are due not to corruption or incompetency of the judges rendering them, but rather to defective laws. A judge's duty is to adhere to the law as it really exists and not to render his decisions so as to conform to the law as he or someone else thinks it ought to be. The proper solution is to get at the root of the trouble and not treat it superficially.

Justice Holmes told how hard it is to give the best of one's heart, mind and intent to a case and then to have it charged that selfish interests dominated the decision. Like most of us, Justice Holmes believes that members of the U. S. supreme court are governed by the highest and purest of motives.

BRIGHT LITERARY SIDELIGHTS

Any book published by the great house of Harper Brothers probably is worth reading. They issue none of the doubtful or worthless type. Recently there have come from the Harper press two small books which it is thought will appeal to the banker-farmer, or farmer-banker and to the banker (and he is legion) with a son away at college.

"The Bend in the Road" by Truman A. De Weese tells how the city toiler may easily find that rare contentment which comes from living in intimate relation with the soil. To the same extent that the little volume adds to the lure of the country it should help those who have country places to a better appreciation and a fuller enjoyment of them. If the volume does anything it finds the way to a more contented life. It dissipates the belief that it requires wealth to acquire a country place or entire leisure to enjoy it. To the man who sees nothing but city streets and thinks of nothing but business it will open up the possibilities of a new world. Attention is called gently to the ways of the country assessor who always doubles the assessments of the city farmer who "farms one for fun." Revelations as to the shortcomings of city commission houses handling "farm stuff" are made as a setoff to the assessor. Altogether "The Bend of the Road" is good reading and will stimulate the back-to-the-farm movement wherever it is read. Bankers interested in getting good people on farms and good farmers to remain where they are will find ammunition in plenty in this little book.

"The Sojourner," by Robert Dull Elder, is a novel but true to life and will be enjoyed by every man with a boy in college, and perhaps by the boy himself. At college Jack Holliday passes through an unfortunate love affair in a purely human way. Jack is a fine fellow, just as fine as any college boy could be. His father casts him off, just as he should not have done, and Jack leaves Princeton under a cloud. He comes west, works hard, has trials and final success. He will please any reader and will be a revelation in advance of what might happen to any high-minded American boy. Perhaps the reading will help the father and it certainly will help the son. It is a clean, healthy tale founded on simple sentiment and clear thought.

MEMBERS OF LEGISLATURE INTERESTED IN GOOD ROADS

Harvey G. Riggs of Quincy, vice-president and cashier of the Mercantile Trust and Savings, visited Chicago Saturday last. Mr. Riggs attended the hearing granted by the members of the good roads committee of the Illinois legislature at Springfield on the Tice good roads bill, Wednesday, April 16th. He reports that there was much interest manifested on the part of members of the committee who were present, and expressed the hope that certain features of the Tice bill will be incorporated into state law, particularly the matter of state and county aid, state supervision, compulsory dragging of earth roads and the use of convict labor under the honor system in the preparation of road material and the actual construction of the roads.

Mr. Riggs very pertinently called attention to the fact that should this proposed law pass, the taxation for state aid will be borne largely by the inhabitants of the towns and cities and not fall entirely upon the land-owning class. This is the first legislative program touching upon the road subject where this proposition has been made.

Mr. Riggs urges all bankers in Illinois who are interested in the subject of road improvement to get in touch with their respective members of the legislature, and particularly those serving on the committee on roads and bridges and enlist their support of this reform.

"THE CHAUTAUQUA WAY"

Those contemplating the pleasure of foreign travel would do well to investigate the advantages afforded by membership in parties under the direction of The Chautauqua Tours. The petty annoyances and inconveniences incident to individual travel are appreciated more nowadays than formerly and the traveling public is beginning to realize that travel in a systematic, well-organized manner under the leadership of experienced conductors is the more desirable way.

The individual traveler of to-day becomes the victim of a horde of conscienceless couriers, guides, cabbies, etc., who prey upon his inexperience.

The benefit of having all the details of a trip attended to and relief from the responsibilities connected with travel is at once apparent to anyone who has traveled to any extent.

Interpretation is a necessity of intelligent travel. The tourist needs help. He needs someone to name things, but much more he needs someone to tell him the meaning of what he sees. He can be his own interpreter of the things he sees just as one can get an education without going to school; but thoroughness as well as economy of time and money argues for expert leadership in both undertakings.

The above are but a few of the things which render these organized travel tours desirable. Full information concerning them can be obtained by addressing The Chautauqua Tours (Inc.) Central Office, 1521 Marquette Building, Chicago; Executive Office, Post Bldg., Appleton, Wis.; Eastern Branch Office, Edwin H. Low's Agency, 1123 Broadway, New York City.

UNION TRUST COMPANY OF INDIANAPOLIS

Union Trust Company of Indianapolis, one of the leading trust companies of Indiana, shows paid-up capital of $600,000 and surplus and profits of $750,000. Their deposits are in excess of three millions, and total figures, including trust investments, are $14,563,106.

John H. Holliday, the president, is recognized as one of the leading financiers of Indiana and as a speaker and writer on financial subjects is considered an authority. Ross H. Wallace, the secretary and active bank man, has a good banking experience back of him, having had national as well as trust company training.

The board of directors of this institution is among the strongest in Indianapolis, including such names as Volney T. Mallott, chairman of the board, Indiana National, one of the oldest of Indiana bankers; C. H. Brownell, president of the Citizens National of Peru; I. C. Elston, president of the Elston National, Crawfordsville and Addison C. Harris, lawyer, Indianapolis, formerly Minister to Austria.

MUSCATINE BANKERS GIVE BANQUET

The bankers of Muscatine, in which city the members of Group 8, Iowa Bankers Association, met this week, tendered a fine banquet to the visitors at the Presbyterian church.

B. S. Alnutt, cashier of the Muscatine State, acted as toastmaster. The speakers were former Congressman A. F. Dawson, president First National; Wm. Heuer, cashier Union Savings, and F. B. Yetter, cashier Iowa National, Davenport; Senator Titus of Muscatine and W. G. Edens of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, Chicago. About 175 were present—the largest attendance they ever have had. The old officers were re-elected and Davenport was selected as the place for the next meeting.

Agricultural and Country Life Conference Called by Indiana Bankers Association

The Indiana Bankers Association is undertaking to prove its worth to its state through a movement that will be of lasting and immeasurable benefit to the people of that commonwealth by "fathering" a general state conference on the subject of agriculture and country life in Indiana, which will be held in Indianapolis on June 3d and 4th. Largely through the efforts of the association's committee on agriculture, the Indiana legislature at its last session adopted a vocational law, which opens the way for city and town schools to teach boys and girls practical trades and domestic science and in the country schools to teach farming and home economics.

The new law is to become operative in the Indiana schools next September. The purpose of the June conference is to explain the purposes of the law and to urge upon the people of the state the importance of helping to set it in motion in every public school that the whole state may reap the results which it offers through the boys and girls. The vocational instruction is to be made a part of the regular school courses and means very little additional cost to the taxpayers.

CHARLES L. GOODBAR
Crawfordsville, Indiana
Chairman of Indiana Bankers Conference on Agriculture and Country Life in Indiana

The Indiana association nearly two years ago, because of the close relations of the banks to the farmers of that state, began looking into Hoosier farming conditions. Through an agricultural committee, the association made inquiries as to whether the Indiana farmers were making the most of the soil resources, and if the state could not yield even greater harvests than it has in the past. The agricultural committee found that the state was not measuring up to its farming opportunities, that in many instances farms had from lack of intelligence become barren and unproductive. The committee's report at the last convention of the bankers' association was one of the chief subjects under discussion.

The officials of the bankers' association believe that the vocational law will, if not through the present farmers of the state, then through the boys who become farmers in the future, correct the farming conditions, for the law is mandatory in requiring that agriculture be made a part of the regular instruction in the schools. But it goes much further than this at once to overcome conditions which need to be corrected, for it points out the way under which each county may have an expert farmer whose mission it will be to help the farmers in solving their agricultural problems and give them scientific advice on fertilization, rotation of crops and similar subjects.

The June conference will in its discussions go much beyond the vocational law, although it will be the dominating note of the meeting. Farm credits, a subject of especial importance both to farmers and bankers, will have due consideration, and other subjects which will in any way help in the advance of country life in the Hoosier land will be discussed.

The plans for the conference are in the hands of many subcommittees, all of them working to the end of making it about the greatest educational meeting Indiana will have this year, and the meeting is expected to be far-reaching in its influence. The general committee has allied with it the officers of the Indiana Grain Dealers Association, Indiana Millers Association, Forestry and Conservation Associations, Federation of Agricultural Associations, Indiana State Board of Agriculture, Purdue University, state school of agriculture, Indiana University, union labor organizations, and Indianapolis Board of Trade and Chamber of Commerce. Gov. Samuel L. Ralston is a member of the general committee, as is Charles W. Fairbanks, former vice-president of the United States; Charles Greathouse, state superintendent of public instruction, and Mrs. Virginia C. Meredith, Indiana's most noted woman farmer and president of the Indiana Home Economics Association.

The Indiana Bankers Association committee on agriculture is especially active in promoting the conference. The chairman of the general committee is C. L. Goodbar, a Crawfordsville banker, and the other members of the agricultural committee are W. Bonner, Greensburg; R. S. Todd, Bluffton; F. H. Wilson, Michigan City, and John C. Zulauf, Jeffersonville.

The active work in preparation for the conference is being carried on from the headquarters of the Indiana Bankers Association, 501 Chamber of Commerce, Indianapolis, under the direction of Andrew Smith, secretary of the bankers' organization and also of the conference committee. The expenses of the conference will be met by the association.

It is expected that a number of bankers from other states will attend the conference especially to see what might be done in their home states for the development of agricultural resources, which in the end would mean greater banking resources and activities.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Kansas bankers have come to the assistance of the state in a peculiar predicament in which the administration finds itself on account of a disastrous fire in the binding twine factory of the state penitentiary at Lansing. The loss to building and equipment will amount to about $120,000 but there happens to be no fund available from which to draw the money to repay the damage and Governor Hodges deems it inexpedient to convene the state legislature in special session. This will not be necessary because a number of Kansas bankers have offered to advance the state all the money it may need in this emergency. Offers have come from the Waggener bank at Atchison for $25,000; from the Snyder bank at Leavenworth for $25,000; from the Citizens National of Topeka for $25,000; the Farmers State of Clay Center for $5,000 and the Bank of Topeka for $40,000. This ready response from the bankers of Kansas to the necessities of the present emergency is characteristic of their public spirit.

Dallas Bank to Increase Capital

At the general stockholders' meeting of the Guaranty State Bank and Trust Company in Dallas, Tex., last week it was voted unanimously to increase the capital stock from $600,000 to $1,000,000 by the issuance of 4,000 additional shares of stock. The surplus fund also will be increased to $350,000. New directors were added to the official roster by the election of John S. Heard, John A. Barnard, J. L. Long and F. T. Rembert. The Guaranty State was founded three and a half years ago with a capitalization of $400,000.

R. V. Tompkins Made Auditor of Dallas

R. V. Tompkins, cashier of Sanger Brothers Bank, has been nominated by the bank presidents of Dallas, Tex., as auditor of that city. This is in accordance with the commission law of Dallas. The bank presidents participating at the meeting were Royal A. Ferris, of the American Exchange National; R. H. Stewart, of the City National; George W. Riddle, First State; J. B. Adoue of the National Bank of Commerce, and S. J. Hay of the Dallas Trust and Savings. Mr. Tompkins was cashier of the Sanger bank, having been in the employ of that institution for many years.

Prominent Topeka Banker Resigns

After forty-two years of active service with the Bank of Topeka, twenty-six years as its cashier, J. W. Thurston has resigned and will become president of a new bank to be started in Topeka soon under the name of the Farmers National Bank. H. G. West, a former Junction City, Kan., banker will be cashier, and prominent Topeka men who are behind the new venture are Armine Fassler, Guildford Dudley, Paul Huycke, Carroll Merriam, Henry Auerbach, Mrs. Jonathan Thomas and Herold Chase. Mr. Thurston is one of the best known bankers in the Southwest and his resignation from the Bank of Topeka came as a great surprise to the officers and stockholders.

Agricultural Conference to be Held in Kansas City

Attention is called to the fact that the next conference of the agricultural committee from the bankers' associations from each of the various states will be held in Kansas City the last week in August. It is expected now that at least 300 delegates will be in attendance. Efforts will be made to bring a great number of bankers to this meeting to take part in the deliberations of the conference. Joseph Chapman, of Minneapolis, president of the conference and chairman of the agricultural committee of the American Bankers Association, has written that he expects the Kansas City conference to be the most important yet held.

Clearing House Designates Traveling Committee

Kansas City Clearing House Association last week named the following men as its traveling committee for the ensuing year: W. L. Buechle, vice-president of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce, for Missouri; J. C. English, cashier of the Traders National, for Kansas, and R. C. Menefee, treasurer of the Commerce Trust Company, for Oklahoma. It is the duty of the members of the traveling committee to keep track of all bankers' meetings in the states to which they are assigned and to keep local bankers informed. They also arrange special trains and transportation for those who attend these meetings. While attending group meetings in the several states, which occur in the spring and fall of each year, these committeemen help in arranging programs and in stimulating attendance. This is one of the several activities of the Kansas City Clearing House Association that makes that organization unique among institutions of its kind.

Kansas City Bank Opens New Quarters

In the midst of a floral setting never before equaled perhaps at any similar function in Kansas City, the officers and directors of the National Bank of the Republic held their opening reception in their new quarters in the Republic Building, Tenth and Walnut streets, last Monday morning. For many months the bank had waited for the completion of this structure and had been doing business in temporary quarters diagonally across the street. But it was the unanimous opinion of the thousands of visitors on the opening day that the event was well worth waiting for. Cashier Gray had thought it appropriate to have a few flowers and ferns about the rooms and offices and so he placed a modest order with local florists. But neither he nor any of the other officers was prepared for the floral inundation that came immediately after the opening hour. That friendly spirit which is so strongly manifest among Kansas City bankers toward each other was again expressed in the bountiful floral offerings that began to pile up faster than they could be received. Flowers of every variety and in all kinds of designs kept coming all morning. There were so many baskets and bunches that they had to be put on top of the cages and they covered floors and desks almost to the obstruction of business. Massive baskets that required tables for each were received from the Central National of St. Louis and the Continental-Commercial National of Chicago. The reception lasted all day and assisting ladies gave out more than 5,000 roses and carnations to the guests. It was estimated that fully 10,000 persons visited the institution. All the woodwork in the bank is of circassian walnut. Desks, tables and other furniture are of the same material.

First National in Strange Predicament

Although the First National of Kansas City had $3,607,000 in currency in its vaults the morning of Friday, April 18th, it couldn't cash the first check presented at the paying teller's window and was forced to suspend business nearly five minutes while President E. F. Swinney, seized his hat and hurried across the street and borrowed $40,000 from the New England National. The trouble was with the locks of the outside vault door. When the hour for opening the bank came, the regular officials proceeded to work the various combinations, but the door wouldn't open. It resisted all efforts of the bank men and expert safe men were called in who held a consultation. They decided that there was nothing for it except to bore a hole in the big door in order to get at the levers. So they were instructed to go to work. All day Friday these men worked and all night that night. The bank resembled a barracks with the special guards and subordinate bank officials sleeping at their posts waiting for the opening of the vault. It was late Saturday afternoon before the work was completed and for two days the First National did several millions of dollars of business without a cent of visible capital except what had been loaned by accomodating neighbors. The standing of the First National happens to be so good, however, that it would have had its cages piled with currency merely for the asking.

Central West Notes.

Word has been received at Muskogee, Okla., that the United States circuit court of appeals has affirmed the conviction of W. L. Norton, former president of the American National of Bartlesville, who was sentenced to serve seven years for violating the provisions of the national banking laws.

Plans have been drawn for an extensive remodeling of the quarters of the German American National of St. Joseph, Mo., at Seventh and Felix streets. The improvements will call for an expenditure of about $12,000.

G. W. Buford, one of the oldest bankers in Oklahoma, died at his home in Enid last week after a brief illness. For years he was president of the First National of Mulhall, Okla. and later organized the Security State of Enid.

T. E. Russell, for twenty years cashier of the First National of Pittsburg, Tex., died last week.

The Muskogee, (Okla.), County Bankers Association held a meeting last week and the principal address was made by Carr Peterson of Haskell on the relations of the bank to agriculture.

Merchants and Farmers First State and the German American Bank of Muenster, Tex., have consolidated with A. Grube, president and William Hamerth, cashier.

The comptroller of the currency has received an application for the conversion of the Colbert (Okla.) State, into the First National Bank of Colbert with a capital of $25,000.

An application has been made for a charter for the Victoria (Tex.) National with a capital stock of $500,000. The officers are James F. Welder, president and F. S. Buhler, cashier. The bank succeeds the First National of that place.

Stockholders of the Central State of Enid, Okla., have elected the following officers: George A. Gensman, Ed. Aaron, George Southard, George Meade, and A. E. Stephenson. The bank will open for business May 1st.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Immense possibilities for development of eastern Washington resources are opened up by the passage of the logged-off lands bill by the recent legislature.

Seven hundred thousand acres of splendid land are made available for settlement under conditions very advantageous to the man of small means. This land is largely in Spokane, Stevens, Pend Oreille, Chelan, Okanogan, Ferry, and Asotin counties.

S. H. Anschell, chairman of the logged-off lands committee of the Inland Empire Federation of commercial clubs, believes 20 per cent of this cut-over timber land will be taken up by settlers before June, 1914, and that the state will have the remainder in readiness for the expected influx of foreigners following the opening of the Panama Canal.

The law provides that the county commissioners may submit to the voters the proposition of creating an agricultural development district, which shall be co-extensive with the limits of the county. A district need not include all the county. The powers of the agricultural development district will be exercised through a commission of three members, serving without pay.

An individual owner of logged-off lands may sell to the state, through the commission, for a maximum of $20 per acre. The state then will clear the land and the original owner has the preferential right of buying it back for the price he received, plus the cost of clearing. He will have 20 years in which to make payments, at 6 per cent interest. An owner of lands may sell any amount to the state, but 20 acres is the maximum amount he will be permitted to buy back after improvement.

The law provides that the commissioners shall cause all lands in their possession or control to be subdivided into the smallest practicable tracts, in order to provide for as many settlers as possible, giving preference whenever practicable to resident householders with families.

Unanimous indorsement of the Spokane Fruitgrowers' Company has been officially given by the Spokane Clearing House Association. At its last meeting the association adopted the following resolution: "We are convinced that owing to the enormously increased acreage of orchard now coming into bearing only through the most perfect organization can the fruitgrower hope to realize sufficient for his crop to make the industry profitable. In no other way can we see the possibility of establishing the credit of the grower so as to provide for his family needs during the growing, handling and marketing of his product. We believe the organization as planned conforms to the requirements of so large an undertaking and promises to provide for the needs of the industry at this time."

Throughout the Spokane country local growers' organizations are joining the broader movement, and indications point to a successful conclusion of plans started at last year's National Apple Show, in Spokane.

City Treasurer Arthur A. Lewis has resigned his position, to take effect May 16th. He will be appointed by Governor Ernest Lister to the state public service commission. Mr. Lewis has been a resident of Spokane for about ten years. He was deputy county treasurer under George Mudgett's administration, and served in other official capacities before securing his appointment as city treasurer under Commissioner of Finance Robert Fairley. He acted as campaign manager for Governor Lister both before and after the primaries.

Julius Galland, president of the Northwest Loan and Trust Company, returned this week from a trip around the world, begun October 25, 1912.

To encourage diversified farming Spokane banks have been asked to co-operate in a plan adopted by the Prosser (Wash.) State Bank, which is interesting farmers of Benton county in a series of corn tests for material to be used for seed purposes. J. F. Sears, cashier of the bank, has secured the co-operation of nearly all the bankers of Benton county. Arguing that Washington pays more for meats, butter and eggs, brought in from other states, than its total wheat and fruit production is worth, the bankers are urging diversified farming as a solution. Mr. Sears states that the growers in the Walla Walla country have produced 100 bushels of corn per acre and it is believed corn growing is feasible in many other parts of the state where it generally has been regarded as useless heretofore.

Clearings of Spokane banks for the three months of 1913 ending March 31st show a gain over the same months in 1912 of $1,272,318, according to the quarterly statement issued by Bradstreet's. This is in spite of the fact that March clearings this year fell off $428,432 below those of March a year ago. This is easily explained by the unusually backward spring this year. On the whole the quarter's clearings are regarded as a most favorable indication of better business conditions. For the first quarter of 1913 clearings were $54,656,556; for the corresponding period of 1912 they were $53,384,238.

Calhoun County State at Manson co-operated with the Manson Democrat of that city in observing the third birthday of the bank. The newspaper published a handsomely illustrated supplement devoted to the pictures of the officers and directors with statistics of its growth and other important items attractively displayed. The supplement was printed in two colors.

According to Des Moines bankers who attended the meeting of Group One at Holstein April 17th, the latter was one of the best sessions of its kind in many years. To begin with, the Sioux City bankers, along with others from northwest Iowa who gathered there, went to Holstein on a special train, remained throughout the program and ball which closed the events of the day, then returned on the same special. Upon arrival at Holstein, the visiting ladies were taken to the homes of Glen M. Gracey, H. C. Kuchel and C. J. Wohlenberg, Holstein bankers. The men went to Turner hall. At 12:30 luncheon was served at the latter place and at 1:30 Chairman Wohlenberg called the session to order. Mr. Wohlenberg gave the address of welcome to which W. P. Manley of the Security National, Sioux City, responded. J. H. Ingwersen, president of the Peoples Trust and Savings of Clinton, spoke on "The Banker and his Relation to the Community." John Fletcher of Chicago was on the program but could not be present. Mrs. Glen M. Gracey gave a reading. Kent C. Ferman, cashier of the Cedar Rapids National, spoke on good roads. Dan Norman, assistant cashier of the Continental Commercial National, Chicago, spoke on "Food Supply and Increasing Population." At the election F. C. Frisbee of Sheldon was advanced from secretary to chairman and George B. Perkins of Sac City was chosen secretary. The visitors were taken on a splendid fifteen-mile automobile drive in the vicinity of Holstein. Then at six o'clock, dinner was served at Turner hall. The evening wound up with a ball. It was a happy affair and C. J. Wohlenberg and his associate bankers proved themselves capital entertainers.

Des Moines bankers who attended included Cyrus Barr, Des Moines National; H. T. Blackburn, Iowa National; Grant McPherrin, Central State; C. T. Cole, Valley National; P. W. Hall, secretary I. B. A.; Clifford DePuy, editor of the Northwestern Banker.

Two Candidates for Iowa Presidency

Two candidates are in the field for president of the Iowa Bankers Association to be chosen at the state convention held here in May. D. L. Heinsheimer of the Mills County National at Glenwood is one and W. A. Hopkins of the State Savings at Lamoni is the other. As we stated last week there also are two candidates for treasurer and it looks as if the business meeting will be an interesting feature of the state meeting.

Iowa Convention

The disagreement as to whether or not the bankers attending the state convention shall go to Ames as a feature of the session has been adjusted amicably. The executive council voted to go to Ames the afternoon of the first day. The Des Moines Clearing House Association did not fancy this idea and sent out cards asking the bankers whether they would prefer to go to a base ball game in Des Moines or to go to Ames. The replies were coming in rapidly when it was decided to compromise. So the bankers will go to the ball game the afternoon of the first day and to Ames the afternoon of the second day. W. C. Brown, president of the New York Central, will be at Ames and will speak. The ball game the afternoon of the first day will be played at Western League park and the Des Moines bankers will be hosts to all visitors.

STOCKHOLDERS GIVEN $450,000

Stockholders of the First National of Syracuse, N. Y., last week voted to increase the capital stock of the institution from $250,000 to $1,000,000. After the increase had been authorized the board of directors declared out of the surplus funds of the bank a cash dividend of $450,000, or 180 per cent, which can be applied on subscriptions for the additional stock. The new financing, the most important of the kind ever carried into effect in Syracuse, is applicable to stock of record April 15th. Holders of the existing stock have the right to subscribe to the increased stock in proportion to their present holdings. The new stock is to be sold at $120 a share. As a result of the action taken, the First National will have a capital of $1,000,000, a surplus of $500,000 and undivided profits of about $150,000, making the book value of the new stock approximately $165 a share.

BIG INCREASE IN SAVINGS DEPOSITS

The aggregate deposits of the eighteen Detroit national and state banks and trust companies, as shown in their statements of condition at the close of business April 4th, was $181,949,000. This is an increase of $4,977,000 over the deposits of February 4th and $13,776,000 over those of April 18, 1912. Five of the state banks and one trust company show increases of more than $1,000,000 for the year period.

ADDS TRUST COMPANY FEATURE

The Central National now has a capital stock of $150,000 and a surplus of 60,000. The new trust company probably will be the largest institution of its kind in the state outside of Baltimore, and it is expected that it will start business about June 1st.

COLUMBUS BANK BUYS NEW HOME

Beman Thomas, president of the Security Savings of Columbus, has announced the purchase by the bank of property opposite the present quarters of the institution where they will make their new home. The bank has outgrown its present quarters and needs larger and more commodious facilities. It has not been determined whether the bank will build an entirely new structure or remodel the one now standing.

EDMONTON NEWS

Edmonton Fire Insurance Association was formally organized at a meeting of 40 representatives of various companies in the Corona hotel the evening of March 30. The officers are: President, R. N. Frith; secretary, O. A. Davis; committee on rules and constitution, Robert Mays, E. C. Chauvin, O. A. Davis, E. C. Cope and E. F. Racey. H. H. Motley of Calgary discussed the insurance act recently passed by the legislature of Alberta. He explained that the government through its secretary will appoint a superintendent of insurance at a salary of $3,600 a year to see that the act is carried out and that every agent is registered and competent to carry on insurance business in Alberta. The association will invite the Calgary Union to join it in forming the Alberta Fire Underwriters Association.

Samuel Henderson, convicted on the charge of raising a check, drawn on the Merchants Bank of Canada by the firm of R. B. Hill, from $3.75 to $375, was convicted in the district court in Edmonton on March 31st and sentenced by Judge Taylor to serve three years in the Alberta penitentiary. Henderson came here from Fernie, B. C. His method was to obtain a good check for a small amount and then raise the figures. The court said that as the prisoner was arrested while attempting to cash the check in the bank and therefore had not benefited by the forgery, the maximum penalty of 14 years would not be passed. However, he was a dangerous person to the community and as such would have to serve three years.

The Northern Transportation Company reports it has more than $100,000 worth of merchandise stored at Athabasca, 96 miles north of Edmonton, ready for shipment to the north country. The company has fourteen posts between Athabasca and the Mackenzie river, from which points several hundred thousand dollars worth of furs will be shipped in July.

NEW YORK CHAPTER

By Harold S. Schultz.

On April 12th about one hundred and twenty-five couples assembled at the Hotel Majestic for the annual dance which has been in the minds of all for so long a time. If you can picture one hundred and twenty-five young and happy bankers each in a freshly pressed dress suit with their pretty sisters, wives and sweethearts gracefully tripping the light fantastic to the music of an excellent orchestra in the largest ballroom of one of New York's palatial hotels you will have a clear idea of the good time that was experienced by everyone present.

Another great event was the Adding Machine contest on the 15th. The Burroughs Adding Machine Company conducted the contest and furnished the prizes which were: a handsome silver cup to be owned by anyone winning the contest three times and to be kept in the meantime by New York Chapter; $20 in gold to the winner; $15 in gold second prize; $10 in gold third prize; $5 in gold fourth prize. The race was spirited and the crowd was very enthusiastic. The successful contestants were as follows: G. L. Becker, National Park Bank, first prize; W. A. Skiffington, Irving National, second prize; C. S. O'Connell, Bank of Flatbush, third prize; T. F. Fitzpatrick, National Bank of Commerce, fourth prize.

Arkansas Convention

Twenty-third annual convention of the Arkansas Bankers Convention was held Wednesday and Thursday of this week in the auditorium of the Hotel Marion, Little Rock.

The program consisted of three sessions—one Wednesday morning and two Thursday. The first morning session there was an address by Col. Henry Exall, president of the Texas Industrial Congress, Dallas, which was listened to with much interest by those in attendance. Other out-of-the-state guests and speakers included the Hon. A. M. Young, formerly bank commissioner of Oklahoma, who was billed to discuss "Some of the Mistakes we Make." Fred W. Ellsworth of the Guaranty Trust, New York, whose address will be found elsewhere in this edition of THE CHICAGO BANKER, told of the splendid work which is being accomplished by the American Institute of Banking; John M. Davis, recently appointed bank commissioner for Arkansas, outlined the policy of his department and Major Clifton R. Breckinridge read a valuable paper on "Our Improvement Districts and Their Dangers."

The annual banquet of the association was the main feature of the entertainment during the convention, being held Wednesday evening at eight o'clock in the banquet hall of the Marion. Wednesday afternoon an automobile ride was given the delegates, guests and their ladies over the city.

As an incident of the convention a meeting of Arkansas members of the A. B. A. was held for the purpose of selecting a member of the executive council, a vice-president for the state and a member of the nominating committee. Meetings of the respective groups of the association also were held. The executive council held its session at 8:30 P. M. Tuesday in the Travelers' Rest Room of the Marion.

The program committee, consisting of Chairman George W. Rogers, J. R. Vinson and Moorhead Wright, and the entertainment committee, composed of Chairman E. T. Reaves, R. M. Butterfield, E. F. Hussman and Sidney L. Kahn, are entitled to especial commendation for the work which they did.

Officers of the association the past year were: President, Charles G. Henry, cashier Arkansas Bank and Trust, Newport; vice-president, J. S. Pollock, president Arkansas Savings, Little Rock; secretary, Robert E. Wait, president Citizens Investment and Security Company, Little Rock; treasurer, C. S. Lemons, cashier Bank of Wynne and Trust Company, Wynne.

The bank robber who was shot and killed at Barnes, Kan., on March 29th, after he had killed Cashier Brown, has been identified as Frank Norton, formerly a cook at a hotel in Waterville, Kan.

The Texas banking department has authorized the Hibernia Bank and Trust Company, of Hibernia, to do a general trust business. The capital stock is $100,000.

George W. Allen on Banking Conditions in Florida

Delegates to the Jacksonville convention hear their president tell of the great prosperity of the state. Favors currency reform. Likes American Institute of Banking and wants a "Blue Sky" law and more stringent bank act in Florida

It is a great pleasure to-day to hold our annual convention as the guest of the bankers of Jacksonville, for the heart of every true Floridian swells with justifiable pride when he reflects on the history of the metropolis of Florida,—a city celebrated for its hospitality as well as for its splendid growth in commercial and financial supremacy.

We have cause to congratulate ourselves upon the abundant evidence that the past year has been in the main marked by prosperity in all lines of business. The banks of Florida in number and resources have kept pace with the development of the state, and the general prosperity of the state is reflected in the present condition of the banks. I want to call your attention to the astonishing increase in our banking resources. In 1880 deposits in national and other banks amounted to only $444,492; in 1890 to $4,216,692; in 1900—$10,150,272.

The banking power of the state of Florida, up to and including June 14, 1912, as represented by capital, surplus, and other profits, deposits and circulation, of national, state, savings, private banks, and loan and trust companies, taken from the report of the comptroller of the currency recently published, and based upon figures furnished by 204 banking institutions of the state, shows a total sum of $94,479,300.14. Of this amount $18,826,698.55 is represented by capital stock, surplus and undivided profits; and $68,297,918.91 deposits; all other liabilities being $7,354,682.48. This record of progress is astonishing, but it is not equal to what the rate of growth will be during the next thirty years if the people of the state and their friends, co-operate and work in unison.

Favors Currency Reform

Fifty years ago—to be precise, February 25, 1863—the National Bank Act of the United States became a law. In these days, the defects of the act, as it now is written, are much exploited, and the need for its radical amendment undoubtedly is vital to the business interests of the country. Yet, the national bank system has performed incalculable service since its organization. Born in response to the imperative financial necessities of the federal government in the civil war, (for, in granting the note issuing privilege to these banks, the government made a market for its bonds which secured bank circulation), the system has been successful in the years since the war in meeting, for the most part, the requirements of the enormous industrial and commercial development of the country.

Not only has this development been one of the monumental facts of American history, but the national bank system has passed through several financial panics without collapse. All this is to be said to its credit. Certainly it has been an immense improvement upon the chaotic state bank system which existed between the downfall of the old United States Bank and the Civil War. The recent growth of the country, and fifty years of experience, simply have demonstrated that the time has come to perfect it, and thus make it adequate to the unmistakable requirements of the half century to come.

This banking system, which originally superseded the state system, has not permanently superseded them, for a great body of banking under state supervision has risen by its side. The dream of one banking system for the whole country has not materialized, although that for uniformity of the currency has been achieved.

The imperative need for improvement in our banking system requires no demonstration. The panic of 1907 furnished an object lesson which brought conviction to every thoughtful business man and banker.

In view of the agitation and discussion which have been going on for a number of years concerning the defects in our financial system, and the reforms which are imperatively needed, it would be difficult to say anything which has not been said already or to contribute a thought which has not been expressed by others in a better way.

The question of improving our banking and currency system is a practical legislative

GEORGE W. ALLEN
President of the Florida Bankers Association and of the First National of Key West question, and with the wide interest being manifested at this time by the people generally it fairly may be expected that public sentiment will be so crystalized that congress will enact the necessary legislation in the immediate future.

Florida Needs a "Blue Sky" Law

We should have some legislation in this state to protect the public against its own weakness. I refer to the means by which the public is tempted by the prospect of quickly acquired wealth to part with its money in exchange for securities that are steeped in fraud. It is well known that Kansas already has led the way in state legislation in this respect with its "Blue Sky" law—a statute which has attracted much attention. It was stated at the recent annual convention of the investment bankers of America, in New York City, that plans for similar legislation were known to be developing in Ohio, Maine, Washington, Oregon, Nebraska, Indiana, Massachusetts and Illinois.

The Kansas law got its picturesque name from the fact that the makers and marketers of bad securities were conceived of as clever rascals gifted in capitalizing a thing so intangible as the blue sky.

The report of the chief inspector of the post-office department for last year shows that the "fraudulent schemes" promoted merely by the men arrested took away from the public approximately $100,000,000. No one who receives in his mail the circulars of these companies can doubt that the actual losses of the people in the fake securities they purchase are enormous; and the federal act prohibiting the use of the mails for swindling promotion schemes is now about the only protection afforded the American people against plundering of this character.

Some assistance from the state for the large body of innocent perhaps guileless persons of moderate means or small savings, whose life does not train them to pass intelligent judgment on the values of corporate investments, seems to be required. In no other way, apparently, can the swindlers be checked seriously in their operations.

State Banking Law Defective

The new banking law of New York state makes it a misdemeanor to give an incorrect statement of financial resources to a bank when negotiating a loan. This law is effective in that state against the practice of business men who obtain credit through exaggerated statements of their assets. The law applies also to statements made by those who want to discount a receivable account or to sell a promissory note. This legislation was enacted at the suggestion of the American Bankers Association and I think it would be well for our association to give some consideration to making recommendations for legislative action along the same lines.

Pays Compliment to American Institute

About fifteen years ago the American Bankers Association authorized the organization of an educational branch of the association, which was called the American Institute of Bank Clerks. The name since has been changed to the American Institute of Banking. The institute now comprises over twelve thousand bank clerks, who are divided among the several chapters in the larger cities of the country. It has grown steadily in membership and importance since its organization, and I am informed that nearly eight hundred bank clerks, members of the institute, have been promoted to official positions in banks.

It now is recognized that banking, like other professions, requires a special training in order to fit one properly to discharge the duties and responsibilities of the profession.

LOUISIANA MEMBERSHIP

Secretary L. O. Broussard reported membership in the association as 218 with thirty-four non-members. Continual effort has been made, not only by the secretary but by all officers of the association and by group officers to induce all the banks in the state to join the organization and it is believed that substantial progress has been made in this direction.

Florida Convention

Twentieth annual convention of the Florida bankers held April 24th and 25th in the Seminole Hotel, Jacksonville, drew out a large attendance. There were morning and afternoon sessions both days, the convention being called to order Thursday morning by President George W. Allen at nine o'clock.

After the annual address of the president, which will be found elsewhere in this issue of THE CHICAGO BANKER, George R. DeSaussure read his report as secretary and treasurer, being followed by those of the executive council, legislative committee and John T. Dismukes, member of the A. B. A. executive council from Florida. Addresses the first day were by Major J. R. Slattery, U. S. engineer corps, who told of some of the possibilities of waterway development, and A. S. Hough, editor of the Times-Union of Jacksonville, whose subject was "Some Things Just Ahead."

Thursday afternoon a meeting of Florida A. B. A. members was held. Friday morning F. P. Fleming of Fleming and Fleming, attorneys, Jacksonville, discussed the negotiable instruments act, and there were short talks by representatives of the state comptroller's office, followed by the election of officers. Friday afternoon James D. Stuart spoke on commercial conditions in Florida. After reports of convention committees and transaction of new business adjournment was taken.

Officers of the association during the past year were as follows: President, George W. Allen, president of the First National, Key West; vice-president, J. J. Heard, president Heard National, Jacksonville; secretary and treasurer, George R. DeSaussure, vice-president of The Barnett National, Jacksonville.

Possibilities of Waterway Development in Florida

J. R. Slattery, a major of engineers in the U. S. army, told the Florida bankers at the Jacksonville convention some good news on the possibilities of waterway development in Florida. He said in part:

"Lack of time and fear of overtaxing your patience forbids my discussing in detail the possibilities of waterway developments on the west coast, and waterways connecting the two coasts and what the proposed canal on the east coast would do for that coast and what an intracoastal canal from the Caloosahatchee to the Suwanee, with ports at Charlotte Harbor, Tampa and possibly, eventually, some point further north, together with canals across the state by way of Lake Okechobee, in the south, and the Withlacoochee and Ocklawaha rivers in the north, would do for the west coast. Such a network of canals would parallel nearly every railroad in the state and probably reduce wonderfully the cost of transportation. Such waterways would cost many millions, but probably not half so many millions as the railroads have invested in the state.

"Even with waterways provided, however, the full benefit would not be realized unless Floridians rendered such support to boat lines as would enable them to get a foothold and operate with reasonable profit, even though at the beginning this involved some upsetting of existing methods and arrangements and some expense. The perfect organization of the railroads enables them to take care of themselves, but a new boat line just starting out and lacking such organization needs the support of producers and shippers, and if such a boat line were given sufficient support to enable it to establish adequate service, the resulting competition would many times repay those who supported it—perhaps in the beginning at some personal loss and inconvenience.

"I believe in the state of Florida and her future. Already the state is covered b ya network of railroads which have played no small part in the development of the state, notwithstanding the fact that it sometimes is hard to give due credit for it, especially when we are from one to seven hours late in reaching our destination, or when our crops rot in the cars on account of the congestion of freight. Already the need of cheaper transportation is being keenly felt in many parts of the state, and will become more and more essential as more of the state is developed. The question may well be asked as to what extent further development can take place with freight charges so high as they now are. I believe that its waterways are destined to play a great part in the future development of the state, and just as the development of these waterways is expedited or retarded so will the development of the state be advanced or hindered—just as this thriving, hustling city of Jacksville grew with the development of its harbor from a mere village when there were but six feet of water over the bar, to a city of seventy thousand with the completion of the twenty-four foot channel to her docks, and shows every sign of passing the hundred thousand mark with the completion of the thirty-foot channel two years hence.

"I hope to see, in the reasonably near future, practically the entire state under the most intense cultivation, all of these waterways fully developed and crowded with heavily laden boats bearing the produce of the state to market, and many thriving cities where there now are only small towns."

Florida and Latin-American Trade

At the Jacksonville convention A. S. Hough treated the bankers to a fine technical talk on the prospects of Latin-American trade for Florida. In his introduction he said:

"Perhaps the oldest of all questions for debate is which came first, the hen or the egg. The Greeks debated it more than a thousand years ago and when the discussion came to an end each man guessed for himself. We needn't bother about that now. We see that each keeps preceding and each keeps following the other. Hens make eggs and eggs make hens and the more there are of the one the more there will be of the other.

"We cannot say which creates the other, commodities for exchange or facilities for exchange. We know that facilities for exchange would be useless without commodities for exchange, and commodities could not be exchanged without facilities for exchange. We know that commerce and industry are interdependent, that they grow together and that in a reasonably long reach of time the growth of each will be in proportion to the growth of the other.

"Location has much to do with development. The cost of transportation has been declining steadily but it never can be wiped out. Except as there is a considerable difference in the cost of production or there is some artificial interference with the laws of trade, men buy things at the nearest place from which they can get them, thereby making a saving in cost of transportation, in time of delivery and in loss in transit."

Further he said in part: "The Panama Canal will greatly benefit all the Gulf coast states and, to some extent, also the states of the South Atlantic. The North Atlantic ports and the states in which they are situated have gained front rank because they are nearest to Europe with whose 400,000,000 people we do an enormous trade. But when this canal is in use, the southern ports, so far as the eastern part of this country is concerned, will be nearer to China and Japan, Australia and the Indies, than those of the North. China alone has more people than all of Europe. Japan and the countries referred to as the East Indies combined have more. Considering the distance to the foreign countries the difference between northern and southern ports will not be great, but southern ports will be nearer than northern to at least two thirds of the human race. We all know of the miracle wrought in Japan in one generation and we see in China the beginning of one as great.

"While the Panama Canal will benefit the Gulf coast of Florida more than the Atlantic coast of the state, an inviting field exists for trade through the South Atlantic ports. It is to the southeastward, taking in the West Indies and that part of the continent of South America that drains into the Atlantic. Jacksonville, Savannah and Charleston are about equidistant from the geographical center of the country but they are nearer to it than any other Atlantic ports. They are also about equidistant from the northeastern point of Brazil, around which ships must pass to reach the Atlantic front of that extensive republic or to reach Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay. Through these ports trade could be conducted between the United States and the eastern coast of South America over a shorter route than through any other ports. I believe that in twenty years a larger Latin-American trade will flow in and out through Florida than the total present volume of that trade.

"Of course the gateway to a trade by rail will not profit so greatly as if it were by water, but the volume of the trade will make the profit great to the state through which it enters this country. And so I believe that Florida soon will cease to stand on the confines of commercial activity and become the center of the trade of two continents."

West Sioux City is going to have a new bank starting May 1st. It will have a capital stock of $25,000. J. W. Schmidt, president of the Farmers Savings at Craig, Neb., and William Rembe, assistant cashier of the Citizens at Bancroft, Neb., are behind the institution.

OHIO NOTES

The Third National Exchange of Sandusky, O., will be in its elegant new home on Market Street, near Jackson, by May 1st. The new building is one of the finest in the state.

At a meeting of the board of directors of the City Savings Bank, Youngstown, a resolution was adopted to increase the capital stock from $100,000 to $200,000, also to change the name of the corporation from the City Savings to the City Trust and Savings Bank. The City Savings commenced business March 18, 1905, with total resources of $50,000. At the commencement of business April 17th, the resources had increased to $1,966,000. The bank has been under the same management from the date of its organization.

Herman R. Klauser, former president, and William E. Brown, former cashier of the defunct East Side Savings, Toledo, have been secretly indicted by the grand jury on charges of perjury. The indictments specifically charge them with certifying false affidavits to the state auditor regarding the condition of the bank while Klauser was acting as its cashier and Brown as a bookkeeper.

E. A. Powers, president of the Genoa Banking Company, Toledo, died at the Toledo hospital last week following an operation.

The CHICAGO BANKER

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking and Financial Interests of the Middle West

CHICAGO BANKER ON THE SITUATION

One of Chicago's leading bankers, a high official in one of the national institutions, said this week: "There is a prospect of moderate business only for the remainder of the year. The tariff revision is proving much more drastic than we expected and it, together with closeness of the money market, inevitably tends to curtail business activities. While the West is not as pessimistic as New York, this is due chiefly to the fact that sentiment here is influenced largely by crop conditions. Nevertheless the financial and industrial situation exerts a potent influence on general business and on sentiment. A bountiful winter wheat crop is assured and soil conditions are excellent for other crops. If the crops alone determined the future all would be well, for so far there is every reason to be hopeful of a more than ordinary crop production, though it is still too early to make definite predictions.

"Of course it is impossible to tell to what extent business will react. The revision of the tariff will create new conditions, and business and finance must adjust themselves accordingly. But if the reaction is as great as now seems probable, it will stimulate bank reserves materially, and will straighten out a banking situation which has been causing some anxiety. Should our crops turn out as large as now seems possible, the banks may have some difficulty in financing the harvest, but with a let-up in business and with the release of money used in those lines, together with a natural reduction in loans that would follow such a business reaction, the bank reserves should be rehabilitated sufficiently to enable us to care for the crops without serious trouble."

L. D. SKINNER AWAY

L. D. Skinner, senior assistant cashier of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, left Wednesday for Chariton, Ia., where he was formerly connected with the old banking house of Mallory and Perkins. After a visit of a few days at Chariton he will go on to Kansas City and then to Wichita, Kan., where before coming to Chicago he was the cashier of the First National. He then will visit Hutchinson, and attend the convention of the Kansas Bankers Association which meets there May 6th and 7th. Mr. Skinner has a large number of friends among the Kansas and Iowa bankers.

WEST TOWN STATE OPENS

West Town State opened for business Thursday at 2325 W. Madison Street. Capital is $200,000 and paid-in surplus $40,000.

Officers are: President, Robert Forgan; vice-presidents, George Beidler, J. E. H. Bradley; cashier, Scott Ransom.

THE ILLINOIS CONVENTION

The Illinois bankers' convention will be called, according to present plans, for the second week in September. The Chicago banks believe that this will be the most favorable time of year, and not too near the Boston A. B. A. date. President John D. Phillips and Chairman J. S. Aisthorpe were in agreement.

Members of Chicago Chapter Debating Team

The debating team of Chicago Chapter, A. I. B. defeated the PittsburghChapter boys in a debate held in that city, Saturday evening, April 19th. The subject of the discussion was "Resolved, that National Banks Should be Given the Powers of Trust Companies," the Chicagoans taking the negative. This is the second time in ten years that the famous Pittsburgh team has been defeated. The victory gives to Chicago the Champion A. I. B. team of America, since Pittsburgh has in turn defeated New York, Philadelphia, Cincinnati and all other comers. Mr. Roer is with the Fort Dearborn, Mr. Flooreen, the Central Trust Company of Illinois, and Mr. Gorby the Peoples Trust and Savings.

The Pittsburgh team was composed of Donald A. Mullen, Real Estate Savings and Trust, Albert T. Eyler, Union National, and George Rankin, Jr., Central National, Wilkinsburg, a suburb of Pittsburgh.

The Chicago boys were busy during the week receiving congratulations from their many friends.

TWO PER CENT GOVERNMENT FUNDS

Chicago depository banks do not like the McAdoo order demanding 2 per cent interest on bond-secured government deposits. In many cases such deposits would show a loss. One interested banker said: "It would be far more profitable for banks to use their government bonds in taking out circulation. They could get the same amount of cash in that way and at less than half the cost. The cost on government deposits is to be 2 per cent. The tax on and the expense of circulation amount to three-quarters of 1 per cent. The difference in the cost on the same amount of funds to the banks, therefore, is 1¼ per cent."

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

THE "North Dakota Banker," Secretary W. C. Macfadden's paper, has a glowing account of the late "Conference of Central States Bankers Associations" held at Chicago, but makes two singular and noticeable omissions.

AMONG the things done and "done-for" it doesn't even mention the resolution adopted nor the able paper by the head of the Illinois College of Errors on "A National Federation of etc., etc."

'TIS a cruel, cruel world when he who organizes an "uplift" meeting, collects funds for entertainment, reads the first and longest paper, makes the most motions and the last speech, isn't even mentioned in the valedictory.

LYDELL BAKER, editor of the Pacific Banker, is going to talk at nearly all of the coast state conventions this year, hence this "Look Out" notice.

HIS subjects are (speech the same in all cases): California, "The Lost Function of American Banking"; Idaho, "Landmarks of Financial America"; Oregon, "An Ideal Banker from Indiana"; Washington, "Old Nick Biddle, the Bank Monster."

OUR own D. R. Forgan who gets off each prepared address about five times, beats Baker in one respect. He lets the secretaries find the subjects, thus adding variety.

BY the way, secretaries who haven't had Mr. Forgan are guilty of an oversight.

ROLLIN P. GRANT will say, "How d' do" to his western friends who come down from Briarcliff next week in the bank's new home in that wonder of wonders—the Woolworth building.

COL. E. F. SWINNEY and his federal legislative committee met in Washington yesterday (Friday) and after interviewing the congressional committees will go direct to Briarcliff Lodge to report conditions to the executive council on Tuesday next.

THE currency commission has not been called together and will not likely meet until currency legislation takes some decisive shape at Washington.

THE "extra car" to Briarcliff has such notables as Lucius Teter, W. J. Fenton, T. J. Davis, Emory W. Clark and George W. Rogers, all late comers.

EVERYONE is sorry that C. G. Hutcheson of K. C. has not recovered sufficiently from a recent fall, to join the annual parade on May 3d. He was one of the "live ones" on last year's special.

THE police of Chicago raided a "Blue Sky" finance "bond house" on Saturday last and found $25,000,000 in stocks and five cents in money. Attention of J. N. Dolley.

A PROSPECTUS was about to be sent out embracing a twenty-five million bond issued to be used—"one third to take over subsidiary companies, one third to retire bonds of subsidiary companies and one third for future extensions and betterments."

IT was a traction enterprise and all the common stock and control of the preferred went to the promoters.

"NOTICE to Chicago banks" from the Illinois Bankers Association says "reservations can be made on special car to the ten group meetings May 13th, to return after third trip June 6th." Where or when the group meetings are to be held not furnished. This is fully as brilliant as any of the past accomplishments.

THE timely topic, "The Needed Currency Reform," is discussed by Amos K. Fiske as the leader of the May number of the North American Review.

MELVIN A. TRAYLOR, vice-president of the National Stock Yards (Ill.) National has made an exhaustive and comprehensive study of the beef cattle situation from a worldwide standpoint.

MR. TRAYLOR is himself a native of Texas, our greatest cattle state, and for years has had a close personal insight into the industry from all angles. He shows that from all information available the full beef supply shortage of the world has not yet been realized and something must be done to stem the tide else beefsteak will be ere long beyond the reach of all save the more wealthy classes.

HIS suggestion that the country banker enter into a campaign of education whereby the farmer of the Middle West be encouraged to raise his own stock cattle, and furthermore be aided financially in this line, is the most logical solution of the shortage problem that we have yet seen presented.

MR. TRAYLOR addressed the St. Clair County Bankers Association on this subject and it is likely that copies of his paper will be available shortly to help stir matters up a bit.

TO members M. B. A.: It is not uncommon for bogus telegrams to be used as a means of securing money on worthless checks or drafts. Members are warned of the danger in paying money upon telegraphic authority without verifying the genuineness of the telegram.—W. F. Keyser, Secretary.

MR. KEYSER'S striking yellow "warning" card should be in the hand of every banker in the country. The game works by telephone, also. Has been pulled off in some of our largest cities.

MANY of the council members will go down from the Briarcliff meeting to attend the third annual trust company section dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria on Thursday evening, May 8th.

SECRETARY P. S. BABCOCK announces one thousand acceptances, which will bring the banquet attendance up to usual in size.

AMONG the speakers will be the Hon. James M. Beck, ex attorney-general of the United States, Col. William R. Harvey, and Patrick Francis Murphy, all brilliant after-dinner speakers of national prominence.

ONE of our constituents from a "grain state" says, "I will not go this year but will see a good show and buy a spring suit with the rest of the money."

DOWN at the Tennessee convention a resolution was put through indorsing Wm. A. Law of Philadelphia for the A. B. A. first vice-presidency at Boston convention.

H. J. HAAS of Philadelphia was there and immediately had copies of the resolution sent out to all state secretaries in states about to hold conventions.

MR. HAAS is an active little fellow and has been all over in Mr. Law's interests. Mr.

Law himself was on the ground, being a speaker on the Tennessee program. Thus his entry into the race becomes semi-official. The resolution is as found in the next three paragraphs:

"WHEREAS the American Bankers Association at the convention held at Detroit, Michigan, September 10-13, 1912, amended Article III, Section 2, of the constitution to read as follows:

"'DURING the period of one association year, after his term shall have expired, the chairman of the executive council shall not be eligible for re-election by the association to any other office, provided, however, that this shall not be effective until the year 1913.'

"THEREBY changing the former custom of nominating the chairman of the executive council for first vice-president of the association and making it necessary to nominate some one other than the chairman of the executive council; therefore, be it resolved that this association instruct its member of the nominating committee to support William A. Law, vice-president First National Bank, Philadelphia, Pa., for first vice-president of the American Bankers Association at the election to take place at the convention to be held in Boston, Mass., October 6 to 10, 1913."

PREPARED copies of the resolution were mailed immediately, as stated, to all secretaries in "open" territory. The letter reads:

"I ENCLOSE herein copy of resolution passed yesterday by Tennessee Bankers Association. I trust it will be agreeable for your association to pass a similar resolution, and if not it will be nearly as well if you elect as your member of the national nominating committee, some one who will vote for Mr. Law at the Boston convention. Thanking you for your kindly interest, I am, very truly yours,—(Signed) H. J. Haas."

THE politics of the thing is very ardent. But the state association cannot bind, of course, the A. B. A. members in any state, who really have the say. The A. B. A. convention at Boston might retort, if not better advised, by indorsing a list of men for the presidential office of the various state associations.

IT would be quite as logical as what was done in Tennessee. Only the five hundred A. B. A. member banks of Tennessee have anything official to say. The Tennessee association as such simply is an independent organization.

THE whole thing reminds one of how a certain candidate for chairmanship of the council at the New Orleans convention sent a special emissary to see every member of the council in every state to get him to sign a special written pledge.

THE thing failed but what Mr. Durham did not accomplish may be pulled down by Mr. Haas?

"Does Double the Work with the Same Help"

This new Burroughs Subtracting-Statement machine prints dates, subtracts Checks, adds Deposits, gives New Balance, detects and marks Overdrafts, places the different items in the proper columns, and does it all automatically.

The Operator presses the keys corresponding to the amount on Check or Deposit, the machine does the balance of the work—the thinking.

Besides the saving in time and the better service given customers through machine-made statements, is the advantage of having an absolute check on all ledger postings and balances.

And beyond this extraordinary work—this thinking work with the human element of inaccuracy left out—this machine will do the ordinary Bookkeeping machine work also.

No machine in the big Burroughs line more forcibly illustrates the advantages of machine over hand work—in fact this machine is to other adding machines what other adding machines are to hand work.

The Travelers Bank and Trust Company, of Atlanta, Georgia, says: "We are getting double the work with the same help; the machine has made good on every claim."

Our Bank Statement Folder shows how banks are using this Burroughs—send for it—also let us show you on your own work the many labor and brain-saving possibilities of this new Burroughs. No cost or obligation.

E. G. McWilliam Tells Bankers of Their Opportunity to Combat Extravagance

Secretary of Savings Bank Section of the A. B. A. speaking at New Jersey convention tells of the prevalent extravagance of our people; believes bankers partly responsible for this condition and points out opportunity presented them to effect an improvement. Discusses educational campaign

E. G. McWilliam, secretary of the Savings Bank Section of the American Bankers Association, was one of the principal speakers at the New Jersey convention, taking for his topic, "The Bankers' Opportunity." Mr. McWilliam fully lived up to his reputation as an effective and entertaining speaker. He said, in part:

A recent investigation by a New York newspaper into the matter of hoarding has led them to the conclusion that the amount of hoarded money in this country is not far from $300,000,000. Think of it! $300,000,000 taken right out of commercial channels with the attendant curtailment of credit, through the ignorance of people who do not realize that they are losing more than anyone else by their methods. The reason for this is distrust. Distrust of all banks by a large portion of our population largely made up of foreigners. It is estimated that there are over fourteen million foreigners in this country, at least ten per cent of whom are laborers given to hoarding. A prominent Italian banker of New York is authority for the statement that the average Italian laborer saves about $200 per year, and if only half the Italian population alone in this country kept their money about them or hid it, as many of them do, the amount mentioned would be accounted for, so it is safe to say that $300,000,000 is a conservative estimate of hoarded money in this country.

Therefore, I say, gentlemen, that here lies not merely the bankers opportunity, but something which should be considered his privilege and his duty, for so long as these ulcers are permitted to thrive in the midst of our economic being, just so long will these millions be diverted from our financial institutions and our economic growth as a nation retarded. It is with these things in mind that the Savings Bank Section of the American Bankers Association has instituted a campaign of education in thrift and for the curtailment of extravagance among the people of the United States, and I am here to-day earnestly to solicit your co-operation in this work.

I have been accused by some of over-estimating the necessity for such a work, and my attention frequently has been called to the tremendous amount of our savings deposits and the theoretical amount which each individual in this country possesses; but, gentlemen, I believe we must scratch deeper than that and judge the thrift of any country, not by its amount of savings, but rather by its ratio of savings depositors of population and when we compare our country with other great countries upon this basis, that something should be done is very apparent. For instance, the approximate amount of the savings of this country, together with the number of savings depositors, is $7,631,193,707.60 with 21,381,840 depositors.

I have not included life insurance in this estimate, although I am aware that the United States is the greatest insurance field in the world, there being no less than 25 million individuals insured in this country. I have not done this because it has not been considered in figuring the thrift of other countries, and as in the figures I have quoted are included all of the other aids to thrift in this country, while only depositors in savings banks alone have been considered in foreign countries, I feel that the comparison I am about to make is a fair one.

From the figures I have given it will be noted that based upon our present estimated population of 100 millions, our percentage of savings depositors is but a trifle over 21 per cent as compared with a percentage ranging from 38 to 51 in some European countries.

It is interesting to note that our population is greater than the combined population of those great industrial countries, England and France, yet they together have over 28 millions of savings depositors, while we have but 21 million. It is also interesting to note that apparently as the wage scale increase, thrift decreases, for in each of the four great countries cited, it will be found that the one with the largest percentage of savings depositors has the smallest wage scale, and that as the wage scale increases, the savings depositors decrease, until we come to our own country, with the highest wage scale in the world, and yet a percentage of savers far smaller than that of our neighbors. And when we scrutinize the situation in this country more closely and observe that nearly one half the savings deposits and about one third of the savings depositors are found to be in the mutual savings banks of New York and New England, it behooves us as bankers to sound a warning note, not merely because of our own future interests, but because upon the thrift of its people depends the life of the nation.

I believe if the bankers of every state will do their share, while the results will not be immediately apparent, it will be only a question of a few years when we shall be regarded as the world's example for thrift instead of extravagance. Yes, even in this great little state of Jersey, without disparaging its thrift, there is much which may be accomplished not merely among the classes I have mentioned, the foreigner, the improvident, and the wildcat victim, but probably among the children the most effective work may be done through the school savings bank in connection with which they learn thrift by practising it and also may learn something of what is equally important, business methods.

I wish to call your attention to what has been done in New York. Through co-operation with the supervisor of lectures of the board of education in that city, we arranged a series of lectures which have been given in Cooper Institute upon the subject of thrift from the standpoint of the various aids thereto at hand, such as the commercial bank, trust company, savings bank, postal savings bank, insurance company, savings and loan association, thrift association, and regarding co-operation; the idea being to tell the people in terms which they can understand, exactly the nature and functions of all of these institutions, explaining how they should be used, and their relation to the people. Never before in this country have bankers gone to the people, talked to them frankly of their business and answered questions freely. It has taken courage to stand before those Cooper Institute audiences which averaged over five hundred persons of all nationalities, political and religious creeds, and answer their questions, the majority of which indicated antagonism, but the speakers have been unanimously enthuiastic over their experiences and believe with us that a new relation eventually will be established between the financial institutions and the people if these meetings be continued. And we sincerely hope they will be, both in New York and the other cities.

Now please do not misunderstand me as advocating the "tight-wad route," for I consider the miser and the spendthrift alike, in that they are a menace to any community. Americans have the reputation of being the best spenders in the world, as a matter of fact we are the worst, despite the fact that as a nation we are the greatest money-makers. It is one thing to be known as a generous spender, and quite another to have the reputation of a "waster," the former commands respect and confidence while the latter will eventually be shuned socially and commercially.

I am not a "calamity howler" for I have unbound confidence in this glorious country of ours, but I do say that we as bankers are more or less responsible for this condition of affairs. The people through years of experience with stock banks which emphasize only the commercial, and mutual banks which apparently feel that they would be trespassing beyond the limits of that ultra conservatism which they have set up, to preach thrift which they were organized to encourage, I say that from this experience the people have come to feel as a whole that all financial institutions are antagonistic to their best interests, and that the banks have no interest in them except obtaining their money, unjust as such sweeping judgement may be.

For instance, under the caption "Discouragement of Thrift" on March 7th in the Evening Sun of New York said "Thrift is a plant that needs be hardy to prosper on American soil. There are many to scatter the seed but it falls for most part on barren ground. Insult and impertinence are the common lot of those who try to save their dollars and their dimes." And then went on to describe the experience of a man with two of the oldest savings banks in New York and a branch of the postal savings bank, at all of which he was treated with great discourtesy. The article concluded by saying "Now the moral of all this has little to do with the incivility of particular clerks. It touches on the whole broad practice of saving. Few men save for the pleasure of it. It is easy to discourage reluctant resolution. But saving is a national habit from which much good may come, and the saving that is wanted in this country is not the kind that deprives the circulating medium of its real uses by burying it under hearthstones and in mattresses, but that very kind which the inferior officers of savings banks seem most desirous of discouraging." And a few days later, the Morning Sun under the caption "The God Behind the Wicket," while admitting that "there are some savings banks where the depositor or withdrawer is treated as courteously as if he were a banker," comments along the same lines. I regret that in some instances I have noticed the same conditions, and while from practical experience I know that bank-clerks at times come into contact with people that the Angel Gabriel could not please, undoubtedly courtesy will accomplish more than any amount of printed matter and our boys should be cautioned to proceed on the theory that one "knocker" can do more harm than will be offset by a hundred "boosters," and that the ideal bank official must possess patience, tact and good nature coupled with a gentle firmness and alertness. Even the sensational newspapers of our great cities, ever on the alert to increase their circulation among the masses, cater to what they conceive to be the popular feeling regarding savings banks, especially, and to further their own selfish ends keep alive the flames of class hatred instead of endeavoring to educate their readers in these matters, thereby enabling them to make an intelligent use of our financial institutions, which would be rendering a real patriotic service. These papers exert a tremendous influence over a certain class of people.

This is but one of the great influences we must counteract before results of our thrift campaign become apparent, but through cooperation upon the part of all the banks it can be done. The school savings bank will help to educate the children in these matters, and the public lectures will reach a few of the adults, but every bank through its advertising can reach the majority of the people in its community. If the banks therefore will inject the human interest element into their advertising, not merely announcing that they are in the business of banking at a certain address, leaving the rest to the distorted imagination of the reader, but explaining what they can do for him and why it is to their mutual advantage to get together, a more intimate relation with the public will be established and great good will be accomplished.

In preparing our advertising, we must consider the times in which we live, and offer inducements to save which will offset the inducements to spend, and show what can be accomplished with a little capital rather than using the rate of interest we will pay as an argument, in other words emphasize the principle of creating capital by economy.

Every savings depositor you secure strengthens our whole economic structure, for a savings account creates an interest upon the part of its owner in public affairs, and he should be made to feel that he can go to the manager of the savings bank or department at any time for advice and counsel. Large depositors should be discouraged in this field, for savings organizations are essentially not for the convenience of that class.

A close student of financial affairs has observed that "the kind of people who patronize savings banks hold the financial and commercial destiny of this country in their hands, and the stimulation of thrift is the key to the sociological situation. The gospel of thrift should be preached in the highways and byways until the last improvident soul is saved. It is not so much high interest as undoubted security that will attract savings accounts from the unenlightened." To all of which I am sure we will all say "Amen."

In closing I desire to call your attention to one other way you may help in this work. We are sending each month to over four hundred newspapers, some of which are in each state of the Union, "Thrift Talks" to be published weekly. These "talks" are short, pithy articles relative to thrift, telling how to save, the reasons for it and giving practical examples of success through thrift. Having no appropriation for such work, we are obliged to rely upon the generosity of the press to publish this matter, and it is a pleasure to state that out of the large number of newspapers addressed throughout the country, only two or three small papers absolutely refused. We send these "talks" to but one paper in a community and in so doing state that they may be used in any way the editor desires, our sole aim being to direct thought toward thrift. If these articles are not being published in your town, you may render a real service by using your influence to that end, and then it would be a good thing to have your advertisement along the line suggested, set near them.

And so, gentlemen, I believe that here lies the bankers' opportunity to-day, to direct a portion of that great amount of money which is wasted and hoarded each year into our financial institutions, where through circulation, and as a basis for credit, it will strengthen the sinews of trade, and make for independence of the individual. In course of its report, the National Monetary Commission made this comment, "The sources of the accumulation of capital always end by influencing the manner of organization and working method of the credit institutions of a country. It is in national habits and character that these have their principal roots." Let us as bankers see to it that our national character is cleared of this vice of extravagance which, it is a matter of history, will ruin any country if persisted in long enough, and by preaching continuously the homely gospel that "Every little bit added to what you've got makes just a little bit more," gradually build up a bulwark made of the thrift of the people behind which the old Union may weather any storm.

SPRINGFIELD GOOD ROADS CONVENTION

On May 13th the annual convention of the Illinois Highway Improvement Association will be held in the banquet room of the Leland Hotel, Springfield. The members of this organization have worked energetically during the past year to create a favorable public sentiment toward securing modern good roads legislation for Illinois.

The afternoon meeting will be called to order at two o'clock. In the evening at eight o'clock in the hall of the house of representatives a public hearing will be had on the subject of road legislation pending before the legislature. Alfred N. Abbott, chairman of the house committee on good roads, is president of the Illinois Farmers Institute, and Senator Kent E. Kellar, chairman of the senate committee, is a publisher of Ava, Jackson county.

Illinois bankers who are interested in the subject of good roads legislation should communicate with their members of the legislature before the 13th. The following Illinois bankers have been interested as officers and directors of this association:

William G. Edens, assistant secretary Central Trust Company of Illinois, president; S. E. NEW GROUP DISTRICTS FOR MISSOURI

Secretary W. F. Keyser of Missouri has sent out a plan, with map, for reducing the number of groups from twelve to eight and providing better railroad arrangements. The committee which did the work was composed of J. S. Calfee, cashier Mechanics-American National, St. Louis, chairman; J. P. Huston, president Wood & Huston Bank, Marshall; Geo. B. Harrison, vice-president New England National, Kansas City; A. D. Buckner, vice-president Paris National, Paris, and J. M. Allen, cashier Farmers and Merchants Bank, Humansville.

Upon invitation of the chairman, the president, vice-president, secretary, and treasurer of the association also were in attendance at the meeting which continued throughout an entire day, and in all of its deliberations, the committee was actuated solely by a desire to make its conclusions conform to the best interests of the association in general and each member individually.

It is unquestionably true that under the present group system, attendance at some of the meetings is seriously hampered because of inadequate railroad facilities within the individual boundaries of such groups, while many of those who attend, frequently do so with considerable inconvenience, which might, to some extent at least, be obviated under a reconstructed plan. In the opinion of the committee, the present Groups Nos. 4 and 7, which include the cities of Kansas City and St. Louis, respectively, are not sufficiently large to be capable of the best results, while Groups 5 and 8 do not possess adequate railroad facilities for the reaching of towns large enough to accommodate the annual meetings. Consideration of the matter also has brought the conclusion that a reduction in the number of groups would work to advantage.

The commission report includes all necessary amendments to the constitution and doubtless will be indorsed by the next convention.

ILLINOIS PRIVATE BANK INCORPORATES

The Farmers Exchange Bank at Fisher, Ill., has incorporated as the First State Bank. Fisher is in Champaign county. B. F. Harris, the John-the-Baptist of supervision in Illinois, calls attention to a significant announcement made by the new bank which says it "is in position to continue the same good service as heretofore." Much of the private bank literature asserts that incorporated banks cannot render the service that the private banks can. George W. Busey will continue as president. L. D. Oliver will be the vice-president and Walter E. Oliver cashier. Capital is $26,000.

Commerce Building Dedicated at University of Illinois

By C. C. BURFORD

The formal opening of the new Commerce Building of the University of Illinois was attended by a large number of business men and educators from various cities in Illinois. The beautiful structure, devoted entirely to the study of courses of university grade in banking, accountancy, public and private finance, insurance, statistics, railway administration, money and credit, business organization and management and general economics, was formally dedicated with impressive ceremonies April 16th and 17th. The new building is the only one of its kind in the Central West and its dedication marks an epoch in the training of many business men for the future.

It has been held in educational circles for many years that the colleges and universities should prepare the young man for business as the law and medical colleges prepare young men for professional practice. To such a plan the business men of the country have very largely either turned a deaf ear or have politely ignored the matter or have ridiculed the whole idea, refusing it serious consideration. Slowly but surely the pioneer leaders in commercial education of college grade in the United States have patiently worked until the professional training of young business men now is considered as a desirable aid and soon will become an indespensable part of his preparation.

James and Kinley Pioneers

Edmund J. James, president of the University of Illinois, has been working upon this idea for thirty years or more. As the founder and director of the Wharton School of Finance and Economy in the University of Pennsylvania, as professor of public administration in the University of Chicago and as president of Northwestern University, President James has worked untiringly upon the plan of the education of business men for the span of his busy lifetime. After coming to the University of Illinois he became associated with Dean David Kinley, for twenty years in charge of the work in economics in that institution, and the present building stands as a memorial to the patient sacrifices of President James and Dean Kinley. The latter, in charge of the work in economics at the university from the days of a few text-book courses to the present day of an organized School of Commerce, is the man who is in a large measure the father of the work at the University of Illinois. To Dean Kinley too much credit cannot be given and the ovation which he received during the dedication banquet was a public recognition of his services. Fewer university men are better known to bankers and business men generally than is Dean Kinley.

sons of Harry A. Wheeler, vice-president of the Union Trust Company, formerly president of the Chicago Association of Commerce and now president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and of H. C. Elting, present president of the Chicago Association of Commerce.

Mr. Elting, as head of the largest and most powerful city commercial organization in the United States, made a profound impression upon the minds of the students in the commerce courses. He spoke from ripe experience and fairly "hammered" the university youth with the idea of hard work, persistency in serice and sound character as the only real assets of a successful business career. "Getting down to brass tacks," he declared that no university man would be ushered into a life of business ease and success upon the strength of a college training, but would necessarily have to begin at the beginning and proceed upward by mastery of detail. Dean Walter H. Hotchkiss, director of the commercial courses in Northwestern University, dwelt upon the same ideas and few university young men failed to catch the meaning of these leaders as they hammered the truths of business success home to the minds of ambitious and energetic but inexperienced and embryonic business men.

President Harry A. Wheeler of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States delivered a masterful address calling the young men of the university to a high sense of responsibility in their life work as business men and told them that efficiency in service for the public weal as well as for private gain was the great need of the present day. He emphasized the patriotic side of the work, giving the young men a high regard for the public and civic work which they would be called upon to render in years to come. He also advised young men to fit themselves for positions as secretaries of various civic and commercial organizations, showing the need for service and the opportunity for careers of satisfactory personal and pecuniary gain.

Other Speakers

President James of the University of Illinois reviewed the growth of the teaching of collegiate commercial courses in America and paid proper tribute to the memory of the late Joseph Wharton whose donations made possible the Wharton School of Finance and Economy of the University of Pennsylvania and to the memory of the late William H. Rhawn, well remembered by older bankers as president for many years of the National Bank of the Republic of Philadelphia, who aided the projected work of the Wharton School and called the attention of the American Bankers Association to the work as early as 1890. President James himself was asked to address the American Bankers Association at its Saratoga convention and later went to Europe to study the education of business men there. The committee of the American Bankers Association who were interested in this movement was composed of Mr. Rhawn, Lyman J. Gage, George S. Coe, Morton McMichael and George A. Butler, names well known to the older bankers of the United States.

Following the establishment of the courses at the University of Pennsylvania the work was begun at the University of Chicago under the general leadership of that great educational leader, the late lamented Dr. William R. Harper. Other institutions to take up the work have been Michigan, Wisconsin, Illinois, Harvard, Dartmouth, Brown, New York University, Northwestern and others.

Frederic A. Cleveland, chairman of the President's Commission on Economy and Efficiency, was unable to be present but sent his able paper which was read by Dr. Hotchkiss of Northwestern University. S. T. Henry of Chicago, western manager of the Engineering Record, Charles A. Ewing of Decatur and

By C. C. Burford

A prominent Bloomington banker outlines banking and business conditions in that part of the state as follows:

"There is a world-wide demand for money. Central Illinois being primarily an agricultural community, money conditions are governed here by the attitude of the farmers. While the demand for money has been strong during the past few months, we have been able to accommodate all who were entitled to consideration.

"On account of the low prices for grain as compared with the past few years the farmers have been holding their crops for higher prices and as a result the banks are carrying a larger amount of farmers' paper than is usual at this time of the year. There is an unusual percentage of last year's crop still in the bins and until this grain is sold these obligations will not be liquidated to any considerable degree. During the past ten days there have been several sales of cattle which has tended to liquidate some of these obligations. While there is heavy demand for money I would not say that the money market is 'tight.'

"The prospect of a radical reduction in the tariff law does not appear to be having a particularly depressing effect on general business conditions. Tariff changes have been anticipated for the past several months and I look for no upheaval in business conditions when the new law goes into effect. General conditions are good and I can see no reason why they should not remain so."

New State Banks Begin Business

The First State Trust and Savings of Urbana began business Monday, April 28th. It succeeds the Farmers Savings and Loan Bank which has been established since 1904. The bank will occupy the banking floor of a new three-story building which will be erected this summer. At present the quarters of the old bank are being used. S. W. Love, who has been serving the old bank as active president, continues in that capacity and Ira Rigdon is cashier and W. A. Mullin, vice-president National City of Chicago, is the correspondent.

The First State of Fisher, Champaign county, opened for business May 1st succeeding the Farmers Exchange Bank of that town which has been in business since 1903. George W. Busey, formerly cashier of Busey's Bank of Urbana for a number of years, is president; L. D. Oliver, formerly cashier of the Farmers Exchange, vice-president, and W. E. Oliver cashier. The last named is vice-chairman of the Champaign County Bankers Federation. The correspondents are the Continental and Commercial National of Chicago and Busey's Bank of Urbana.

Ten Counties with Soil Experts

That the demand for better agriculture in Illinois has borne fruit is seen in the fact that ten counties have organized forces to employ an agricultural expert to devote his entire time to the work. These counties are Kankakee, DeKalb, Livingston, Peoria, Kane, Macoupin, McHenry, Tazewell, Henry and Champaign.

Peoria county recently has named Henry Truitt of Chillicothe as county agent who will supervise the work while an agricultural expert soon will be employed. The bank of Truitt, Matthews & Co. of Chillicothe is well known to Illinois bankers.

The ten county organizations have a wide variety of names but their aims are one: viz., to improve the soil and to increase the returns of high-priced Illinois lands. That the movement is well founded and will be steadily improved and enlarged is assured from the genuine interest taken in the matter by bankers, farmers and business men.

In thirty-three states of the Union there are 156 counties which have completed such organization and there are 850 counties which have begun such an organization.

Christmas Savings Funds

A large number of banks over the state are actively pushing their Christmas Savings Funds which are operated in a variety of ways but which all work out to give the depositor money to be used at the Christmas season. Other banks have used the Tax-Payers' Fund which is in some ways a better means as savings as the money accumulated is used to satisfy tax claims while in the former plan the funds may be spent more or less foolishly in the purchase of Christmas presents.

Among the banks using the Christmas Savings Fund are the Second National of Belvidere, Moline Trust and Savings of Moline, City National of Evanston, Merchants National of Aurora, Eastern Illinois Trust and Savings of Kankakee, State Savings, Loan and Trust Company of Quincy, Lincoln National of Lincoln, Illinois Trust and Savings of Champaign, First State Trust and Savings of Urbana and the First National of Charleston.

Roanoke Banks Merge

The German-American Bank of Roanoke, which began business only about two months ago, has purchased the business of the Farmers State of the same village. The latter bank was established in 1897 by L. W. Harms and H. B. Harms. All of the deposits, liabilities and assets of the old institution are taken over by the new bank. It is believed by many bankers that consolidation of country banks will be a feature of the future as too many small towns have two banks when only one good bank is needed. However, many take the opposite view as two banks in a community give a wider range of accommodation to the public.

Starved Rock and Deer Park

With the approach of the automobile touring season the attention of the bankers of the state naturally is drawn to Starved Rock and Deer Park. LaSalle county bankers are active in their desire that the beauty spots of their county shall be seen and appreciated by the people of the Central West, for there are no more beautiful scenic spots than these.

LaSalle county people are preparing to ask the legislature for an appropriation of $150,000 to purchase more land around Starved Rock. The park board has an option on 274 acres of land adjoining Starved Rock which they wish to purchase if they secure the needed appropriation. Deer Park also should be purchased by the state and turned into a large public park. The railroads crossing the Illinois river at LaSalle and Ottawa are about to build swinging bridges so that steamboats can ascend the river to Ottawa and in this way many people who do not own cars can enjoy a pleasant outing to these great historic and natural beauty spots.

Illinois Notes

Bricklayers have begun work on the basement walls of the new building of the National Bank of Decatur.

The State Bank of Chenoa has announced a "road-dragging party" and prizes will be given to the farmers who ride the longest distances to the bank on a road-drag. The prizes are $5, $3 and $1.50, besides a "treat" for every farmer. The farmers of a community can be enthused in this manner to do much road work of a high order.

The First National of Arcola has won an attachment proceeding against J. R. Heeb, amounting to $3,059. The case was tried in the Coles county circuit court at Charleston.

The Illinois Trust and Savings of Champaign has adopted the finger print method of identification.

Assessor Goggin of Peoria is dealing with the loan sharks vigorously by assessing them the highest possible amount. Naturally his methods are causing much comment among the loan agents but this method is another weapon of the people against the loan sharks.

Forgeries continue over the state and every banker is warned to keep a sharp watchout for them. Peoria has been the scene of some extended forgeries by a trusted employee of the Pratt Audit Company. He secured probably not less than $500 on checks passed in Peoria, Chicago and St. Louis. The youth's name is Glenn H. Leland and his downfall has caused great sorrow to his friends and much anxiety to his employers who had the greatest confidence in his honesty and ability. His parents are of the highest character and he was soon to have been married. There is wide-spread sympathy for the young man in Peoria.

B. F. Harris, vice-president of the First National of Champaign and former president of the Illinois Bankers Association, who has been serving as chairman of the state central committee of the Progressive party since the resignation of Chauncey Dewey, has asked to be relieved from active duties owing to ill-health.

The Old National of Centralia is another Illinois bank which is doing excellent publicity work and some good newspaper advertising is being done by that institution. The bank calls especial attention to its growth, which has come very largely from an appreciation of the wants and needs of its customers. H. M. Warner is president and Harry Kohl cashier.

WELL-KNOWN MISSOURI BANKER PASSES AWAY

W. A. Latimer, cashier of the Third National of Sedalia, Mo., died last week of Bright's disease. Mr. Latimer was a native of Abingdon, Ill., and a brother of Orion Latimer, president of the First National of that place. He began his banking career in Abingdon and during the incumbency of the late James H. Eckels as comptroller of the currency under the last Cleveland administration Mr. Latimer was appointed a national bank examiner and assigned to the Missouri district. There he established a reputation for careful and efficient examination which later opened up an opportunity for a banking career in Sedalia. He was well known to Missouri bankers and had many friends among the bankers of this state.

NEW BANK BUILDING FOR RACINE

The First National of Racine, Wis., of which G. N. Fratt is cashier, has adopted plans for a new bank building of the monumental type. The First is one of the oldest and most substantial of Wisconsin banks and this idea will be embodied in the architecture. The huge Corinthian columns will be of granite to match the building.

ST. LOUIS BANKERS HONORED

Secretary F. M. Mayfield announces that the Tennessee bankers at the Memphis convention signally honored two of her expatriated bankers. F. O. Watts and Frank K. Houston, now of the Third National, St. Louis, were elected honorary life members of the state association.

ILLINOIS NATIONAL BANKS

According to figures made public by the comptroller, there were on April 4th, 445 national banks in this state. Loans and discounts amounted to $185,375,000; individual deposits $213,247,000 and per cent of legal reserve 16.57.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

Secretary George D. Bartlett of the Wisconsin Bankers Association beat the calendar to moving day, having taken up new quarters in the Pabst Building, above the Wisconsin National Bank last week. In moving before May 1st, Mr. Bartlett "avoided the rush" as he says, and also had his new offices spick and span for the meeting of the convention committee of the W. B. A. the other day.

Perhaps it was the strange surroundings which led the convention committee to decide to hold the state convention in July aboard boat, although it was probably mostly due to the unanimous postal-card vote of the members favoring this expedient. Whatever the reason the fact remains that the steamer "North American" has been chartered for a three-day trip to Georgian Bay and back, leaving Milawukee June 21st and returning June 24th. Wisconsin bankers and members of their families will constitute the supercargo with the regular meetings and addresses in the spacious cabin taking the place of the customary bouts with the binnacle and battening down the hatches. At this point knowledge of marine terms runs out, but George promises to furnish a supply of new ones as soon as he has perused a little more Jack London lore.

Best Appointed Manager of Clearing House

Fred C. Best has been appointed manager of the Milwaukee clearing house by the Clearing House Association, succeeding George W. Strohmeyer, formerly president of the Milwaukee National, who retired after many years' service in this capacity for the Milwaukee clearing house.

Alleged Forger Held

Richard Dickson is held by the police pending trial on several charges of forgery. The complainants number twenty-two storekeepers and others in Milwaukee, upon whom Dickson is accused of passing bogus checks. He is said to have used the check forms of all the Milwaukee banks, signing them in names of several well-known business houses.

Wisconsin Notes

The Hinkel bill to permit cities of the first and second classes to establish municipal banks has been recommended for passage by the municipalities committee of the state assembly.

A resolution to amend the state constitution so as to permit the state of Wisconsin to go into the insurance business was among the acts passed by the assembly this week. Sponsors of the resolution affirm that only through some form of state insurance can the present workingmen's compensation act be operated to the greatest advantage of those whom it is intended to benefit.

The State Bank of LaCrosse, organized in 1879, will move to new and larger quarters on the principal corner of the business district.

The directors of the First National of Racine have approved architects' plans for a new building and will proceed with construction at once.

The meeting of Group Seven, Wisconsin Bankers Association, will be held in LaCrosse on May 28th, while that of Group Six is scheduled for Grand Rapids the following day, May 29th. A special sleeper, leaving LaCrosse the night of the twenty-eighth, will bear delegates who wish to take in both meetings from LaCrosse to Grand Rapids, arriving at the latter city on the morning of the twenty-ninth. Those wishing reservations on this sleeper are asked to notify Secretary George D. Bartlett of the W. B. A., who has the arrangements in charge.

All officers of the First National of Manawa were re-elected at the recent election with the exception of J. B. Jensen, whose place, following his resignation, was filled by Arthur Lindsay.

In order to interest farmers of the vicinity in cattle the First National of Rice Lake recently bought ninety head and resold them to the farmers at cost.

Second Ward Savings is indulging in an advertising novelty, declaring itself as "one of the show places of Milwaukee" in the daily amusement advertising columns of the city newspapers, and inviting visitors to inspect its new building.

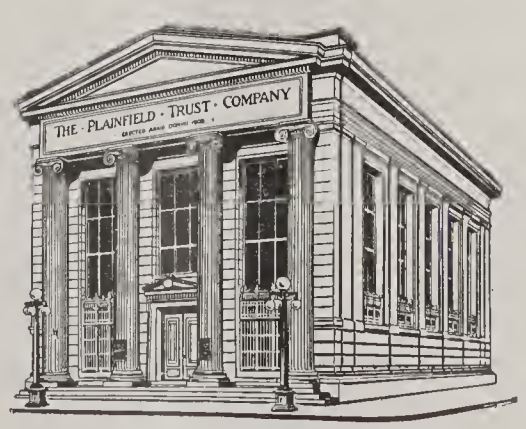
THE PLAINFIELD TRUST COMPANY

On the fourth day of June, 1902, The Plainfield Trust Company of Plainfield, N. J., opened for business in an unpretentious store on one of the principal streets of that city. In three years, when by its aggressive methods it had acquired a deposit line of one and a half million dollars, it moved into its handsome building on Park Avenue which it now occupies and which is not only the most imposing edifice in Plainfield but is one of the finest banking houses in the state of New Jersey. In its new home the business of the institution has continued to prosper under the efficient management of its energetic and capable staff of officers until to-day the company reports deposits of over four and a half millions of dollars and a surplus and undivided profit account of two hundred and seventy-nine thousand dollars, or nearly three times the amount of its capital.

In addition to its deposits, the company has in its custody a million and a half of trust funds which are kept separate and apart from its assets. This trust business is but another indication of the confidence which the institution has won during the comparatively short period of its existence—a confidence that is based not only on the character of the service which has been rendered but on the personnel of its directors all of whom are representative men in the community and who bring to the business the inspiration of some of New York City's most important business activities, as may be seen by the following list:

J. Herbert Case, Plainfield, N. J., vice-president The Farmers Loan and Trust Company, New York; Frederick Geller, New York, attorney and counsellor-at-law, New York; Augustus V. Heely, Plainfield, N. J., vice-president The Farmers Loan and Trust Company, New York; James W. Jackson, Plainfield, N. J., executor of the Jesse Hoyt estate, New York; Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Plainfield, N. J., Ladd & Wood, Bankers, New York; Charles W. McCutchen, Plainfield, N. J., Holt & Company, commission merchants, New York; Henry A. McGee, Plainfield, N. J., standard Oil Company, New York; Harry H. Pond, vice-president Mechanics & Metals National Bank, New York; Charles A. Reed, Plainfield, N. J., attorney and counsellor-at-law; Isaac W. Rushmore, Plainfield, N. J., dairy products, New York; Frank H. Smith, Plainfield, N. J., register Union county, Elizabeth, N. J.; Samuel Townsend, Plainfield, N. J., president Peoples National Bank, Westfield, N. J.; Cornelius B. Tyler, Plainfield, N. J., Tyler & Tyler, attorneys, New York; Lewis E. Waring, Plainfield, N. J., Edward Sweet & Company, bankers, New York; Orville T. Waring, Plainfield, N. J., Standard Oil Company, New Jersey.

DeWitt Hubbell, secretary and treasurer of the company, assumed this position on April 14th, 1913, succeeding H. H. Pond who resigned in order to accept the vice-presidency of the Mechanics & Metals National of New York.



PLAINFIELD TRUST COMPANY
Plainfield, N. J.

The Plainfield Trust Company conducts a banking, trust, special, safe deposit and "banking by mail" department. Through the latter the institution has extended its operations all over New Jersey and there are few towns in the state in which some of its depositors may not be found.

GUARANTY OF DEPOSITS

President Wilson has expressed the belief that the guaranty of bank deposits should be considered as a separate proposition from general currency legislation.

As yet no banking and currency reform bill has been drafted in such shape as to receive the support of the administration, although numerous tentative propositions have been submitted to the president, who said that it is uncertain whether currency legislation will be attempted at this session, the matter depending upon the progress of the tariff bill in the house, and particularly the senate and upon the degree of success of the democratic leaders in agreeing upon the character of the financial legislation which the party, as a whole, would approve.

MR. FORGAN WILL SUBMIT REPORT

Colonel Farnsworth, secretary of the American Bankers Association, is quoted in New York as saying, while the association's currency commission will not hold a session with the executive council at Braircliff May 4th, its vice-chairman, James B. Forgan, will submit a report at that time. Mr. Forgan can do little more than report that both the currency commission and the association itself already are committed to the Aldrich plan. While that plan is virtually dead, no other has been brought forward by any authoritative body for consideration by the commission or anyone else.

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

St. Louis, April 30th.—Bank clearings during the past week have been larger than those of the corresponding period last year. New York exchange was in fair offerings while the demand was liberal and the premium rate was advanced to 35 cents per $1,000 between banks. The demand for money was of fair proportions and rates were firm at 5½ to 6 per cent on call and time loans. Commercial paper was discounted by brokers, mainly at 6 per cent. All branches of banking have been active.

Tom Randolph New Head of National Bank of Commerce

Tom Randolph, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce, who has been acting president since B. F. Edwards' resignation, was elected president yesterday at the weekly meeting of the board of directors. The election was unanimous and the statement, in which the directors announced it, set at rest the recent reports that other changes in the corps of the bank would take place soon. No other person was mentioned for the presidency at the meeting. In other discussion, W. Frank Carter, vice-president of the Mercantile Trust, was insistently mentioned, but he declined positively to become a candidate for the position. Mr. Randolph was brought to St. Louis about twelve years ago from Sherman, Tex., where he was chief executive of the Merchants and Planters National, to become president of the Commonwealth Trust. Five years ago when the commercial deposits of the Commonwealth Trust were taken over by the Bank of Commerce, and an option of purchase was negotiated under which the Bank of Commerce had the right to take over the Commonwealth Trust, an option which never was exercised, he joined the forces of the Bank of Commerce. Mr. Randolph has been in the banking business since 1872 when he was a bank messenger in Sherman, Tex. He is receiving congratulations from all over the country on his election.

Missouri Banker Convicted

A. D. Wilcox, former cashier of the City Bank of Bloomfield, who was arrested after discovery of a shortage totaling $100,000, was convicted of embezzlement at Springfield last Saturday and his punishment fixed at two years in the penitentiary. Ten additional cases, growing out of the shortage, are pending against Wilcox, which have been continued until June 23d. The bank closed its doors November 18th last, when President George Houck discovered that Wilcox was short in his accounts nearly $100,000. After an interim of three weeks, the bank reopened and paid off its depositors, the shortage having been made good by George and R. S. Houck and E. J. Williams by the sacrifice of their entire fortunes.

Capitol Bonds Sold

All of the State Capitol bonds not disposed of, approximately $2,500,000 in amount, were sold last week to the Mercantile Trust Company at par. The Fund commission paid the brokerage company effecting the sale a commission of about $120,000 for handling the transaction. The Mercantile Trust recently became the largest depository of the state, holding at the present time more than $3,250,000 of state funds. The State Capitol fund will go out to depositories like other funds and will be largely augmented by interests before it is needed by the state capitol commission. The state pays 3½ per cent interest upon the bonds, this and the sinking fund for the retirement of the bonds at maturity being derived from a direct tax levy of 2 cents on the $100 valuation. The bonds run for thirteen years, but may be retired at the expiration of eight years.

Arkansas Bank Closes

The Bank of Helena, Helena, Ark., with a capitalization of $500,000 and one of the oldest financial institutions in the state, closed its doors April 25th. Large outstanding loans which could not be realized on is said to have led to the closing. Assistance offered by other banks of the city has been refused by the president, E. C. Horner. It is stated that depositors will be paid in full.

Arkansas Valley Crops Thriving

Agricultural experts report wheat in the Arkansas Valley in a condition of 99 per cent and oats at 102 per cent at this time, the prospects for both grains being the best ever known at this period in the season. The acreage of wheat in the valley is twice that of last year and oats about three times greater. The teaching of agricultural experts the past year has resulted in the planting of a great acreage of Kaffir corn, milo maize and cane for forage feed.

Lafayette Bank Stock Sold

Eighty shares of stock in the Lafayette Bank, owned by Mrs. Marie Arendas, last week were bought by Bernard G. Brinkman, assistant cashier of the bank, representing a syndicate of directors in the institution. The price paid is said to have been about $1,205 a share. Mr. Brinkman by this purchase becomes the heaviest single stockholder in the bank. He is president of the Paragould (Ark.) Trust Company.

German Savings to Build

A permit for wrecking the old four-story structure at the southeast corner of Broadway and Pine Street was issued last Friday to the German Savings Bank. The institution is to erect on the lot a new one-story bank building, which will add very materially to the floor space.

Many Bankers in St. Louis

Among the bankers who were in St. Louis yesterday, some returning home after attending the bankers' conventions in southern states, and others on business connected with their institutions were: W. L. Hemingway, president Mercantile Trust, Little Rock, Ark.; Frank R. Milner, president Litchfield Bank and Trust Company, Litchfield, Ill.; S. C. Alexander, president Merchants and Planters Bank, Pine Bluff, Ark.; E. F. Swinney, president First National, Kansas City; John M. Herbert, president, and H. O. Ozburn, cashier Citizens State and Savings, Murphysboro, Ill.; J. E. Chilberg, vice-president the Scandinavian-American Bank, Seattle, Wash.; Henry D. Forbes, vice-president National Shawmut Bank, Boston, Mass., and J. C. Marmaduke, Seattle, Wash.

Would End Insurance Muddle

A committee of six to proceed independently of other organizations in an effort to bring about an understanding between the state officials and the fire insurance companies has been appointed by the St. Louis Bankers Club. The committee consists of Edwards Whitaker, chairman; A. O. Wilson, Otto L. Tiechmann, Festus J. Wade, William H. Lee and Breckinridge Jones. "While the committee has not yet held a meeting and arranged a program, my individual idea is we should seek the advice of the state authorities," said Mr. Whitaker. "I think the assumption is warranted these officials are trying to serve their state, and to promote the interests of its citizens. These officials are more familiar with the situation than we are and we should learn their idea of the best mode of procedure, to avert a condition that may involve serious consequences. The committee is not wedded to any special course and comes to the question with an open mind. We are not in position to tell either the insurance companies or the state officials what they should do, and our work will be one of conciliation and advice."

Among the companies which have notified their St. Louis agents to cease writing insurance in Missouri are: The Hartford Fire, which wrote the largest volume of business in St. Louis last year and which has been in service since 1830; the Connecticut of Hartford, the Dixie Fire of Greensboro, Vt.; the Caledonian of Edinburgh, Scotland, and the Springfield Fire and Marine of Springfield, Mass. The first three are represented by the Insurance Agency Company. The Caledonian is represented by W. H. Markham & Co., and the last named by Charles D. Eaton.

Fire insurance men from the country towns and districts in Missouri are coming to St. Louis in increasing numbers to ascertain the situation.

Bank May Reduce Capital Stock

The board of directors of the Illinois State Trust Company Bank of East St. Louis has called a meeting for May 24th to act on a proposition to reduce the capital stock from $300,000 to $200,000 and to change the name of the corporation to Illinois State Bank. R. E. Gillespie, president of the bank, says the present name is too long and the proposed change is only for convenience. Reduction of the capital stock, he says, will enable the bank to save several thousand dollars in taxes annually on the capital stock. At a directors' meeting A. C. Johnson was named vice-president to succeed L. B. Washburn, who died several weeks ago.

Banks Asked to Aid in Cattle Industry

Melvin A. Traylor, vice-president of the National Stock Yards National, believes that farmers should receive more encouragement to embark in the beef cattle business.

In a statement issued last week Mr. Traylor says country bankers ought to be more liberal in making loans to farmers for buying and feeding cattle. "We have not yet begun to feel the full effect of the world's shortage in beef cattle," declares Traylor. "A possible solution is for the bankers throughout the West to inaugurate an educational campaign in their respective localities, urging the production of more beef steers. Conditions of supply and demand are such that loans of this character appear to be safe, from the viewpoint of the banker. Within the last decade the United States has dropped from the list of surplus exporting nations. In the last six years our exports of live cattle have decreased 93 per cent and our exports of meat have dropped 97 per cent. American cattle raisers have increased their imports of cattle 1,200 per cent within the last six years, while in the same period the per capita beef supply of the United States has dropped 40 per cent. Stocks of meat in refrigeration in the United States have decreased in five years from 262,000,000 pounds to 50,000,000 pounds."

Receiver For Bank

The board of directors of the insolvent Security Bank, of Ravenden Springs, Ark., have failed to effect a reorganization of the institution, and J. J. Lewis has been made receiver. Heavy long-time loans, bad crops and too much investment in bank building and fixtures are said to be the main cause of the failure.

Bankers to Meet in St. Louis

The next meeting of the board of governors of the Investment Bankers Association of America will be held in St. Louis, May 16th and 17th. The report of the committee on legislative activities will be the principal subject of discussion. The St. Louis members of the association are preparing to entertain the visiting bankers.

H. R. Lyle Dies From Fall

Hugh R. Lyle, assistant secretary of the Mississippi Valley Trust, died yesterday from an injury he received Sunday night when he fell down stairs while visiting at the home of a friend. Mr. Lyle was one of the principal heirs to the $3,000,000 estate left by the late David P. Ranken.

CHANGES AT MARSEILLES, ILL.

F. T. Neff, who has been cashier of the First National of Marseilles, Ill., the past twenty-nine years, has been elected president. S. R. Lewis, who formerly resided near Marseilles and who during the past eight years has been connected with the Ottawa Banking and Trust Company as cashier, has resigned that position with the last named bank and has been elected cashier of the First National at Marseilles.

Messrs. Neff and Lewis propose to liquidate the affairs of the First National and to secure a charter for a state bank and trust company which will succeed to the business of the First National. Mr. Lewis has had a splendid business experience. He enjoys a wide acquaintance about Marseilles and proposes to furnish this locality every necessary banking facility in the new organization.

Charles D. Hinman, secretary and treasurer of the Columbus Savings, died recently from pneumonia. Mr. Hinman had not been able to be at the bank since February, but his illness became critical only a week before his death.

LARGER PAID CIRCULATION IN THE MIDDLE WEST THAN ANY THREE OF ITS COMPETITORS COMBINED

WHAT COMPTROLLER MURRAY ACCOMPLISHED

A large part of the fame, both national and international, which came to Lawrence O. Murray as comptroller of the currency, came because the public mind, not only in America but in other countries, for some years has been focused upon improvement in banking operations. Canada re-enacts or improves her banking and currency laws every ten years. Our practice has been to allow the currency issue to become a political question until one or other of the parties became strong enough in the government to pass a bill which had become a part of its platforms. The situation today is largely one of this description. When Comptroller Murray took charge of the office the patience of good bankers had been almost exhausted by the operations of bank promoters who made their living out of commissions on new banks formed without regard to the opportunities for a profitable business. The previous administration had given most of its attention to the management of growing banks purely in a technical sense. Mr. Murray at once set up a strenuous opposition to the professional bank promoter with the very best of results. Probably nothing else in all his years of good service pleased the actual bankers of the country more than his putting a quietus upon these microbes. He relaxed nothing in the comprehensive examination of national banks and made important advances in securing greater efficiency on the part of bank directors. The details of this movement are well remembered and are entirely creditable to Mr. Murray. The late comptroller did not regard the creation of new banks, but of good banks, as a performance creditable to his office. First of all he investigated new applications to determine whether or not there was an opening which would support an additional bank with a reasonable outlook for safety and profit. He did not think he was performing his duty when he permitted a bank to be launched upon any community without taking every precaution to insure good management and probable success.

From the very first Mr. Murray was a firm believer in the co-operation between national bank examiners and the directors of banks. He maintained that ninety per cent of the friction generated in the past might have been eliminated by co-operation. By following up the details of this branch of his office, he did reduce friction and made directors much more useful and influential in the management of banks. He required his examiners to inquire very carefully into loans to bank officers or into any concentration of loans to concerns in which bank officers were interested. Some of his work in this field was resisted, but he was supported by the United States supreme court in his position. The fight against excessive loans which had been going on for fifty years was kept up with great vigor. The bank directors were induced to take a hand, with the very best of results. When it became generally known that bank directors were to be made responsible in such cases of excessive loans, the loans were promptly reduced. To an unusual degree Mr. Murray succeeded in compelling certain institutions to maintain the reserves required by law. It had been the custom, so rumor tells us, for certain banks "to throw communications from the comptroller in the waste basket." Under the activities of the late comptroller such a performance would have been a dangerous proceeding. He held that any bank which will not maintain a substantial reserve, either is managed badly or speculatively, or one that is generally on the road to ruin. He pounded this doctrine into the boards of directors until the banks' officials could see no other road to continued operation but to comply with the comptroller's demand. Mr. Murray believes that bank examiners should be better paid and that they should receive their commissions through the channels of the civil service. While excellent men are now being employed, it is his belief that the office could be further improved under civil service supervision. There is not a right-minded banker in the whole country who will not wish Lawrence O. Murray the greatest of success in his new field of employment in one of Washington's prominent banking institutions.

PULLING FOR THE STATE ASSOCIATION

The Northwestern National, at Minneapolis, has set a fine example of loyalty to the state association in its current financial letter. It points to around one thousand members, names the last few accessions which turned the mark, and laments the eighty-five banks still out of harmony and co-operative union with their fellows. The letter says:

"It is unfortunate that there have always been some banks throughout the state which take but very little interest in the affairs of the state association. They need the association, and the association needs them. The benefits afforded by membership provide ample returns for the slight cost of dues, and Minnesota should be in the same class as Missouri, where every bank in the state is a member of the state association.

"Good work is being done along several lines, and splendid possibilities are before the association for the promotion of the welfare of its members. It is hoped that before very long the bankers of the state will conclude to make the percentage of membership in the state of Minnesota one hundred."

We hope that this fine example of pulling for the state association will prove contagious and that all bank letters will advocate 100 per cent membership in every state. It is such a one-sided question that one wonders, not why the outs are out, but how you could keep them out if you wanted to.

Banking has benefited inmeasurably by organization. All the way from the A. B. A. down to the group and into the county organization the story is the same.

No well intentioned bank should deny its co-operation and financial support to its state association, nor to the American Banking Association. There is a moral obligation as well.

ALASKA PREPARING FOR STATEHOOD

Those who opposed the granting of a territorial form of government for Alaska have been surprised no doubt at the attitude and capacity for self-government which the Alaskans have displayed. Perhaps those who are opposing self-government in the Philippines are equally misinformed upon essentials. The first bill passed by the Alaska legislature gave women the right to vote. The second was to outlaw fake mining and fake land advertisements, an act which could be adopted by the states with great benefit to their citizens.

The complete act is a sort of "Blue Sky" bill which would delight the heart of J. N. Dolley and would not distress George B. Caldwell, so well was it kept within reasonable bounds. Alaska lawmakers also have decided to drive the lobbyists away from Juneau, the capital of the territory. It took the states a good many years to learn some of the things which seem to be perfectly plain to the people of Alaska. And yet there are statesmen in this country who hooted the idea of giving Alaska a territorial form of government. They did not believe the people of Alaska capable of governing themselves. Mr. Taft wanted a federal commission, sitting at the national capital, to govern Alaska, and he tried to get congress to create such a commission in the face of a persistent demand by Alaskans for some scheme of local self-government. Yes, they are Americans, with American honesty and talent for government. Alaskans can be trusted. The day of statehood is not far distant. Her laws are likely to be models and to spread the fame of Alaska for the intelligence and political efficiency of her people. The young man of to-day, were Horace Greeley alive, would be told to "Go to Alaska, young man, go to Alaska." It will be one of the leading and influential states not many years hence. Every claim put forth for territorial rights has been fully vindicated.

THE NORTHWESTERN NATIONAL BANK
MINNEAPOLIS, MINNESOTA

THE monthly survey of Northwestern conditions published by this bank receives a generous and growing measure of public approval. Its purpose is the review of the current financial, industrial and agricultural situations in the bank's extensive territory, and the material for the summary is drawn from its own direct experience and from that of its many influential connections. Anyone desiring his name upon the mailing list of this trade letter may have it placed thereupon without charge.

GOOD ROADS IN ILLINOIS

Bankers of Illinois have given generously of their time, influence and money to the subject of good roads. It is doubtful if bankers can realize the vast amount of work which has been done by the good roads committee of the Illinois Bankers Association. It has been effective, too. On May 13th there will be a state good roads convention at Springfield and bankers should attend in large numbers in a grand final effort to secure the necessary legislation.

MODERN BANKING QUARTERS

Chicago visitors who attended the meeting of the members of Group Eight, Iowa Bankers Association, at Muscatine were surprised and impressed with the splendid bank homes which Muscatine's growing institutions possess. First National and First Trust and Savings, both under one roof, have a splendidly appointed new building. German-American Savings also is well housed and the Hershey State and the Muscatine State are well equipped with banking quarters.

Going on up the river to Davenport, Rock Island and Moline there is the same sort of a movement on hand in the matter of providing up-to-date banking homes for the important financial institutions of the Tri-Cities. The new home of the German Savings of Davenport is an imposing structure from without and well appointed within, while the new home of the Union Savings puts that institution in a class by itself.

Across the "Father of Waters" the Rock Island financial institutions have gotten the fever and the Rock Island Savings, under the direction of President H. S. Cable, recently has occupied exclusively a new and attractively appointed building. Peoples National is well quartered while the Rock Island National and its affiliated institution, the Central Trust and Savings, both under one roof, have an advantage both in location and character of building and appointment. The State Bank of Rock Island recently has modernized its old quarters, occupying the space formerly taken by the Rock Island Savings.

Dropping down the river a few miles to Moline, the visitor who has not been paying strict attention to changes going on in this important manufacturing center, is surprised to find that the financial district of the city practically has been located in a new quarter during the past year. First, the State Savings Bank and Trust Company built a new home at the corner of Fifteenth Street and Fifth Avenue which it fitted up in a most artistic manner. Then the Peoples Savings Bank and Trust Company purchased the opposite corner and have built one of the largest and best appointed banking rooms in Illinois, outside of Chicago. Not to be outdone by their good-natured rivals, it is announced now that the Moline Trust and Savings has purchased a corner diagonally opposite its present location on Fifteenth Street and early next year will begin the erection of a new home, and it is stated that one of the younger banks, the Mechanics and Merchants, has purchased a site just above Fifteenth Street and shortly will begin the erection of a new building, so that Moline's important financial institutions are pretty nearly together.

LARGE ATTENDANCE ASSURED AT BOSTON

It appears that many bankers who contemplate attending the American Bankers Association convention in Boston October 6th to 10th, have not realized the necessity of engaging rooms in advance.

The hotel committee is busy assigning rooms and about forty per week are being reserved. It is suggested that those who plan to visit Boston in October should make immediate arrangements for hotel accommodations.

Application should be made to Chas. P. Blinn, Jr., chairman hotel committee, care of National Union Bank, Boston, Mass.

Ohio National Banks

Twenty million dollars increase in the individual deposits of national banks in Ohio during the last year is shown in a report of the comptroller of the currency. On April 18, 1912, the amount on deposit in the national banks of Ohio to individual credit was $191,419,843.19. On April 14th of this year, the time of the last call, this had grown to $211,155,236.86. During the same period the total resources of the national banks of Ohio increased from $296,487,857.56 to $319,509,736.63, and the item of loans and discounts from $171,386,635.99 to $182,398,293.59. The report, as a whole, indicates a healthy condition of the banking business.

Baden, is president of the Indiana Harbor National and the First State Bank of Tolleston.

BLUE SKY IN IOWA AND MINNESOTA

Iowa has passed a very orthodox "Blue Sky" bill, with severe restrictions upon stock brokers of the questionable kind. Minnesota failed on the general bill but passed a special "Blue Sky" bill bearing down upon the vending of insurance stocks, a point upon which the citizens up there are agreed, owing to certain recent promotions.

MURRAY MADE PRESIDENT OF TRUST COMPANY

Lawrence O. Murray, formerly comptroller of the currency, has accepted a position as president of the United States Trust Company of Washington, D. C. The office formerly was held by E. E. Jordan who now becomes chairman of the board.

THE BLACK AND YELLOW TRAIL

Pierre, S. D., April 30, 1913.—This state, together with the states of Wyoming, Minnesota and Wisconsin, is interested in a highway extending from Chicago to the Yellowstone National Park and to be known as the Chicago, Black Hills and Yellowstone Park Highway, with a shorter pseudonym, "The Black and Yellow Trail."

At a meeting recently held in Deadwood, S. D., at which delegates from interested cities and towns along this proposed highway were present, plans were made for beginning active work in mapping and marking this trail from Chicago to the Yellowstone National Park. It was decided to send a party over the line from Chicago to the Park. This party will in all probability leave Chicago immediately after July 4th. In the party there will be the committee appointed by the Deadwood meeting and also newspaper men and representatives of the various states and cities through which the highway passes. A photographer also will accompany the party in order to let the world have an idea of the scenic beauty, surpassing grandeur and majestic splendor to be encountered on this highway.

The tentative route as outlined by the committee is to leave Chicago going directly north along the lake shore to Milwaukee, thence westward through Madison to La Crosse, thence north to Winona, thence west through Minnesota and South Dakota following closely the line of the C. & N. W. Ry., crossing the Missouri river at Pierre, and west to and through the Black Hills and on to Yellowstone Park. The party will travel in automobiles and make addresses at all the towns and cities en route.

Ben M. Wood of Rapid City, S. D., is the committeeman in charge of the arrangements and he will be very glad to correspond with the secretaries of commercial clubs, automobile clubs, or good roads committees in the various cities and towns through which this highway passes. The promoters of this highway intend to exploit it as one of the divisions of an ocean to ocean highway having terminals on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts.

KANSAS CITY CHAPTER DINES

More than one hundred members of the Kansas City Chapter of the American Institute of Banking attended the fourth annual dinner held in the banquet rooms of the Kansas City Athletic Club last week. Byron W. Moser, of St. Louis, president of the American Institute of Banking, was the guest of honor and in his address he pointed out that the organization now has 14,000 members. He said that the plan of extending the work to country banks had been very successful, more than 600 junior officers and clerks in country banks now availing themselves of a correspondence course in connection with the general work. "A man with a certificate of graduation from a chapter such as you have here in Kansas City," said Mr. Moser, "is worth 50 per cent more to a bank than the man who has not taken the course. With his certificate he can land a job in any large city of this country."

President C. A. Burkhardt of the chapter reviewed the work of the past year and read the names of the seventeen men who had been graduated in both the banking and law departments. P. W. Goebel, president of the Kansas City Clearing House Association, spoke upon the various phases of the Aldrich currency reform plan. The following officers of the chapter were elected to serve for one year: President, Joseph C. Jordan, of the Commonwealth National; vice-president, H. L. Larson, of the Commercial National, Kansas City, Kan.; secretary, A. B. Eisenhower, of the Southwest National Bank of Commerce; treasurer, George W. Dillon, of the Commerce Trust Company. With these officers, S. H. Hoefer, C. A. Burkhardt and D. A. McDonald will constitute the executive committee. These delegates were elected to represent the chapter at the annual convention of the American Institute of Banking at Richmond, Va., September 17th, 18th and 19th: C. W. Allendoerfer, George G. Moore, A. B. Eisenhower, H. L. Larson and P. A. Adam.

NEW YORK CHAPTER

By Harold S. Schultz

The midwinter season of New York chapter's progress this year is at an end. In every direction we have gained friends and in every department of our work we have increased our efficiency and strengthened our position as one of the foremost educational institutions of the city. These are strong words, but a brief glance over our membership roll and attendance file, together with a perusal of our extensive curriculum will suffice to prove them without much doubt.

In spite of the fact that a number of men are beginning to experience the first pangs of spring fever and consequently are thinking of more congenial environment than the study hall, as is always the case at this time of the year, our membership roll numbers 2,017, which is an increase of 165 over that of a year ago. While we were congratulating ourselves last year with an average attendance of about sixty men, our lectures this year, are meeting audiences of about 200.

The credit course, which is under the direction of Charles E. Meek of the Fourth National, is a decided success and has helped materially to encourage the young men of our banks to join with us.

Our chapter night entertainers have been of the very best that could be procured. Fortunately the entertainers have been for the most part volunteers from our own ranks. We are proud to have such an excellent pianist as Mr. Bleilevens with us.

COMPLAIN AGAINST WASHED BILLS

Letters have been received from 587 bank presidents and cashiers throughout the country protesting against the practise of the government in washing old currency. It is contended by the bankers that this washing renders the detection of counterfeit money extremely difficult.

A resolution was offered at Washington this week providing for the printing of the letters of complaint as a public document, but an objection interposed by Senator Smoot of Utah prevented it being done.

BANKS TO PAY INTEREST ON U. S. FUNDS

Secretary McAdoo has announced that after June 1st all banks having government moneys on deposit will be required to pay interest on the same at the rate of 2 per cent. The secretary also has authorized an increase of $10,000,000 in government deposits in national banks, which will make that item $52,649,964.

PHILADELPHIA TRUST COMPANIES MAY MERGE

A rumor of the possible merger of the West End and Independent Trust Companies of Philadelphia has been current this week. At a special meeting of the former company the proposition was approved.

Action for better banking and currency laws was asked at a meeting of tthe Minneapolis Credit Men's Association and a resolution was forwarded to the congressmen from the state and President Wilson.

CENTRAL WEST LETTER

By EDGAR P. ALLEN

Omaha

Always ready to adopt innovations that seem promising of good results, the people of Kansas now are preparing to establish a motorcycle patrol extending to all of the counties in the state to run down bank robbers, horse thieves and other wrongdoers. P. E. Zimmerman of Lindsborg, secretary of the Shortgrass Motorcycle Club, is the originator of the idea and he was in Topeka last week presenting his proposition to Governor Hodges and Bank Commissioner Sawyer. The patrol will have two or three members in each Kansas town and all will be deputy sheriffs ready to go thief-chasing on the instant notice is given. The organization will be made up along the lines of the Anti-Horse Thief Association and will work with state and county officers on any matter that may be presented. "I think it is a very good idea," said Bank Commissioner Sawyer. "A man on a motorcycle could do some very effective work in running down wrongdoers. There have been instances in the state where bank robbers escaped in automobiles. A good rider on a motorcycle can run down almost any automobile. Suppose a depredation is committed in a community. If the various members of the motorcycle patrol could be telephoned and a squad gotten out immediately, it would be a pretty hard job for the criminals to get away. I believe that the matter can be worked out and that such an organization would be a very valuable adjunct to the police power of the state." Mr. Sawyer promises to discuss the plan at future meetings of Kansas bankers with the idea of securing active co-operation in working up a motorcycle patrol to extend over the state.

Trust Company to be Liquidated

United States and Mexican Trust Company of Kansas City, capitalized at $2,000,000, of which $1,157,000 has been paid up, is to be liquidated and the assets turned over to the stockholders. This company was formed about ten years ago by A. E. Stilwell to finance the building of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad, and the reason given for closing up the company is that it no longer is needed, its interests having been dissolved from the railroad. The decision to liquidate was reached at a meeting of the stockholders in New York recently, at which time a committee of three attorneys was named to carry out this decision. This committee consists of H. D. Estabrook, general counsel for the company, J. F. Wallace of New York and W. B. Crisp of Detroit, Mich. Mr. Estabrook has announced that liquidation will begin immediately and that none of the stockholders would lose on their investment. The dissolution will be gradual and it is claimed that the assets are worth $3,000,000. The trust company did not do a general banking and trust business. Its assets consist largely of various townsites and lands along the route of the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient Railroad and other forms of investment that accompanied that enterprise. Shortly after the railroad went into a receivership Mr. Stilwell resigned as president of the trust company and was succeeded by E. Quincy Smith. The other officers are: W. L. Karnes, vice-president; A. M. Lovibond, treasurer; O. D. Batchelor, secretary, and J. K. Shinn, assistant secretary. The building at Tenth Street and Baltimore Avenue, Kansas City, owned and occupied by the company, will be sold along with the property of the company.

New Bank Opens

City Center Bank, the latest addition to Kansas City's financial organizations, opened for business Monday morning, April 28th, in its quarters at 1728 Grand Avenue. After a day which was devoted largely to receiving guests and responding to compliments and good wishes from other bankers, the cashier announced that $50,000 in deposits had been received. The offices of the bank were filled with floral tributes and desks generally were piled high with blooms. The bank is a pioneer in a new but rapidly developing business district not far from the new union passenger station which will be ready for occupancy next fall. The meeting of the stockholders, which preceded the opening of the bank several days, resulted in the following official staff: President, John A. Long; vice-president, Robert E. Booth; cashier, Fred S. Bullene. The directors are J. George Wirthman, John A. Long, R. Peltzman, E. L. Roll, Robert E. Booth, E. P. Moriarty, Fred S. Bullene, Robert A. Ostertag, A. J. Shirk, Henry E. Long, E. H. Schubert and H. J. Voigts. The bank has a capital stock of $100,000 and surplus of $10,000, fully paid up.

Group Two, Nebraska

Group Two of the Nebraska Bankers Association met in Fremont last week with 151 members in attendance—the largest in its history. Every bank in the district, with the exception of three, was represented. W. H. Bucholz of Omaha, vice-president of the Omaha National, spoke at the morning session in high commendation of the administration of Comptroller Lawrence O. Murray. In the afternoon Dean Burnett of the State Agricultural College spoke on "Agricultural Development", and E. L. Royse, secretary of the state banking board, gave an historical review of banking in Nebraska. A banquet at the Masonic hall was given in the evening at which Governor Morehead was the principal speaker. Fremont again was chosen for the next meeting of the group.

Oklahoma Convention

Plans for the meeting of the Oklahoma Bankers Association meeting at Muskogee, May 8th and 9th, include an address by Senator Robert L. Owen, chairman of the senate committee on banking and currency. Senator Owen, whose committee will have direct charge of currency legislation in the upper branch of congress, has advised the secretary of the association that he will attend if possible and that he will talk about the plans now under consideration in congress to revise the currency and banking laws. W. B. Harrison of Enid, secretary of the association, has issued the program. H. G. McKeever of Enid will make an address on "Legal Technicalities Affecting the Banker"; Oscar Wells of Houston, Tex., will talk on handling cotton; A. J. Frame, president of the Waukesha (Wis.) National, will speak on "Facts Against Fallacies in Monetary Reform," and Byron Moser, president of the American Institute of Banking, St. Louis, will treat of the "A. I. B. and the Country Banker." The annual address will be delivered by A. E. Ramsey of Muskogee, president of the state association. Nate

Texas Bank Statement

The Texas department of banking issued a condensed statement last week of the condition of the state banks of Texas at the close of business April 4, 1913. During the period from February 4, 1913, to April 4, 1913, being the dates of the last two calls, the capital of state banks and bank and trust companies in Texas increased a net amount of $1,227,500. Three new banks and trust companies were established with $250,000 capital; 17 new banks with $316,000 capital; 16 banks increased their capital $306,500; two banks and trust companies increased their capital $350,000 and two banks changed to banks and trust companies with an increase of $55,000 capital. Three banks with $50,000 capital liquidated. The total capital of the Texas state banks and trust companies now is $29,451,000 with surplus and undivided profits of $9,251,793. Nineteen state banks in Texas operate savings departments.

Complain Against New Law

Bankers and holders of bank stock in Texas suddenly have awakened to the fact that the recent legislature of that state passed a very peculiar law which will prohibit officers and employees of banks from acting as proxies for absent stockholders. Just why this law was enacted nobody seems to know and little publicity was given the bill when it was under consideration. The chief objection is that it will take away a stockholder's right to say who shall represent him in stockholders' meetings and that in some cases it will prevent stock voting at all where the number of stockholders is so small that it would be impossible to find a proxy other than an officer or employee. To evade the restrictions of this law it will be necessary in some cases for bank officials to resign temporarily in order to vote proxies and then re-elect themselves by virtue of these very proxies.

Central West Notes

State Treasurer E. P. Deal, of Missouri, arrived in Kansas City last week with one-eightieth of the state's funds for deposit in the Mercantile Bank of Kansas City. The amount was $63,000. State funds to the amount of $125,000 already have been deposited with the Commerce Trust Company of Kansas City.

First National of Junction City, Kan., announces its plans for a new building in which it will have magnificant banking offices. The new structure will be built on the site of the bank's present home.

Commercial State of Burlington, Kan., was opened last week with J. A. Kennedy, president; B. D. Herreld, vice-president; J. R. Copple, cashier and Lon Kennedy, assistant cashier.

Recently Joseph Swan, a resident of Oklahoma City, Okla., became converted and when urged to ease his conscience by telling of his former misdeeds, he confessed that he participated two years ago in the robbery of a bank at Murphysboro, Ill., during which escapade an officer of the bank was killed. Swan was placed in jail and the Illinois authorities were notified. Swan says he had nothing to do with the murder.

J. E. Whitney, formerly cashier of the Norway (Kan.) State, has resigned and will go to Lincoln, Neb., to become identified with a new institution to be called the Lincoln State Bank.

Calvin (Okla.) National, was robbed of $1,700 in currency recently. Cashier B. J. Badger locked up the bank when he went to the postoffice but neglected to lock the bank's safe. While he was away a robber entered and took all the available currency in sight.

Hibernia Bank and Trust Company of Jacksonville, Tex., capitalized at $100,000, has been organized with these officers: President, W. H. Powell; vice-president, C. C. Childs and W. S. Bonner, secretary and treasurer.

A charter has been issued for the First National of Soper, Okla., with $30,000 capital. This was formerly the State Bank of Soper.

One of the new laws of Nebraska requires a reserve of 20 per cent by all state banks in cities of over 25,000. Formerly such reserve was required only of such banks as were reserve agents for other banking institutions. Another recent Nebraska law allows state banks to loan not to exceed ten times their capital stock and surplus. The former law limited the loans to eight times the capital stock and surplus.

Central State of Enid, Okla., has been organized with $50,000 capital.

The Texas department of banking has authorized the following reserve agents: for the Guaranty State of Groveton, the National Bank of Commerce of Houston and the Commonwealth National of Dallas; for the Citizens State of Petty, the American Exchange National of Dallas; for the Talco State of Talco, the Guaranty State of Mount Pleasant, Tex.; for the Farmers and Merchants State of Kennedy, the Lumberman's National and Union National of Houston; for the Farmers Guaranty State of Seagoville, the Commonwealth National of Dallas; for the Justin State of Justin, the State National of Fort Worth; for the Guaranty State of Greenville, the Continental Bank and Trust Company of Shreveport, La.; for the Falfurrias State, the National Stock Yards National, National Stock Yards, Ill.; for the El Paso Bank and Trust Company, the Harriman National, New York.

State Bank and Trust Company of San Antonio has increased its capital stock from $100,000 to $200,000.

MAUSOLEUM

The above is one of our classic four column front mausoleums. We have erected many hundreds of mausoleums, ranging in price from $2,000 to $100,000. The private mausoleum is the least heartrending method of caring for the deceased.

MECHANICS AND METALS MOVE

Mechanics and Metals National of New York moved on Monday of this week to its new home at 50 Wall Street. The old site of the bank had been occupied for more than a century. Its growth and expansion have been intimately associated with the growth of the city, and during the period of its existence three banking buildings have been erected, each larger than the former.

"THE STORY OF THE GREENBACK"

James K. Lynch, vice-president of the First National of San Francisco, a member of the executive council of the American Bankers Association, remembers his banking acquaintances with a copy of his address delivered before the members of the American Institute of Banking in San Francisco, March 26th, in which he tells entertainingly, instructively and forcefully the "Story of the Greenback."

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Between the last two calls Minnesota banks increased in deposits more than $7,000,000. There was a decrease in overdrafts and bills payable which was considered a movement toward better banking by the state superintendent. Said Mr. Chase:

"It also is to be noted that the banks are getting rid of their real estate and this is urged constantly, for we do not regard it as good banking policy for banks to hold real estate. In the two months the banks of the state added $204,207.94 to the value of their personal property and this we regard as a sure indication of prosperity.

"The increase in the deposits, however, is the real pleasing feature."

Banks Have New Homes

The directors of the Bank of Commerce, Superior, Wis., contemplates a building on Tower Avenue south of the Savoy Theatre between Eleventh and Twelfth Strects. The property is 25 feet front. Another rumor is that the bank will take quarters in the Truax Building. The Merchants of Winona has moved into its new home at Third and Lafayette Streets, one block from its former situation. The cost of the building and equipment was more than $50,000. All the Winona banks now have modern homes. The State of La-Crosse, Wis., has occupied a new banking room at Fourth and Main Streets. It was organized in July, 1879. The building was formerly the MacMillan Building, a large stone structure. The American Exchange Bank, Superior, will move June 1st into enlarged and renovated rooms in the Waterman Block to be named after the bank.

Sixth District Bankers Meet

Sixth District Minnesota bankers met Tuesday at Brainerd. The banquet was at the Ransford hotel. After the usual welcome and responses and official reports, J. H. Worst, president of the North Dakota agricultural college, spoke on "The Banker and the Farmer." Other speakers were as follows: "Bank Taxation," J. W. Wheeler, president Capital Trust, St. Paul; discussion, W. E. Lee, Long Prairie; "Interest Paid by Banks," Kelsey S. Chase, superintendent of banks; discussion, W. W. Smith, cashier First National, St. Cloud; "Good Roads," G. A. Will, chairman good roads committee Minnesota Automobile Association; "The Association," Secretary G. H. Richards.

Ninth District Program

At the Ninth District meeting at Thief River Falls, J. L. Humphrey, Fosston, was elected president. The following program was carried out: Invocation; President's address, T. O. Hofdahl, Beltrami; "The Association," Secretary G. H. Richards; "Agricultural Extension," Superintendent J. H. Hay of public schools; "Some Uplifters," J. H. Smith, St. Paul; "Live Stock in Minnesota," J. B. Smith, university farm; "Commercial, Agricultural and Banking Activities," J. J. Ponsford, Watertown, S. D.; Dinner, Hotel Brumund.

M. L. & T. Co. Celebrates Birthday

Elaborately engraved invitations sent out early this week gave notice of the thirtieth birthday on Thursday of the Minnesota Loan and Trust Company. The decorated quarters were open from 9 A. M. to 5 P. M., and clients and friends of the institution generally turned out to enjoy the frappé, smoke the cigars and discuss old times. Nearly all the original organizers of 1883 are gone, but Eugene A. Merrill still is at the head of the board, and Edmund J. Phelps, first secretary-treasurer, still is an active business man. The company was capitalized at $200,000. In 1909 it affiliated with the Northwestern National and the capital became $1,000,000 with $250,000 surplus. At the April 4th report the combined resources of the affiliated institutions were $38,575,311, and capital, surplus and profits $6,883,450.

Moser Guest of Minneapolis Chapter

Byron W. Moser of St. Louis, president of the American Institute of Banking, was the honor guest at the end-of-the-season dinner of the Minneapolis Chapter in the Minneapolis Club. He said he was glad to be in the native place of the institute. Frank J. Mulcahy, retiring president, was toastmaster. Howard Elliott, president of the Northern Pacific road, was a speaker, also the Rev. J. E. Freeman of St. Mark's Episcopal church, formerly a New York railroad man. Officers of banks and directors were present. Mr. Elliott spoke of "Agriculture, Banking and the Carrier," and Mr. Freeman of "Confidence." E. W. Decker, president of the Northwestern National, closed the program. He said: "There were 50,000 bank officials in the United States ten years ago, and to-day there are more than 100,000. That certainly shows that there are chances for the young men. In our own bank we have made nine official changes within a recent time and in every instance we made the promotions from our own staff. This is the policy of all the Minneapolis banks, and they will not go outside their own doors for new officials unless compelled to. It is up to the young men em-

St. Paul bank clerks have elected officers as follows: President, E. O. Nordstrom, Merchants National; vice-president, S. R. Harley, Capital National; secretary, Ray Brandt, First National; treasurer, C. A. Maley, American National; executive committee, E. Bjorklund, American National and W. Bonebrink, First National. Carmi Thompson, former secretary of the treasury, is to be general manager of the Great Northern and Hill ore properties. This is in preparation for the expiration of the steel trust leases on the property in 1914.

E. W. Decker, Northwestern National, has been made treasurer for the Minneapolis Fresh Air Fund and for the new Minneapolis Saddle and Bridle Club.

Dakota Notes

Group Ten, comprising the South Dakota bankers of Campbell, Walworth, Potter, Faulk and Edmunds counties, has elected officers as follows: President, Chris Vorlander, Eureka; vice-presidents, J. J. Bentz of Mound City, George H. Baker of Lowrey, C. F. O'Brien of Haven, A. M. Moore of Faulkton, C. W. Christen of Roscoe, Irving Parkhurst of Leola; secretary, G. C. Pierce, Selby.

Cass county, N. D., is to have two new banks in which the Merchants National of Fargo is interested. One is to be at Mapleton and one at Argusville. Both will be state banks, capitalized at $10,000. Directors of the Mapleton bank will be: C. H. Thompson and A. L. McKinnon, farmers, both of Mapleton; S. S. Lyon, cashier, and Frank R. Scott, assistant cashier, of the Merchants National. Of the second bank, at Argusville, directors are: A. F. Erickson, machinery; Henry Hildreth, farmer and real estate, both of Argusville; vice-president, H. W. Gearey, and assistant cashier, W. L. Day, Merchants National; G. H. Johnston, Fargo, bank clerk. Mr. Johnston probably will be cashier. Both banks may erect buildings.

Programs are out for the North Dakota Bankers Association meeting, June 17th-18th, at Grand Forks. President R. S. Adams, First National of Lisbon, will call the session and Mayor Murphy will give the welcome.

Addresses will be as follows: "Farm Finances," George Woodruff, president First National, Joliet; "School Savings Bank," N. F. Hawley, treasurer Farmers and Mechanics Savings, Minneapolis; "Good Farming Movement," Joseph Chapman, vice-president Northwestern National, Minneapolis; "New Era in the Detection of Crime," William J. Burns; "Bank Taxation," E. L. Birdzell, chairman state tax commission; "Colonial Currency," J. L. Bell, president First National, Bismarck; "Capitalizing Farming Operations," president, F. L. McVey, North Dakota university; J. U. Ingwersen, president People's Trust and Savings, Clinton, Iowa; "The Bankers' Vision," Dr. P. E. Winship, Boston; "The Cow," W. F. Schilling, Northfield, Minn. A grand ball is to be given at the Auditorium and a picnic at Lincoln park.

The fifth annual meeting of the North Dakota Association, third district group, was held April 29th at Fargo. The program was informal and at night a banquet and theater party were given by the Fargo financiers.

Group No. 5, South Dakota bankers, elected officers as follows: President, E. H. Benedict; secretary, F. H. Gannon of Aberdeen; vice-presidents, F. C. Benjamin of Frederick, F. B. Harrington of Waubay, C. H. Lien of Summit, J. A. Gold of Big Stone, W. S. Given of Britton.

Governor L. B. Hanna of North Dakota has been in Minneapolis looking up a business system of accounting for his state. He said the state has the same system as twenty-five years ago and has grown so that an improvement is desirable. County books may be taken up also. He said:

"North Dakota is in splendid condition. Crop prospects could not be better. The ground is in fine shape with plenty of moisture, and seeding is being done as early as the average time. The state is prosperous in every way and many new people are taking up homes with us.

"Our people do not seem much concerned over the tariff bill. They think that some duty will be left on grain, and few seem to realize what free flour might mean, not only to the miller but to the producer. I regard it myself as a dangerous thing, but the people of the state do not seem to be worried. We are pretty well out of the wool business in North Dakota, so schedule K does not affect us much. We are not producing sugar, so we are glad to see the duty taken off."

Twenty-one banks of Pembina county, N. D., made what is considered a fine showing in the April report, although it is generally a dull season. The capitalization of the five national and sixteen state banks is $379,500. The surplus is $74,036, and deposits $2,130,594. Loans are $1,872,894.

The Cost-Cutting Tractor

No banker would lend money on a farm where the grain is being cut with hand sickles and threshed with flails.

Why?

Because no farm can be run at a profit today with hand-labor tools, and because business swings towards lowest costs.

It is the labor-saving machinery that cuts costs and creates profit on all American farms.

So, every banker should safeguard his land loans by demanding the use of Tractors instead of horses.

RUMELY OIL PULL TRACTOR LA PORTE IND.

This Rumely Tractor provides Cheap Power for all farm uses. It is more powerful than a herd of horses, at half the cost. It saves $1.00 an acre, on plowing alone; and it can be used for various purposes every week in the year.

Thousands of these Rumely Tractors are now in use on farms of 160 acres or more. They cut labor-cost and horse-cost down to the lowest point.

There are 51 Rumely Machines—all cost-cutters.

Pacific Northwest Banking News

Industrial Spokane was awakened as never before when, at a banquet attended by 300 business men, 200 acres of choice land suitable for factory sites was donated to the Industrial committee of the chamber of commerce, and $30,000 was pledged toward a $70,000 "Busier Spokane" fund for the coming year.

During the next few days the remaining $40,000 will be raised by committees headed by President Charles Hebberd of the chamber of commerce and Raymond E. Bigelow, chairman of the "Busier Spokane" committee.

The land donation includes some exceedingly valuable land in the Spokane river valley, four miles east of the city. This will be used as the nucleus of a three-year campaign to build up factories in Spokane.

Business men and property owners are determined that a large payroll is necessary to the prosperity of Spokane. A three-year campaign has been mapped out, and a large amount of preliminary work already is accomplished. It already has been established that labor, market, transportation and other vital conditions are favorable to the success of a great many factories of various kinds.

While the new factories campaign will be the central feature of the Greater Spokane movement during the next few years, business men composing the chamber of commerce are planning to continue the work of increasing farm returns and bettering farm conditions throughout the Spokane country. Considerable attention will be devoted also to encouraging trade relations with the surrounding country. The first annual Pow Wow, or June carnival, will be held this year, June 16th to 21st, and is expected to help business conditions.

"The people of Spokane have placed with the local trust companies property valued at over $10,000,000, and I know of hundreds who have made wills nominating these trust companies as executors which will bring this total up many millions of dollars," said Herbert Witherspoon, vice-president of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, in an address at the Inland club this week. Continuing he said: "The disadvantages of the appointment of an individual as trustee are: sickness may impair and death would end his usefulness, financial responsibility is generally weaker, more changeable, but partly secured by surety bonds. Added to this there is the lack of experience, time and the facilities to insure the best results. Oftentimes one chooses as executor or trustee the wife or one of the children for the purpose of saving the commission or fees allowed by law. Something for nothing is not a principle of business or natural law and it is generally unsafe." W. J. Kommers, cashier of the Union Trust and Savings Bank, was chairman of the Inland Club meeting.

These officers were elected at the annual meeting and banquet of the Spokane Chapter, American Institute of Banking: President, George C. Gage, Exchange National; vice-president, C. H. Hausken, Old National; treasurer, L. G. Green, Traders National; recording secretary, F. B. Peach, Exchange National; financial secretary, E. B. Hutcheck, Old National; corresponding secretary, A. F. Brunkow, Union Trust and Savings; executive council, B. A. Russell, Washington Trust Company, and Albert Kaye, Spokane and Eastern Trust Company; delegate to state bankers convention at Aberdeen, W. E. Tollenaar, Old National; delegate to national convention at Richmond, Va., G. C. Gage; alternate, C. H. Hausken. The committee introduced a novelty in the form of a program printed on a regular bank statement blank, and a menu, each course of which was printed on a counter check of one of the local banks, 10 checks being given each guest, each being an order for one course.

H. T. Tabb, cashier in the city treasurer's office and for nine years an employee of the department, was elected city treasurer to succeed Arthur A. Lewis, who resigned to become a member of the state public service commission. Mr. Tabb's application had the support of every employee of the treasurer's office, and a petition signed by more than 100 city employes was presented to the commissioners, asking that Tabb or some other deputy be appointed in preference to an outsider.

Union Trust and Savings has just published an attractive booklet of 24 pages entitled "Life and Property," devoted entirely to the functions of trust company service in handling estates. The volume is purely educational in character and the text is composed and set up in a series of questions and answers on the subjects of wills and estates. It is edited and compiled by W. J. Kommers, and its publication was inspired by interviews between the bank and its counsel and the many inquiries received by the institution upon the subject of wills and estates. It contains also a brief abstract of Washington laws of inheritance relating to the distribution of property. The booklet was prepared for free distribution among the clients of the bank.

W. H. White, who recently resigned as collection teller of the Spokane and Eastern Trust Company, has accepted appointment as assistant cashier of the First National Bank of Libby, Mont.

Among the out-of-town bankers in Spokane this week were: A. L. Smalley, president of the Bank of Sprague (Wash.); Ernest Weinse, cashier of the Union State of Nez Perce, Idaho; J. B. Crain, president of the Bank of Pasco (Wash.), and H. C. Burns, cashier of the Reardan (Wash.) Exchange.

EDMONTON NEWS

Mayor William Short, who also is chairman of the board of city commissioners, has issued a memorandum to all civic departments that in the future "absolutely no information is to be given out by any of the employees or departments of the city, and clerks, stenographers and others are not to exhibit documents, and are not to permit them to be read. All information is to come to the board of commissioners and will be given to the press through the mayor. This is for the purpose of maintaining proper relations with the press."

Spokane banks that are members of the Montana State Bankers Association received notice that the annual convention of the association will be held this year in Helena, beginning August 15th. In past years Spokane banks have been largely represented at the Montana convention, which always follows the Washington and Oregon conventions.

Plans are under way to install a municipal incinerator plant, costing $140,000, in Edmonton this season. Experts report that it can be made to produce a surplus over the expense account. An incinerator on the south side, erected at a cost of $60,000, will be ready for operations in three weeks.

Rate payers of Edmonton defeated a by-law to raise $2,700,000 for the purchase of land for civic center purposes, at a special election on March 28th, the vote being 2,638 for and 3,079 against. Mayor Short, who opposed the by-law, is pleased with the result, saying it will mean a difference in the right direction in the city's finances. There are 22,304 rate-payers qualified to vote on money by-laws. Of this number 6,235 rate-payers have one vote each, 2,631 have two votes each, 925 have three votes each, and 2,008 have four votes each.

George McTavish, formerly of Cando, N. D., has acquired a business site at Westlock, a new town on the Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia Railway, and will open a large general store. It is likely that a branch bank also will be established there in the near future.

Circulars received in Edmonton from A. H. Stead, secretary-treasurer of the Western Canada Fire Underwriters Association, with headquarters at Winnipeg, show that a flat surcharge of 25 cents has been authorized in Edmonton on all published rates, except dwellings unexposed by mercantile risks.

William L. Abbott of Chicago, president of the board of trustees of the University of Illinois, also gave addresses. After the portrait of the late Edward J. Parker, formerly president of the State Savings, Loan and Trust Company of Quincy, had been unveiled, B. F. Harris, vice-president of the First National of Champaign and former president of the Illinois Bankers Association, gave the concluding address of the conference-dedication, for such it really was, being a most thorough discussion of the application of college training to business life. No better selection of a name in the banking and business life of the state could have been chosen than the name of this highly respected Quincy banker, one of the grand old men of Illinois banking life. W. L. Abbott, president of the university board of trustees, formally presented the building to the custody of President Edmund J. James. Dean Leon H. Marshall of the University of Chicago and President McClelland of Knox College, Galesburg, were other speakers.

Alexander H. Revell, president of the Chicago firm of Alexander H. Revell & Co., in an address on "Commencing Right" appealed to the students to subordinate self to public welfare, to specialize and yet to continue a broad interest in the general affairs of business, to develop initiative and, above all, to conserve health and personal strength. Mr. Revell pointed out to the young men that thousands of business men are compelled to drop out of the business world because of ill-health and urged them that they should carefully develop and conserve their physical strength. The Chicago merchant also urged that while great wealth is considered an index in most cases to a man's business success yet many men of moderate incomes and fortunes are more often more successful than those of larger wealth. Honesty and character of the good old sort without any qualifications were urged by Mr. Revell as absolute essentials in a business career and especially securing and mantaining of credit with banks and firms.

Charles A. Ewing of Decatur, a large landowner and business man, discussed the question of business success upon the farm, especially as it was related to the problems of soil conversation. Dean David Kinley, director of the commerce courses of the university, outlined the needs of the commercial courses in colleges and universities developing strong leaders, and another interesting speaker was Dr. Leon C. Marshall of the commerce courses of the University of Chicago.

The Commerce Building

The Commerce Building as it now stands is only one-fourth as large as it will be extended with later additions. In fact the east facade with its elaborate entrance will be the only elevation of the present building which will appear as now when the entire structure is completed. Within, the building is as near complete in appointment and beauty as could be desired, ample space being given to offices, lecture and recitation rooms, laboratories for the study of business procedure, accountancy practise rooms, reading rooms, a statistics laboratory and other rooms. The building will be equipped as rapidly as possible with all computing and calculating machines used in actual business, many of them being already installed, while the libraries with the current periodicals and journals devoted to all phases of the business world will be found in the reading room. The building, while incomplete as it now stands, is well adapted for the work in hand and the commerce courses will be handled in a more efficient manner than ever before. More appropriations from the state will be needed to complete and fully equip the building, but the work is so well begun that it commands the respect and confidence of the business world.

There are indications to-day in our commercial life in the United States that more efficient service will be the watchword of the coming years and in order to render this high service of business and personal efficiency the colleges and universities of the land will be called upon to render material aid in the moral and technical training of young business men. The University of Illinois is now in a very marked sense enabled to do its share in giving to the world young men who "though beginners in business" are especially trained to enter commercial life. What this service which the university will render to Illinois and other states will amount to, will be seen in the coming years. It is believed that the young men will be trained to start low in business life if necessary, work hard, shirk no task, master detail and advance themselves more rapidly than their non-trained associates. Such is the practical ideal of the business courses of the University of Illinois.

William Glasteeger, a well-to-do farmer near Mason City, was adjudged insane after he had made arrangements to secure $3,000 from a bank at that place for the purpose, he said, of making a bonfire. Glasteeger had set fire to a few bills earlier in the day but had not come into possession of the $3,000 for which he had negotiated upon his farm.

Whether Governor Clarke will veto the famous "Blue Sky" law which went through the Iowa legislature in the closing hours of the session is a question that is being discussed with interest in Iowa at the time of writing. The bill was the first introduced when the senate convened and the last passed before the house adjourned. Opponents of the measure who had supposed it was killed, took a new lease on life and secured the consent of Governor Clarke to hold a hearing. This was done and at the hearing the bill was declared unconstitutional, expensive, crude, carelessly drawn and altogether full of holes. One of the charges upon which emphasis was placed is that the measure contains a provision which exempts banks from examination by the secretary of state, although the latter is the official investigator of every corporation which sells stock under the terms of the bill. Brokers must be examined and licensed, give bond, make reports and be residents of Iowa for six months. But the law exempts bankers from this provision. On this account, it was declared at the hearing, that to evade the law a man would only need to start a private bank.

"I do not know whether or not the author of this bill is a private banker," said one of the speakers, "but I do know that under that law I could evade every provision by simply hanging out a shingle and taking in deposits."

One of the grounds upon which the constitutionality of the measure is attacked is that it gives bankers rights not conferred upon other individuals and is therefore class legislation. Also it is charged that interest on farm loans would be increased, securities lowered in value and industrial stocks affected to their detriment.

Legislature Enacts Laws Favorable to Bankers

Secretary Hall of the Iowa Bankers Association is well satisfied with the bank legislation secured at the assembly which adjourned a fortnight ago. The legislative committee did not secure all that it hoped and there is general disappointment on the part of bankers that the taxation laws were not changed so as to place them on an equitable basis with other taxpayers. However, it was apparent for some time that the tax commission report would not "get by," so bankers were prepared to expect nothing from that source. Among the measures adopted of especial interest to bankers, Mr. Hall enumerates the following:

The law permitting state and savings banks and trust companies to act in a fiduciary capacity.

The law authorizing postal savings banks to deposit in state and savings banks.

The law permitting the payment of compensation to directors for attending meetings.

The law authorizing state and savings banks to loan money on real estate located in an adjoining state providing it is in the tier of counties adjoining Iowa.

The law fixing penalty for failure of bank officer to give a complete list of stockholders of state, savings or national banks at fine not to exceed $500.

Of the measures considered in which bankers were more than ordinarily interested, the bill for state inspection of private banks was one which was knocked out. Likewise bills preventing the circulation of slanderous statements concerning a bank. Secretary Hall's bill to stiffen up the penalty for bank burglary was passed but not in the form first introduced. It is not as severe as was desired.

Group Eight Holds Meeting

Group Eight held a most enjoyable session at Muscatine last week. About 140 bankers from eastern Iowa were present and a good sized delegation from Des Moines enjoyed the hospitality of the city on the Mississippi. The convention was called to order at the Commercial Club rooms by Chairman Reihman of Grand Mound. H. F. Giessler, president of the German American at Muscatine, gave the address of welcome and Chairman Reihman responded. M. H. Calderwood of Eldridge made several recommendations on behalf of the legislative committee. The only one adopted was that the state auditor issue the state call simultaneously with the national call. Among the resolutions adopted were those favoring H. G. Moore of Wellman for treasurer of the I. B. A. and the establishment of a state banking department. A resolution endorsing a prospective law to prohibit overdrafts did not get a second. Also a resolution favoring clearing houses in cities of 15,000 population was defeated.

Senator John F. Webber spoke to the convention upon the actions of the recent legislature. Secretary P. W. Hall invited the bankers to the state convention at Des Moines in May. George L. Schoonover gave an illustrated lecture on the Panama canal. At 5:30 the Muscatine bankers were hosts at a banquet. Some brilliant after-dinner speeches were made by A. F. Dawson of Davenport, F. B. Yetter of Davenport and other well-known financiers. Souvenirs in the shape of pearl button pins were given out significant of the great pearl button industry of Muscatine.

Reynolds Tells of Conditions in the West

Arthur Reynolds of the Des Moines National is back in Iowa after a winter in California. Mr. Reynolds reports that the West is slowing down after an unusually prosperous season. While there is considerable building, he reports that money is not so easy as it has been and trade channels are showing a decline. California was heavily hit by the cold wave which destroyed the citrus crop and is likewise somewhat worried over the possible withdrawal of the tariff on citrus fruits.

Iowa Notes

S. C. Kimm gave an interesting talk on banking conditions in China at a recent meeting of the Waterloo Bank Clerks Association. The Chinese loan and the attitude of President Wilson were explained at length to the auditors. I. W. Blough and A. T. Rugg were other speakers.

Among out-of-the-city bankers recently seen in Des Moines may be mentioned Cashier C. E. Lofland, Oskaloosa National; Vice-President M. Forbes, Shawmut National, Boston; Cashier C. A. Twyford, Osceola National; President D. Mulholland, Farmers State, Paton; President Frank Dunning, Citizens at Bedford; President W. K. Ferguson, First National, Algona; President F. M. Hopkins, Peoples State, Guthrie Center; Cashier H. A. French, Mills County National, Glenwood; Vice-President E. D. Rayburn, First National, Montezuma; Cashier Frank Roberts, Citizens State, Newton.

Iowa bankers will be interested to know that this state once more has a tax ferret law though not one of the sort to which so much objection was made prior to its repeal two years ago. This newest law was enacted by the recent Iowa legislature. It gives the executive council the right to employ inquisitors for the purpose of getting after suspected tax dodgers. The old law gave boards of supervisors this power. It is thought improbable that the old-time methods ever will be restored to Iowa. The law enacted two years ago, placing moneys and credits upon a flat rate of 5 mills, was left undisturbed by the assembly this year although its terms were attacked upon several occasions.

State Senator Joseph Mattes of Odeboll, chairman of the appropriations committee in the senate for several legislative sessions, is doped as a candidate for state auditor two years hence. Auditor of State Bleakly probably will retire at the end of that time. Auditor Bleakly is talked of as insurance commissioner in charge of the new separate insurance department which the legislature voted to establish at its recent session.

Grinnell Savings, one of the well-known banks in central Iowa, announces the construction of a new $25,000 institution. It will be two stories high, 75 by 40. For twenty years the bank has been in the Grinnell Block, the oldest business house in the city.

German Savings, Des Moines, has denied that it is considering moving into the Equitable building when that structure is vacated by the F. M. Hubbell company. The latter will occupy the new ten-story Hubbell building just completed.

The bank at Cantril opened its new building formally a fortnight ago. It was an enjoyable affair and the patrons of the institution were delighted with the structure.

J. N. Smith has resigned as clerk of the district court in Buchanan county to become cashier of the new Iowa State at Hazelton, which starts business May 10th, taking the place of the old Kiefer Bank.

The Mount Ayr Bank, owned by Allen Brothers, now is quartered in its new brick building, declared to be one of the prettiest banks in southern Iowa.

Mrs. Harry Blackburn, wife of the cashier of the Iowa National, Des Moines, will leave shortly accompanied by her son, Mortimer, for a tour of England and the Continent.

S. N. Wagner secured a restraining order stopping the Mechanics Savings of Des Moines from levying on five shares of stock he owns in the Anita Savings. The defendant bank secured judgment against Wagner for $1,159, but Wagner asserts proper notice was not given him.

F. B. Miller, cashier of the Cedar Falls National at Cedar Falls, has gone to Los Angeles, where he will put in several weeks settling up the estate of the late A. F. Call of Sioux City, who recently was killed there in an automobile accident.

Iowa State Bank will be the name of the institution which will operate at Hazelton. It will take the place of the Kiefer bank, which closed its doors following an unexpected run.

N. C. Hall becomes cashier of the First National at Olin.

South Dakota Notes

F. J. Welch, formerly in the state examiners' department, has purchased the interest of Cashier J. W. Bryant in the Ethan State of Ethan.

The unprecedented influx of Canadian coin into the Black Hills country in recent months has led the First National at Deadwood to refuse to accept it at par. The bankers are of the opinion that some parties have been getting the coin in the East at a discount and working it off at par in South Dakota.

J. B. Coleman of Oelrichs and A. B. Bartlett of Chadron have purchased the Atwell Bank at Oelrichs. The name will be changed and Coleman will become president, with Bartlett cashier.

A three-story building will be constructed by the Merchants Loan and Trust Company at Rapid City.

Farmers and Merchants at Egan has been granted a charter. The capital stock is $10,000. Principal stockholders are J. A. Wyland and H. H. Cook of Marion Junction, and Lee Buck of Flandreau.

President J. E. Bachmore of the First State at Stickney has purchased the interest of P. E. Cooper and assumes entire control of the bank.

S. O. Steenland is president; Albert Hegnes vice-president and Helmer Hegnes cashier of the Lakeside State at Lake Andes, which recently was sold by Albert Amundson and others.

BANKERS MUST CO-OPERATE TO STOP FRAUDS ON BANKS

("London "Financial News.")

During recent years the number of frauds which bankers have suffered seems to have been continually increasing, so that at the present time there can be little doubt that most of the larger banks have given the matter very careful consideration and have each of them drafted certain regulations to minimize the chance of loss in that direction. Unfortunately, however, although the majority of frauds are conducted on the usual stereotyped lines, yet every now and then some clever variation is planned, which is probably nearly always successful, for the obvious reason that most bank officials have little time to spare, so that any transaction which appears to run on ordinary lines has a fair prospect of passing through unchallenged.

Bankers as a class have also a dislike for publicity, and there is no doubt that many frauds are perpetrated which never become known beyond the victimized bank, and perhaps, even then, a small circle of its officials. Now this is just the very opportunity which swindlers need to repractice their tricks on some other bank on similar lines to those which already have proved successful. The knowledge of this flaw in their armor has led certain banking men to suggest that every bank in this country (or beyond if they like) should band themselves together to form a sort of self-protection association. That is to say, that every one of them would undertake that, as soon they discovered any fraud or attempted fraud on themselves, they immediately would draw up a circular giving the fullest possible details, and send the same to every other member of the association, so that the information might be distributed immediately among all their officers. This is, of course, done occasionally at the present time; but it is desired to systemize it, so that the details are distributed in every case, big or little, without any loss of time whatever. There can be little doubt that if such were done the swindling fraternity would find their lot rather harder than at present. Incidentally, it should, in some cases, prove the means of catching the perpetrators of successful frauds, who might have escaped had it not been for such a system of publicity.

It is possible that some institutions with misplaced sensitiveness might object to their misfortunes being circularized all over the country; but it would, of course, be understood that such circulars were absolutely private, and were not to be mentioned outside the bank doors. If thought desirable in any particular case, it also would be possible to suppress the name of the victimized bank, merely giving details of the fraud; but, so far as possible, it would be better to give all particulars, as the name of the locality would in many cases be very important. So far as machinery is concerned this would occasion little difficulty, as there can be no reasonable doubt that the Institute of Bankers would consent to act as the central body if they were asked to do so. Their circulars would only need to be sent to the head office of the banks, who would themselves undertake to advise their branches, and thus the actual clerical work thrown on the institute, if they consented to act, would be small. Incidentally, the institute would be enabled thus to form a very valuable "criminal library," and the whole result of the scheme, provided it be worked properly, shoull be to minimize considerably any bank swindler's prospect of success.

Friday evening the annual banquet of the association was held at 8 P. M., President Van Deusen acting as toastmaster. Among the speakers of the evening were the Hon. John Burke, treasurer of the United States; the Hon. J. Thompson Baker, member of the house of representatives from New Jersey; Dr. George E. NEW JERSEY BANKER WHO HAS MADE GOOD

David M. Flynn, cashier of the First National of Princeton, N. J. is one of the younger bankers of the state and possesses an enviable record of things accomplished. Since his connection with the First National the resources of the institution have grown from $305,000 to $924,000, the deposits from $200,000 to nearly a million and surplus and undivided profits from $14,000 to $52,000. A modern five-story building has been built by the bank and the adjoining property purchased on which it is proposed to erect an extension to take care of future growth. Mr. Flynn is the author of many practical bank forms, his discount register and certificate of deposit forms being well known to New York bankers.

DAVID M. FLYNN
Cashier First National, Princeton, N. J.

Mr. Flynn's activities have not been confined solely to the banking profession. He is prominently identified with the New Jersey National Guards and active in the Knights of Columbus and the American-Irish Historical Society. When President Wilson left Princeton for Washington, his fellow-townsmen presented the president with a loving cup and selected Col. Flynn to make the presentation speech, which task was creditably discharged. Mr. Flynn is prominent in local and state affairs and has a host of friends all over the country.

The CHICAGO BANKER

A Weekly Paper Devoted to the Banking and Financial Interests of the Middle West

MAY 10, 1913 — Entered as Second-Class Matter January 15, 1903, at the Post Office at Chicago, Illinois, under Act of March 3, 1879 — 10 CENTS A COPY

At Briarcliff

There were about 150 bankers from all parts of the country in attendance on the sessions of committees and of the Executive Council at Briarcliff Lodge this week.

President Charles H. Huttig of St. Louis was unable to be present owing to illness and his place was taken by Vice-President Arthur Reynolds, president of the Des Moines National. Mr. Reynolds said that the most important matter to the banking interests of the country was prospective banking and currency legislation. He said the idea is "to liquify the commercial credit of banks so as to provide a more flexible currency."

The bankers also are interested in the administrative features of the proposed income tax, which makes the banks largely the collectors of the tax without compensation. Mr. Reynolds said the proposed law was ambiguous on several points.

The matter was discussed at length at the meeting of the trust company section. It is understood that an effort will be made to have some of the provisions modified.

Joseph Chapman of Minneapolis, chairman of the committee on agricultural and financial development and education, told of the work that has been done by bankers' committees in many of the western states in having laws passed for the appointment of county agents to demonstrate improved methods of husbandry and for practical instruction for farmers' sons and daughters.

The clearing house section considered several matters of importance, chief of which was the movement for the incorporation of such bodies. It was decided that this matter should be discussed at Boston in October.

It was decided that a close watch should be kept on the introduction of bills to prohibit the examination of banks by clearing house examiners, in order that the state bankers' associations might be advised and urged to put the facts before the legislators, who often are not acquainted with the merits of the question.

Proposed abolition of the $500 limit on postal savings deposits was under consideration by the savings bank section, which went on record as being opposed to raising the limit on the ground that in times of panic people would withdraw their deposits from the banks when they were most needed and put them in the postal savings banks.

The following reports were submitted at the opening session: Administrative committee, general secretary, treasurer, general committee, manager of protective department, and of the trust companies, savings banks, clearing house, American Institute of Banking and the state secretaries sections.

Reports of these two committees were also given: Bill of lading, and the federal legislative.

The executive council adopted a resolution recommending to the A. B. A. that it take action to bring to the attention of the president and congress the necessity for prompt banking and currency legislation.

Certain bad features of the proposed income tax law also came in for their share of discussion.

ASA E. RAMSAY
MUSKOGEE, OKLAHOMA

MR. MALOTT, in addition to being president of the Kansas Bankers Association during the past year, is head of the Citizens Bank of Abilene. During his administration as chief officer of the Kansas bankers the standard of efficiency of that body has been high and a record established which it will be difficult to surpass.

Asa E. Ramsay, retiring president of the Oklahoma Bankers Association, is vice-president of the First National of Muskogee. Mr. Ramsay always has been a prominent participant in matters calculated to advance the interests of the Oklahoma bankers. In his annual address delivered this week at Muskogee he made a strong, convincing plea for improved agricultural methods and conditions.

GEORGE M. REYNOLDS RETURNS

George M. Reynolds, president of the Continental and Commercial National, returned to Chicago on Saturday last after a vacation of fourteen weeks spent in California.

Mr. Reynolds said there is nothing to fear in a wise revision of the tariff, as protection has been overplayed. He said:

"I am not opposed to the income tax feature of the tariff bill and have confidence in a good measure of currency reform. Bankers will meet the government half way, but it is presumable that the first currency legislation at this time will only be in the nature of a compromise or installment.

"My conferences in California convince me the United States has the favor of Chinese for future trade. I see nothing other than encouraging in home affairs."

Mainly About Banks and Bankers

NEARLY all that follows happened at Briarcliff, the event being the mid-year meeting of the executive council and committees of the American Bankers Association.

MONDAY was given over to committee meetings.

THE agricultural committee drew the largest house, just as it did last year. Ex-President Livingstone, Vice-President Reynolds and Chairman Davis attended among the notables.

GEORGE ROGERS of Little Rock was surprised and grieved when he heard the state reports read and his beloved Arkansas was not among those present.

"WHY Joe," he said, "Arkansas has forty county demonstrators at work and most of you all have but three or four to the state."

E. J. CURTIN nearly exploded when the I's were read and nothing from Iowa came out in the wash.

WELL, what do you think of that, and McNider, the chairman is here at the meeting. It didn't look good for Charley nor was Rogers comforted until Chairman (his other name is Joe) Chapman gave leave to have additional reports filed.

McNIDER said he'd get the dope the other states had filed and unless language failed him, would go them a few better.

THE committee passed upon several congressional bills upon agriculture and vocational education and thanked and discharged the special farm credit subcommittee of which Herrick of Ohio and Chamberlain of Texas had been shining lights.

AND all this happened before it had spent a cent of the committee's appropriation.

BRIARCLIFF is the decapitating station for committees which overstay their invitation. Was last year also.

ROLLIN P. GRANT donated his big car to the use of the boys in exploring the beautiful drives in West Chester and adjoining counties.

A FAVORITE run was over to West Point on the west shore and down to Dobb's Ferry on the return.

THE Harriman "farm" and the Pocantico estate of John D. were favorite objective points.

B. F. HARRIS had an autograph copy of The Outlook the Colonel.

LEWIS E. PIERSON took the numerous inquiries as to the latest price on prunes in the same jolly spirit in which they were made.

HIS popularity in the A. B. A. is of the ever blooming variety.

HE started in Sunday to invite a "few good friends" down to Wednesday's ball game.

The list expanded just as the Irving did under his hand.

RALPH VAN VECHTEN had a new set of clubs, new golf bag and new suit. The in-shoots and out-shoots, the curves and particularly the fade-away balls—well, they would have given Matty the blues.

E. F. SWINNEY had a set of loaded-dice clubs, all irons. The heads were cast hollow and filled with rubber. What they would do to a golf ball was the sensation of the week.

THE Law boom, which was incubated in Tennessee, is said to have "failed" in New Jersey and Arkansas, and as a campaign expedient to be much out of favor in other states.

MANY thought Pennsylvania should present the names of real Pennsylvanians, such as Joseph Wayne, R. E. James or any of a dozen that could fill the place.

NOT a word was heard against Wm. A. Law. The criticism was directed solely at the indorsement plan pursued by his friends to procure his nomination at Boston.

A. D. GRAHAM of Baltimore was favorably spoken of for the treasurership and the southwestern representatives didn't let any one forget that "Fred" Hoopes is in the race also.

THERE isn't any denying the popularity or claims of either of the prospective candidates.

PIERSON and Grant both sent a big touring car to be used by the members of the council and their kindness was fully appreciated.

THE finest of the Briarcliff drives only reminded E. F. Swinney of the trip up to his big stock farm at Excelsior Springs from K. C.

GEORGE WOODRUFF says he believes a chain of co-operative banks would beat the chain of "movies."

MISS FRANKLIN of Deadwood and Mrs. Ingalls were in demand at the Monday night's ball. Knew all the new steps, too.

MR. AND MRS. E. R. FANCHER of Cleveland, were voted the "best" in the contest for matched pairs at all steps.

THEY had to move the camera back a bit to get all of Rome C. Stephenson on the plate for the South Bend group.

SECRETS will out. They had the story at the Lodge that nobody else in Illinois had a look-in for the comptrollership if Wm. A. Heath will take it.

"SOME big bankers out at Chicago (names purposely omitted) were asked to name a man," so the story ran, "and they decided upon Heath the first ballot."

WHAT Heath will say still is a secret. You couldn't name a finer man if you tried.

THE members of the council were pleased that the committee on constitutional revision decided to submit a report although its work is not completed.

OF the committee, those present were R. E. James, chairman, C. H. McNider (who started it all) and O. E. Dunlap. No committee ever had a harder riddle to solve in so short a time.

VICE-PRESIDENT ARTHUR REYNOLDS, in the absence of President Huttig (in the Adirondacks), presided at the banquet given through the courtesy of the Briarcliff Lodge to the council and all guests of the association.

PRESIDENT JAMES G. CANNON of the Fourth National, New York, was one of the dominating figures of the lobby and his opinion on the proposed currency legislation was sought by all.

Commercial, Savings and Bond Departments

THE federal legislative committee headed by E. F. Swinney and accompanied by Vice-President Reynolds, made a flying trip down to the city on Monday night.

IT is said they were given a first-hand interview lasting several hours with the M. C. who is working the caucus currency bill.

ONE man said he believed it chiefly was aimed at Wall Street but that it would minimize the power and influence of all the present reserve centers.

F. A. CRANDALL and W. C. Macfadden are the single-year men and neither felt he could afford to miss a thing. Crandall represented the Institute and Macfadden the secretaries section.

REMINDS one that the Aurora-crowned Texan who was to have had a look-in last year was kept away by a conflicting date for his own state convention.

HOWEVER, Hoopes was not forgotten. His friends kept his memory green by referring to him as "the next treasurer," etc.

A. D. GRAHAM was on the spot and if the suffragist movement should win out in the association before Boston he might be "the next, etc."

BOTH are popular and deserving. Will be a nice race if both sit in to the finish.

ALFRED M. BARRETT, New York, and a popular fellow of the Institute was in attendance.

JOSEPH TALBERT was up at the Lodge on Tuesday to take his old friends, Ralph Van Vechten and John McHugh, over to Sleepy Hollow for a day at golf.

MRS. F. E. FARNSWORTH kept her big touring car busy showing the ladies, and at times gentlemen, the most beautiful of the viewpoints.

THE quiet boom for Joseph Chapman for vice-president at Boston became quite a fixture during the week.

THE sentiment for this discoverer of new issues and wisely chosen uplift movements came from all over.

NEW JERSEY and California joined the dissenters as to the "Private" Haas political methods in choosing officers for the A. B. A. They decided it isn't a state association prerogative.

SOL. WEXLER blew in on Monday with a new flood story. It was entirely different from the last year's edition and both quite true.

THE council isn't likely to keep up coming to Briarcliff indefinitely, even if it is the prettiest spot and the best resort hotel in America.

THEY ought to come at least once each three years so as to give all full-term members a chance to see it.

AND ladies, don't for any reason, no matter how plausible, let your husband come alone.

THOSE who had read of Fletcher Farrell's extended stay at Excelsior Springs were surprised to see him looking so fine and "hard as nails."

OF course some of them don't know what a slight illness will take Fletcher back to that good old Missouri.

NELSON N. LAMPERT and his good wife had the time of their lives. He was about the only banker present who had nothing else to do.

PRESIDENT LUCIUS TETER of the Chicago Savings, got in a day late but came with his tool kit open and ready for work.

SEVERAL telegrams were sent off to George M. Reynolds to congratulate him upon his fine physical condition after a winter in California.

HE was greatly missed when story-telling was the present order. None of the exes ever left a more noticeable vacant chair.

WILLIAM GOODROADS (copyrighted) Edens was serving his last year on the council where he has been a recognized power.

IT gives Edens great pleasure to be around to introduce New York City bankers to each other, but he's the candy for the 100.

B. FARMER HARRIS was happy at being permitted to write all the resolutions, for which he has a weakness.

HE carries a portfolio of polished-by-hand resolves and whereases to fit any occasion. The joke about this is that it is strictly true.

OUR good friend Howe of Princeton is the handy man on the council. He is "on terms" with Woodrow and made good on getting an inside interview with the president for the legislative committee.

THE council took in hand the order of proceedings at Boston. This year the sections all will meet on Tuesday (committees on Monday) and then Wednesday and Thursday will be regular A. B. A. sessions. This was a long hoped for accomplishment.

COL. R. E. JAMES demonstrated once more his complete mastery of the situation when members of the council wanted to pick his report on the new constitution to bits.

HE has never lost a contest of the kind in his life, because he is fair, fortified and a fighter.

THE revision, so called, does away with the sections as at present organized and deposes the chairman of council.

THERE will be conflicting views wherever there are conflicting interests. It is so in the Big Council.

ALL opposition died down however and every member of the council will get a copy of the report (see another column) at once and a copy of the final draft of the constitution as soon as it is prepared.

EVERY member of the A. B. A. should study the provisions of the document for himself.

CHAIRMAN OTLEY of the clearing house section has invited the A. B. A. convention to Atlanta for 1914. San Francisco has asked for it in 1915.

C. H. McNIDER was caught red-handed by Mrs. J. C. Calfee making away with her satchel containing a precious box of candy.

L. P. HILLYER made the "hit" of the banquet night with his matchless rendition of "When Bryan came to Butte."

W. D. VINCENT was continually being mistaken for Chairman T. J. Davis. It all comes from having cubist faces, says Vincent.

Full Report on New A. B. A. Constitution

Text of the document as presented at Briarcliff. Called by Joseph Chapman and others the ablest ever presented to the Executive Council. Will make important changes if adopted at Boston convention

To the chairman and members of the executive council of the American Bankers Association:

Gentlemen: The undersigned, a committee appointed by resolution of the general convention of the American Bankers Association at its last annual meeting at Detroit, and by the same resolution instructed to present for the action of the next annual convention a general revision of the constitution of the association, beg leave in order to comply with the constitution in the matter of proposed amendments, and in order "that the executive council may arrange to bring" such revision "before the general convention under the regular order of business," and for the further purpose of informing the executive council of the general progress made by the committee of the convention, and for the solicitation of the suggestions from the executive council, to present the following report:

The committee has given careful attention to all of the features of the existing organic law and has endeavored to study thoroughly the general condition of the association in all its phases, in order to correct, in so far as possible, those features of the present constitution and by-laws which, either by reason of the growth of the association, the uncertainty of expression, or inefficient methods, seem to work adversely to the best interests of the association.

It should be remembered that the present constitution is a growth covering the entire period of the existence of the organization. Seldom has a year passed that did not bring with it numerous efforts at amendment, many of which instead of simplifying increased the confusion. The original draft was hurriedly prepared and with little knowledge of the requirements it would be called upon to meet, and all subsequent amendments became necessarily attempts to correct some particular evil either of construction, failure to provide, or of developed weakness and were attached to the original draft wherever it was thought best. The natural consequence was that the document became more and more vague and uncertain, and because of lack of provision and apparently antagonistic features became almost impossible of lucid interpretation. The design of this committee has been to endeavor to preserve the good of the present law, to improve by conservative additions or changes in important features, and above all to make the document as nearly as possible a logical instrument, readily intelligible, and one wherein any subject could be easily found in its logical place.

The committee thus far has accomplished something in this direction, and while the changes which the committee will present for the consideration of the convention are not of a too radical character, they will nevertheless require, in order to accomplish the purposes above set forth, very great changes in phraseology and in location, thereby making necessary the rewriting of practically the entire instrument.

In the draft proposed, the "Declaration" and Article I will remain unchanged, but thereafter the entire instrument will be subject to changes. Many clauses and sections of the present instrument are retained virtually in their entirety, but, in order to have them appear in their logical order in the instrument, will be placed in new position.

R. E. JAMES
Easton, Pennsylvania
Chairman A. B. A. Constitutional Revision Committee

For the information of the executive council and in order that the committee may have the benefit of any suggestions desired to be made by the executive council, prior to their concluding their labors in the preparation of a final draft, and in order to comply with the provision of the last article of the constitution, this report, setting forth a résumé of the general features of change, is now submitted.

The committee has tentatively agreed upon a draft which, after the declaration and title, may cover the following subjects:

First. Membership and all the incidents thereto.

Second. The general convention as the supreme authority of the association, its organization, qualifications of its delegates and election of its officers.

Third. The officers of the association, their terms, powers and duties.

Fourth. The executive council, its organization, qualifications and elections of its members, its authority and duties, its officers and their duties, and the organization, membership, and duties of its committee.

Fifth. General convention committees and their creation, terms of office, powers and duties.

Sixth. Sections and their authorization and a provision by by-law for the extension of their number and their control.

Seventh. The method of amendment of the constitution practically remaining as heretofore.

Eight. Such by-laws as are necessary to carry into effect the provisions of the constitution.

This outlines the plan of the proposed revision. The committee desires to indicate to the council the prominent features of change in the proposed draft as compared with the present instrument.

First. Membership. Membership qualifications remain practically the same as heretofore with the exception that members outside of the jurisdiction of the United States are made associate members with all privileges except that of voting.

Second. The general convention. The supreme authority is vested in the general convention. Provision is made for annual sessions and special sessions of the general convention. Provision is made for the election of a president and vice-president of the association, and state vice-presidents.

Third. The duties of the president and vice-president and state vice-presidents are set forth. State vice-presidents are elected by state bankers associations and are not merely nominated by such associations as heretofore.

Fourth. The executive council. (a) The members of the executive council are elected by the state bankers associations and not as heretofore merely nominated by those organizations. The council is composed of the president, the vice-president, the last former president of the association and elected members. This provision eliminates from the council honorary membership, except as to the last former president, the president and vice-president. All former presidents, however, are granted the privileges of the floor in all meetings of the executive council, but without vote.

(b) The draft provides that the president of the association shall be chairman of the executive council and that in his absence the executive council shall elect one of its members as chairman pro tem.

(c) The draft proposes two classes of council committees—permanent council committees and special council committees. It further proposes the organization of permanent council committees as follows:

The committee on law.
The committee on federal legislation.
The committee on membership.
The administrative committee.
The finance committee.
The protective committee.

It provides further that all permanent council committees shall be elected by the executive council from their own membership in classes in each committee of one, two or three years' terms. The council at its first meeting after the adoption of the constitution to organize these committees by such elections for such terms, and yearly thereafter to elect to each of such committees one-third of its membership for a three-year term. Such committees to elect their own chairmen. The special council committees to be either elected or appointed as the council may direct. The duties of the committees are closely defined with the hope that should the draft be adopted, committees will not mistake the boundaries of their authority. Wide authority is given to the council in the matter of the supervision of expenditures, extending to the control of all officers, of all subordinates as to expenditures, salaries, or compensations, and extends to the control of the finances of the sections.

(d) The finance committee is changed in its composition in this respect: The draft provides that it shall consist of three members of the council of the one-year class, three members of the two-year class and three members of the three-year class, together with the vice-president and treasurer of the association. The vice-president to be chairman of the finance committee. The restrictions upon appropriations and expenditures remain approximately the same, but possibly more stringent. The result of the revision may require the adoption by the council of standing rules for the direction and control of the finance committee.

(e) The protective committee is appointed by the president of the association as chairman of the executive council from the three classes of the council, and, as now, their names remain unknown.

Fifth. (a) General convention committees are of three kinds—standing committees, session committees and special committees. Standing committees are appointed either by the convention or by the president as may be ordered in classes of one, two and three years' service and at each convention the vacancies from the expiration of term are filled by appointments for a term of three years and other vacancies from the class in which the vacancy occurs. It also provides that no member of the association shall be a member of more than one standing committee at the same time. It also provides that no member whose term has expired shall immediately be reappointed upon such committee except by the unanimous vote of the convention. Session and special committees whether appointed for the pending work of the convention or for work during the interim between conventions shall be appointed by the president unless otherwise ordered, and the first class shall expire with the convention, and the second class shall expire at the succeeding convention, unless especially continued by the act of the general convention.

(b) In order that the organization of committees and the continuance or discharge may be not overlooked, and in order that the records may be certain, the draft provides that a special order of business entitled "Committees and committee membership" shall be placed on the program at the annual sessions of the general convention, under which order all committees shall be listed, and, being taken up in their order, shall be discharged, continued, vacancies filled or changes made as to the convention may seem proper.

(c) The currency commission is treated as a special creation of the association and is created with provisions for the continuation of its membership, and it is especially provided that it shall not be subject to the rules enacted for the control and membership of the general convention committees.

(d) The nominating committee is to be elected by the state bankers associations of the various states, and receives its authority from their associations.

Sixth. The sections are authorized to be established and regulated by by-law, and in this connection a by-law is proposed which authorizes the establishment by the council, if it shall see fit, of two additional sections, viz., a national bank section and a state bank section. In this connection it is provided that any member may become a member of any one of the established sections and of not more than one. It is also provided that sections shall be under the control of the executive council, that the executive council as heretofore may make reasonable financial provisions for the needs of the sections and shall also control the disbursement of any funds so provided.

Seventh. The draft also makes provision for the introduction of original resolutions under the proper order in the proceedings of the convention, without reference for approval or disapproval of the executive council. This is supplemental to the ordinary rule of submitting such resolutions to the executive council for approval or disapproval. This provision is introduced under the restrictions of "the question of consideration" and it is provided that when a resolution is offered under the appropriate order the presiding officer shall without debate submit the following question to the convention: "Shall the resolution be considered by the convention?" A vote is immediately taken and if the question is determined in the affirmative, the resolution will be in regular order, otherwise the convention will pass to the next matter of business. The further provision as now contained that proceedings under this section shall not apply to amendments to the constitution, still remains.

The by-laws as proposed fix dues for associate members, clearing house members, chapters of the Banking Institute and secretaries of state bankers associations.

The fourth and all subsequent articles of the present by-laws are stricken out and new by-laws are inserted.

The fourth by-law as now proposed provides for the election of members of the executive council.

In states having less than one hundred members a group system is provided and the groups constructed for the purpose of the election of members of the executive council.

The new fifth by-law provides for the election of state vice-presidents and members of the nominating committee.

The proposed sixth by-law confirms sections now existing and authorizes the creation under the constitutional provision of a national bank section and a state bank section, and provides that they may be established by the executive council. This by-law also provides that the salaries, compensations of secretaries and employees of sections shall be fixed by the executive council, and such officers and employees shall be subject to the direction of the general secretary and the executive council.

There are many omissions in the present constitution, some important and others of no great moment, which still, however, need attention to avoid conflicts in emergency. A few may be cited to illustrate.

There is no adequate provision for the organization of the annual convention. There is no provision made for the establishment of the office of president and there is nowhere a statement of the duties of the president. There is no provision fixing his term of office or providing for the time of his assuming his official duties. The same things are true in all respects as to the office of vice-president, in consequence of which there is no provision for his becoming president in the event of the death, resignation or disability of the president. All these things may be supplied by inference, and in the history of the association the ordinary and usual powers and duties have been imputed to these officers; but if at any time a conflict arose, the present conditions would be found exceedingly embarrassing. All other officers actively engaged in the administration of the affairs of the association are officers of the executive council, with duties specified, covering the ordinary and usual duties of officers of the general convention. This condition, while unusual and even extraordinary perhaps, has much merit and it was not deemed wise to make any change in this respect.

In the performance of its duties the committee has given careful consideration to the widest views that may be entertained by any portion of the membership. The committee is thoroughly impressed with the impossibility that an annual meeting of membership should be a deliberate body. The great numbers assembled, the lack of information as to any subject that may be presented, the lack of time to properly elucidate any subject under discussion, the inclination to hurriedly dispose of business, the continuing distractions of entertainment and sight-seeing, and the prejudices, ambitions and disappointments incident to the conduct of a great body, all unite to minimize the value of such an assembly for deliberative work; and again, under the most favorable circumstances, there are never assembled in convention more than one third of the membership and consequently any legislation is the legislation of a small minority of the general body.

These conditions give countenance to the suggestions made by some that a deliberative assembly composed of representatives apportioned among the various states and elected by the state associations should be created. Such a body, if not too large, might be eminently fitted and could take ample time for the consideration of those important matters which now by no possibility can be given proper consideration in the general convention, and are impossible even of proper consideration in the small body of the executive council. The advantages to be gained from such a body would be, first, fair representation at all times of all sections of the country, assuming that the membership of such a congress would faithfully attend its stated meetings.

On the other hand the present convention when located in the Far West is almost exclusively a western body. When located in the Middle West is entirely dominated by the great attendance from that section, and if held in the East will have a vast majority of those in attendance from that section, and any legislation will follow the sentiment of the section, instead of the country. These features of consideration, equitable representation, and the avoidance of the preponderance of sentiment of any locality, if possible to be put in effect, would be of incalculable value, but on the other hand the plan would deprive the general membership of a sense of participation in the affairs of the organization, would destroy the great benefits arising from the mutual contact now insured under the present system in the convention, and would create sentiment so prejudicial to the interests of the association as to probably result in a practical disintegration of the association.

While the committee has given this much thought and realizes the great advantages that might be gained by a representative deliberative body, it feels that the objections are of so grave a character as to preclude the possibility, at least for the present, of an organization of the association on any such plan. The committee has, however, in its proposed draft endeavored to establish something of the good that might follow from such an organization. Under the proposed plan, the executive council will be a representative body in which every state will have an equitable representation. The present system of keeping the control of the membership of the executive council within the executive council and within the powers of a nominating committee is reversed, and the states are the units and send their representatives to this body, the system of representation being similar to that of the house of representatives at Washington. This thought of making the council a representative body precludes the possibility of the retention of a membership without a constituency, and therefore those who have heretofore had membership in the council by compliment are necessarily in large degree omitted from that membership.

In view of the fact that the executive council is the only body with legislative power which is representative of the entire membership without regard to locality or otherwise, the executive council should be exclusively a body

Banking news from Minneapolis—St. Paul financial center, and surrounding States, compiled by J. Edwards Smith

Change in the method of selling St. Paul improvement bonds is suggested by C. O. Kalman of the First National and the Northern Trust Company that he expects will save the city $7,300 interest, on $290,000 paving bonds. The plan is to make the bonds fall due April 1,1914, and then to redeem as many as the assessments paid in by that time will allow, issuing refunding bonds for the remainder. Under the first method the issues would have to run for three years. Surety of interest by investors is one object that led the houses to make the proposal, since payment of assessments before they are due, and consequent loss to the city of interest, leaves no guaranty to investors of their interest, except such provision as might be made from time to time by the city from amounts put in the budget for that purpose.

Membership of Minnesota Association 1,000

The Farmers State Bank of Fertile, Minn., will have the distinction of bearing the number 1,000 in the Minnesota Bankers Association, for the membership has increased by forty-one so far in 1913 and the total number has reached the round figure to which the association has been looking forward for five years. The Security State Bank of Middle River, Minn., is No. 999. Minnesota has 797 state banks, 273 national banks, 10 savings banks and 5 trust companies, or 1,085 financial institutions in all that are eligible for membership in the state association, and the total has been so closely assimilated that there are now only 85 not included in the association. Secretary George H. Richards of the association reports applications for membership still coming.

Plenty of Banks for Charlson, N. D.

New banks are coming thick for Charlson, N. D., and there appears to be confusion over the new ones. Two sets of persons have decided to open banks here and claim the same name.

A notice was recently filed with the register of deeds that A. I. Volkman, E. F. Volkman, and B. H. Edminsted of Fessenden had obtained a charter for the First State Bank of Charlson. An application had been filed by Messrs. Livedahl and Everson of Ray and Charlson and Benson of Charlson for a new bank with the same name. Charlson has had one bank for years and there may be an opening for a second because of the rapid development of the country, but there is said to be scarcely sufficient business for three and the promoters of the new bank will probably get together and arrange things in some satisfactory manner.

Boy in Charge of Bank

A fourteen year old boy was found in charge of the Bank of Capa, N. D., when the bank examiner took charge. The father, J. J. Glock, the cashier, had gone. The stockholders of the bank are the same as those of the Fort Pierre State Bank, already closed. As a result of the closing of the Fort Pierre bank 23 per cent reserve for the Capa Bank deposited there is said not to be available. John Hays, president of both banks, left for the Twin Cities and has not been heard from. It is said forged paper was discovered in connection with the closing of the Fort Pierre Bank.

Minneapolis Clearings

Bank clearings in Minneapolis for the first four months are $64,768,282 more than for 1912. Clearings were $394,525,372 up to May 1, 1913.

Harry A. Berg has been named manager for the Remedial Loan Association of Duluth, anti-loan shark. The offices will be in the First National Bank building. The offices of the discontinued Security Mortgage Loan Company will be taken over. Mr. Berg was manager.

J. P. Rotert, twenty years in the banking business at St. Paul, for two years with the state banking department, has been named bank examiner to succeed W. W. Churchill, who resigned to go with the Union National, Rochester, Minn.

"Everything in agriculture and commerce and industry in the country tributary to Minneapolis on the south indicates activity and prosperity and points to a good business year," said S. G. Lutz, traffic director for the Minneapolis and St. Louis road.

The Randolph state of Randolph, Minn., has been incorporated at $10,000. Among the incorporators is T. L. Beiseker, Fessenden, N. D. The State of Eagle Lake, Minn., has been chartered with $10,000 capital and $2,000 surplus. W. D. Willard of Mankato is president and Oscar L. Johnson is cashier.

Jarvis Hunt of Chicago has been chosen to draw plans for the Merchants National, St. Paul. This building is to be sixteen to twenty stories and ready in the fall of 1914. The bank at Fourth and Robert streets will be torn down and the bank meanwhile will be at Fifth and Jackson streets. The site is considered

By C. C. Burford

"The big thing in the month of May in Illinois is corn-planting," says an Illinois newspaper which tells in one sentence the real interest of our bankers and farmers just now. With a late start in oats sowing the farmers naturally are late with corn planting but they are working hard to make up for this lost time.

With an exceptionally wet period in early April being followed by very dry weather in later April and early May, the ground has been very hard and farmers report plowing to be difficult. Showers and a few good rains have relieved this difficulty but more rains are needed. Complaint has been made of the drying out of the top of the ground which is not the best condition for the sprouting of the oats crop. Pastures have been good, as a rule, but more general rains will be needed to keep them good. The warm, dry weather has made the farm work very hard upon horses and upon men as well.

Business during the past week has been much better than during April and late March. Banks have been "rushed" from the first day of May on to the present date and general business conditions have improved. Building and repair lines are very active and labor is fully employed. Improvement is especially noted in street paving and other civic work and there is a marked tendency toward making home life in the smaller cities, villages and upon the farms more comfortable and enjoyable. In this latter phase of the subject the automobile is taking a prominent part and it, as nothing else, is making people more content with rural life.

Much has been said, of course, against the automobile as an extravagance but suffice it to say that the student of present-day problems who has carefully observed conditions of life upon farms in Illinois and in Indiana, Iowa and all similar states cannot help feeling that the automobile is doing much to keep the rural youth away from the large cities and to make them more willing to remain "at home." The problem of the high cost of living and the back-to-the-soil movement will both be partially solved at least when the average rural youth is content to live upon the farm and in the smaller towns.

New Banks in Illinois

The Monee State Bank of Monee, near Joliet, has been given a permit to open for business by the state auditor. The capital will be $25,000 and the incorporators are Edo R. Freese. William Plagge, A. F. Schwieson, Edward J. Conley, and Carl Fehland.

State Auditor Brady has issued a permit for the organization of the State Bank of Minden, Washington county, with capital of $25,000. F. E. Williams, O. C. Vulbrock, H. H. Collmeyer, H. F. Vulbrock, and August Vogt are given the permit.

Industrial Notes of the State

The Peoria, Canton, and Galesburg Railroad Company has been given a license to incorporate with capital of $2,000,000. The road will be constructed from Peoria to Galesburg.

The Central Illinois Light Company, with capital of $7,500,000, has purchased the Peoria Gas and Electric Company, a $2,500,000 corporation, and nineteen other electric light and power plants in towns in the Peoria territory.

Springfield reports an unusual large amount of building this season and contractors there are especially busy.

The Illinois Traction System, the McKinley syndicate, has purchased the control of the People's Traction Company's line from Galesburg to Abingdon. The McKinley interests now own 1375 shares out of a total of 1500 shares. W. H. Carnahan of Champaign is the president of the reorganized company. Besides owning the street car lines in Galesburg the McKinley syndicate owns all of the interurban lines out of that city except the one to Rock Island.

A projected electric line from Rochelle to Amboy is meeting with favor from people of those localities. Northern Illinois is rapidly becoming a network of electric interurban lines.

DO NOT FAVOR McADOO'S PLAN

The proposal of Secretary McAdoo to charge 2 per cent interest on government moneys deposited in banks is not meeting with general favor among the bankers.

James B. Forgan, president of the First National Bank of Chicago, in a recent interview discussing government deposits, said that the restrictions upon the use of the money are such as to make them of slight value to the bank, even without paying interest on them. It is a great expense to a bank to be a United States depository, he said, and the regulations are so extensive as to make it a matter of little preference to the bank whether or not they receive the government money. Cashing of pension checks by the thousands every month and attending to the many other services that it is necessary to perform in order to have the government deposits, he said, cost the bank almost as much as the bank makes out of it.

ELGIN BANK INCREASES SURPLUS

Directors of the Home Trust and Savings of Elgin, Ill., have voted to increase the bank's surplus from $50,000 to $60,000, and declared a semiannual dividend of 5 per cent. The last dividend paid was 4 per cent.

On May 13th the annual meeting of the stockholders for the election of a board of directors will be held. Later the directors will elect officers for the year.

CANTON BANK INCREASES SURPLUS

First National of Canton, Ill., has voted to increase its surplus account to $125,000 by transferring $25,000 from undivided profits, leaving that fund at $10,000. The bank has capital stock of $100,000.

MILWAUKEE NEWS LETTER BY CHALMER B. TRAVER WISCONSIN

The Merchants and Manufacturers Association of Milwaukee took a decided stand on the currency reform problem this week when a specially appointed committee of the association issued letters to the entire membership of 1,100 Milwaukee business men asking their united effort toward securing a better currency system. Members were urged to write to President Wilson, Carter Glass of the house committee on currency and banking, and the Wisconsin senators and representatives asking speedy action with a view to the enactment of a new law at the present session of congress.

The letter states that scattering the bank reserves among 27,000 institutions makes the reserve defective; that the system fails to provide a rediscount market for commercial paper; fails to supply elasticity to the currency supply; unduly centralizes the country's money and credit power in New York; and hampers foreign trade by failing to provide adequate means of its financing. The statement reads, in part:

"The one cloud which hangs over the present era of prosperity consists of the weak currency system which afflicts the country. The enactment of a sound currency and banking system concerns the business man even more than the banker. Reform of the currency law should not be delayed beyond the present session of congress. This is indicated by the present condition of the money market and the prospect that without change in our banking system the situation may become worse, possibly serious, when the next crop arrives."

The committee consists of prominent Milwaukee lawyers, bankers, and business men: James K. Ilsley, Walter S. Paddock, Frank M. Hoyt, William A. Scott, Charles Graf, Fred T. Goll, William Bigelow, E. H. Bottum, William M. Post, and William George Bruce.

Petit not Opposed to McAdoo Order

President L. J. Petit of the Wisconsin National sees nothing unreasonable in the order of Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo for the payment of 2 per cent interest by national banks on government deposits.

"The banks pay interest on other deposits," said Mr. Petit; "I see no reason why they should not pay interest on the government deposits. This is a new departure, never having been tried before. It has been considered as a mere convenience to the government to have the funds in national banks. These deposits were secured by government bonds."

Savings Campaigns Inaugurated

Several Milwaukee banks are now following the stork into the homes of newly arrived babies. The admiring parents are courteously but impressively advised of efficacy of a bank account in smoothing the later life of the rosy mite under consideration and told how 5 cents a day saved, at 3 per cent interest, will mount to $491.46 when the "baby" reaches the age of 21.

"Compound interest has made more millions than speculation," says one banker. "One cheap cigar forgone by a child's father each day gives the grown-up son or daughter a competence with which to start life. A dollar saved each day is a fortune in twenty years —$9,829.25. People acquire good habits as easy as bad ones. If we succeed in inculcating the habit of thrift upon the children we not only give them a competency when they become of age but we will have given them what is more, character, industry and thrift. The child will soon see by its growing pass book how easy it is to accumulate by regular saving, even though the individual amounts be small."

Wisconsin Notes

Oliver Clyde Fuller, Milwaukee; E. M. Wing, LaCross, and F. J. Carr, Hudson, constitute the delegation from the Wisconsin Bankers Association at the executive council of the Executive Bankers Association, now in session at Scarboro, N. Y.

Currency Plan Making All Banks State Institutions

G. R. De Saussere replies to the Pujo letter from J. P. Morgan & Co., and suggests a law ending national banking and abolishing the comptroller's office. Sets forth his views in an open letter

Vice-President G. R. DeSaussure of the Barnett National of Jacksonville, Fla., has written an open letter to J. P. Morgan & Co., New York, replying to the now famous Pujo letter sent out by that firm. Mr. DeSaussure sets forth a comprehensive new plan which would end national banking in favor of state banking, and relieve the country of the comptroller's office entirely. The letter follows:

"Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Company, New York: Your letter to Chairman Pujo of the banking and currency committee of the house of representatives is a masterly statement of facts and of your own position, and will do good. The rigidity of our currency and the concentration of funds in New York are the direct results of a defective system and clearly not due to the efforts of any set of men or corporations. Your firm and all others who are called upon to finance the great undertakings of to-day have taken advantage of the instrumentalities and conditions as they exist, and endeavored to develop the resources of the nation on the broadest lines. To furnish the capital for the full accomplishment of the commercial and industrial undertakings of the future necessitates the establishment of a currency system which will result in a sound, uniform and elastic paper issue, the most economic use of the specie of the nation, and the ensuring of such popular confidence as will bring out for investment the greatest amount of capital. Your firm is better qualified, through your intimate knowledge of world conditions, than any other in the United States to decide what system is best for this nation and to point out the weak spots of any proposed system; therefore, I am taking the liberty of submitting for your consideration some views which I have for some time held. I believe that it will be politically impossible to get the congress of the United States to agree to any sound and scientific system of banks of issue and that, therefore, we should seek a compromise measure which will place the government in full control of the bank reserves with such bank representation in the management as will prevent the system becoming a political machine. I propose that the specie held by the U. S. treasury as security for certificates and greenbacks be all turned over to a department of government to be known as the department of issue and redemption, and used as a basis for a note issue, the department of issue and redemption to have subdepartments in every state, territory and possession of the United States. The subdepartments shall receive deposits from and do business with the United States treasury department, the banks of the United States and such foreign banks or bankers as the department of issue and redemption may find necessary to use, and with no other corporation, firm or individual in the United States. The subdepartments shall have the power to discount commercial paper for the banks doing business with them under proper restrictions, regulations and limitations. All treasury notes, gold certificates and silver certificates to be gradually retired pari-passu with the issue of United States notes to be secured as follows:

Fifty per cent by specie held by the department of issue and redemption.

Fifty per cent by commercial paper bought by the department of issue and redemption from the banks.

The national bank notes should be retired as rapidly as the articles of incorporation of the banks expire.

The government should issue to all national banks, as their articles of incorporation expire, United States bonds, bearing such a rate of interest as will sell the bonds at par, in lieu of bonds deposited to secure circulation. You will probably agree with me that the utilization of the specie now held in trust for certificates as I propose will be more economical and better than using it as at present. If the note issue I propose is practical from a business and political standpoint it certainly appears to be sound, uniform and elastic. The

St. Louis and Southwest Banking Letter

By R. L. ROBINSON

The gain in bank clearings for the month of April over those of the corresponding month last year was 3 per cent and the gain is slightly below the recent monthly average. During the past week the bank clearings have been larger than those of the corresponding period last year, while the demand for money was quite fair, with rates firm at 5½ to 6 per cent on call and time loans. Commercial paper was discounted mainly at 6 per cent.

Bank Teller Gets Bail

Harry C. Baseler, paying teller of the Third National, who confessed last Friday to defalcations in the last six years totaling $15,000, on Tuesday was released on $7,500 bail. Baseler had been in the service of the bank sixteen years and was the principal agent in the arrest of Ramon Llano when the latter recently tried to change at the Third National a $10,000 bill stolen from a bank in Havana, Cuba. He says that the confession has removed a great weight from his mind, that he had never speculated but had given thousands of dollars in sums ranging from $5 to $100 to borrowers because he was known as a good fellow. A five-year term in the penitentiary in Leavenworth is the minimum penalty for the offense —that of embezzlement—but after that he intends to live down the affair as best he can. His wife declares she will stand by him until after he has served his term, if he is sent to the penitentiary.

New Plan of Aid in Panics

St. Louis bankers say they will find little to interest them in the United States government deposits after the exaction of 2 per cent becomes effective June 1st. One banker figures the exaction of interest would result in a net loss to his bank on the government deposits. He shows a monthly balance sheet, which, he states, would result to his bank on a government deposit of $100, and figures very carefully the exchange which the items in which the government is a party, which passed through his bank during April, would have earned had they been banked in some New York or Chicago depository or in some subtreasury elsewhere, so as to get the maximum possible advantage of the exchange rates. He finds his bank could have earned $100.89 in this way. While his bank is a government depository it is obliged to accept and pay these items sent in by country correspondent banks. At present there are only five government depositories in St. Louis. These, with the amount of government deposits in each at the last call for a statement, April 4th, were as follows: State National, $171,919.57; Merchants-Laclede National, $164,949.34; National Bank of Commerce, $150,737.35; Mercantile National, $113,552.98; Merchants-American, $1,000. "The general public is inclined to believe the banks can easily pay the required interest and still make money," said A. O. Wilson, vice-president of the State National. "They know the banks pay such interest on their ordinary certificates of deposit. The government's deposit is different, however, in that the government requires a deposit of high-grade bonds to secure its deposit. Such bonds always draw low rates of interest." Several bankers said government deposits might prove of advantage in times of financial stringency and approved the determination of treasury officials to enlarge the government deposits.

Continental Trust Formed

The Continental Trust Company in St. Louis was incorporated Monday with a capital stock of $100,000, one-half paid in. All the stockholders named in the articles, except Henry T. Ferriss, attorney for the corporation, are bankers of southeast Missouri, as follows: H. D. Evans, Bonne Terre; R. B. Jones, De Soto; N. R. Donnell, Herculaneum and J. D. DeBuchananne, Herculaneum. Van L. Runyan, formerly assistant cashier in the National Bank of Commerce, will be secretary and treasurer of the company. A special bid is to be made for the business of retailers in the district.

Good Roads Convention

St. Louis has been chosen as the next meeting place of the National Good Roads Federation, November 10th to 15th. At its recent meeting in Birmingham, Ala., United States Senator John H. Bankhead of Alabama was elected presidet; Bell M. Porter of Clifton, Ariz., E. J. Watson, Columbia, S. C., and John W. O'Neil, Birmingham, vice-presidents; J. Asa Rountree, Birmingham, secretary; Judge W. I. Grubb, Birmingham, treasurer, and Thomas L. Cannon, St. Louis, managing director. The convention is expected to be one of the largest meetings of its kind ever held in St. Louis.

Insurance Company Starts

The first Missouri fire insurance company organized since the foreign concerns suspended business is the St. Joseph Fire Insurance Company of St. Joseph.

It is to be capitalized at $400,000. Each $100 share will be sold for $250, in order to create a surplus, which is required by law. The sale of stock upon this basis would yield $1,000,000. Under the law, only 10 per cent can be retained for organization and promotion expenses, which would give a surplus of not less than $500,000. The directors of the St. Joseph company are John Reilly, Joseph A. Corby, John Holland, F. A. Moore, C. D. Morris, A. J. Hitt, E. Black, Jacob Geiger, B. Raleigh Martin, Edward Schroerr, all of St. Joseph, and Thomas H. Cress of Chicago. Supt. Revelle is of the opinion that if the suspension of the foreign concerns is of long duration that a number of big Missouri fire insurance companies will be organized. The state authorities are encouraging in every way possible the organization of Missouri companies. They say that companies organized now will have but very little expense either in selling their stock or getting business. Numerous letters from persons contemplating the organization of reciprocal and mutual companies have been received at the insurance department.

Plan Trip to Panama

A special train has been chartered by the members of the Texas Bankers Association who will attend the convention at Galveston during the week of May 10th. On May 14th this train will leave Galveston for New Orleans containing those bankers who will take a special trip to the Panama Canal. Plans are being made for making this trip one of the most enjoyable and interesting of any in the history of the Texas Bankers Association.

State Banking Law Construed

The attorney-general's department of Texas holds that the business done by a title guaranty company, that is, the guaranteeing of the titles to lands, is an insurance business and that companies chartered for that purpose must come under the jurisdiction and supervision of the state department of insurance and banking and subscribe to and follow the insurance laws of the state, in so far as the same are applicable. The attorney-general's department also rules that an interest bearing certificate of deposit of a bank is securities within the meaning of the law that requires fidelity and surety companies to make a deposit of securities in the state treasury as a requisite to do business in Texas. The question came up through a tender of a certificate of deposit made by the Western Casualty and Guaranty Insurance Company of Putnam City, Okla., which tendered as securities an interest bearing certificate of deposit of $60,000 from a Dallas bank. Before accepting it Commissioner Gill wanted an opinion from the attorney-general's department.

Wreck Bank Building

The building of the Peoples Bank of Westville, Okla., was wrecked and damaged to the amount of $3,000 Monday morning when yeggman attempted to rob the bank. The entire front of the building was blown out and hurled across the street, the plaster on the walls ripped off, cashier's fixtures wrecked, an adding machine stripped of its keys and a four-foot hole blown through the floor. The outer door of the safe was blown off, but the robbers failed to gain access to the strong box. It is presumed they became frightened after the first shot and fled.

BANKERS' INTEREST IN AGRICULTURE AND GOOD ROADS

The interest manifested by the banking fraternity in agriculture and good roads has been charged by some misinformed individuals as being actuated by selfish motives.

While the adoption of more scientific methods of agriculture, vocational education and the possesion of a system of highways consistent with Twentieth Century progress and development will result beneficially to the banker through increased prosperity of the people, the bankers are not the only class who will benefit by the attainment of these things; all classes will be the gainers thereby.

The interest of banking in these subjects is born of a desire to improve the general condition of the people—to make them more prosperous, happy and contented.

If improved scientific methods of agriculture are used, the farmer will be enabled to raise better and larger crops, and if the roads over which he hauls his produce to market are in good condition, the expense to him is reduced considerably, all of which is reflected in a saving to the consuming public. So that, instead of the banker being the sole beneficiary, all classes come in for their share.

Unfortunately there exists a class of people who never can see good in anything. They belong to the pessimistic tribe who "see only the hole in the doughnut." All of their efforts are confined to criticism and they are quick to discover and point out obstacles in the path of reform. They are laboring under the hallucination that the banker is a hard-hearted individual intent only on his own aggrandizement and absolutely indifferent toward the interests of the rest of the people of the world. Small wonder, then, that they ascribe the banker's efforts in behalf of improved agriculture and better highways to other than altruistic purposes.

The banker's interest in these subjects is of a purely unselfish character. We imagine that the world would be able to get along very nicely without the disgruntled class of "knockers."

HOW HE LOST TRUST ESTATE

Every little while the courts furnish an item of news for the dailies which illustrates the advantages of corporate trusteeship in a most emphatic manner. In New York this week a most illustrative case came to light. It was the legal confession of an octogenarian lawyer, made just before his death three months before. He had managed to conceal his default in trusteeship for $140,000 for thirty years. Based on the confession, which according to documents submitted to the supreme court was made more than a month before he died, Mrs. Alice Mansfield of London, daughter of Countess Alice Thorn de Ferrussac, obtained a judgment for the amount named against Mead's estate. The aged lawyer had acted since 1884 as trustee for Mrs. Mansfield and her sister and two brothers.

Mead in his confession said he had hoped to the last that he "might some day be able to earn the entire principal of the fund. That I have been unsuccessful is unfortunate, but it can be ascribed to nothing else at most than errors of judgment."

Had the testator wisely chosen a corporate (trust company) trustee the estate probably would have doubled or more in value. At all events the principal would now be intact. Attorney Mead may not have been intentionally dishonest but he lacked capacity at first and was at no time strong enough morally to surrender his trust with whatever balance he had in hand. This case is as good as any in recent times to illustrate the unwisdom of naming an individual trustee to administer an estate.

THE NECESSITY FOR TRAINED MEN

The necessity for experts in the various vocations of life is becoming more and more apparent in these days of keen competition. The man who can do what thousands of other people can do isn't in very great demand, but he who is a specialist in some particular line is much sought after.
